Physical Features, &c.—This state on the N. & W. is hilly & broken, but becomes gradually level towards the sea. The islands in Narragansett bay are distinguished by their pleasing & diversified scenery & fertile soil. The climate is healthy, particularly on the islands, where the sea breezes have the effect not only of mitigating the heat in summer, but moderating the cold in winter, & rendering the climate truly delightful. The rivers, though not large, furnish many fine mill seats, which are extensively used for manufacturing purposes. The principal are Pawtucket, Providence, Pawtuxet, Pawcatuck, & Wood rivers. Narragansett bay is a fine body of water, & contains a number of beautiful & fertile islands. Among them is Rhode Island, which gives name to the state. Iron ore & anthracite coal are found to some extent; marble, limestone, freestone, and other building stone.

There were in this state in 1850, 356,487 acres of land improved, & 197,451 of unimproved land in farms; cash value of farms $17,070,892, & the value of implements & machinery $497,201. Live Stock.—Horses, 6,168; milch cows, 28,698; working oxen, 8,189; other cattle, 9,375; sheep, 44,296; swine, 19,-509; value of live stock, $1,532,637.

Catholic, 2 Swedenborgian, 4 Union, 4 Unitarian, 4 Universalist, & 2 other sects, the whole having 228 churches. Total value of church property, $1,254,400.

The government consists of a governor, a senate, & house of representatives. The governor & lieutenant-governor are appointed annually by the people. The Senate consists of the lieutenant-governor & one member from each town or city in the state. The House of Representatives consists of 69 members, and cannot exceed 72. The judicial power is vested in a supreme court & such inferior courts as the General Assembly shall from time to time establish. Every person who is a citizen of the United States, of the age of 21 years, who has resided in the state one year, & in the county six months in which he offers his vote, is a legal voter under the following regulations:—1st. All citizens, native or naturalized, without regard to color, who are possessed of a freehold of $134, or renting for $7 per annum. 2d. All native citizens, without regard to color, who either pay a property tax of one dollar or a voluntary registry tax of one dollar. A residence at any garrison or naval station in the state does not give a legal residence.

Rhode Island was first settled by Roger Williams in 1636. It was the last of the old 13 states that adopted the constitution of the United States, which it did in May 20th, 1790, by a majority of two votes.

RHODEN, a town of Central Germany, Princip. Waldeck, 24 m. W.N.W. Cassel. Pop. 1,839.

RHODE RIVER, p. o., Anne Arundel co., Md.

RHODES, an island of Asiatic Turkey, in the Mediterranean, off the S.W. coast of Asia Minor, between lat. 35° 53′ & 36° 28′ N., & lon. 27° 40′ & 28° 12′ E. Length 46 miles, greatest breadth 18 miles. Area, 120 sq. miles. Pop. estimated at 30,000, of whom about 8,000 are Turks, 3,000 Jews, & the remainder Greeks, with a few Franks. It is traversed by a mountain chain, covered with forests, which have long supplied good timber for ship-building. Its valleys are well watered, & of high fertility. Principal exports—wax, honey, figs, oranges, lemons, pomegranates, wine, cantara bark, onions, & manufactured silk: in addition to which, sponge, timber, shoes, & red-leather are among its products. Principal imports—colonial produce, American cotton, German woollens, iron, nails, shot, tin, paper, soap, salt-fish, cordage, glass, and earthenwares, hardware & cutlery, & French fancy articles, principally by way of Smyrna & Syra, and coals direct from England, for the supply of the Mediterranean steam-packets, & horses, mules, cattle, sheep, poultry, hides, skins, wool, carpets, & corn, from the opposite coast of Asia Minor. Rhodes is governed by a pasha, immediately subordinate to the capitan pasha, and whose jurisdiction extends over the Turkish Sporades, & the naval station Marmorice.

RHODES, a strongly-fortified city & seaport of Asiatic Turkey, cap. of the island Rhodes, at its N.E. extremity, 13 m. S.E. the nearest promontory of Asia Minor. Lat. of mole 36° 26′ 9″ N., lon. 28° 13′ E. Pop. about 15,000, of whom 8,000 are Turks, & 3,000 Jews. It is enclosed by walls, built by the knights of St. John, & on the land side it is strengthened by ravelins & a moat. On the N.E. side two piers project to enclose a harbor, having in its centre from 16 to 18 feet water, & on its N. side is another port of nearly equal depth. The city has 9 large, & 24 small mosques, a Jews' quarter, & several synagogues, the ancient hospital of the knights, now used as a barrack, an armory, & upwards of 10,000 houses, many of which are untenanted. Outside of the walls, on the N., are the pasha's palace, the dockyard, & a Roman Catholic quarter, with a chapel and school. S. of the city are the Greek suburbs, with about 3,000 inhabs., and 9 or 10 churches. On the adjacent heights are many scattered villas. Rhodes has 3 Mohammedan colleges, a Turkish library of 1,000 volumes, various Turkish & Greek schools, & some brisk manufs. of red leather, & shoes for exportation. It is the residence of a Greek consul, & French vice-consul, & several vice-consular agents. In antiquity it was one of the celebrated of Greek cities, & it boasted of the famous brazen Colossus—one of the seven wonders of the world—which stood at the entrance of its harbor. After the destruction of its republic, it belonged successively to the Romans, the Greek emperors, the Genoese, & the knights of St. John of Jerusalem; which last held it from 1308 to 1522, when, after a heroic resistance, it capitulated to the Turks under Solymon the Magnificent.

RHONE, a dep. of France, in the S.E., formed of the old prov. Lyonnais, cap. Lyon, bounded E. by the Rhone & Saône, & the deps. Ain & Isere, S. & W. by the dep. Loire, & N. by Saône-et-Loire. Area, 1,047 sq. m. Pop. 1851, 574,745. It is partly covered by the mountains which unite the Vosges & the Cevennes, & contains the summits Mont d'Or & Pilat. Soil rich in mines of copper, iron, & coal. It produces excellent wine, the most esteemed of which is that of Côte-Rotie, Condrieux, & Beaujolais. The goat milk cheese of Mont d'Or is in high repute. This is one of the most industrious deps. of France. The silks of Lyon are sent to all parts of the world, & an immense quantity of muslins are manufactured at Tarare. The other branches of industry comprise cotton & linen spinning and weaving, hat making, glass & paper making. The railroad from Lyon to St. Etienne was one of the first constructed in France. The dep. is divided into the arronds. Lyon & Villefranche.

RHONE (BOUCHES DU). [Bouches-du-Rhone.]

RHONE, Rhodanus, an important river of Europe, rises in Switzerland, in the Rhone Glacier, on the W. of Mount St. Gothard, between mountains Furka and Grimsel, at an elevation of 5,500 feet, flows S.W. past Brieg & Sion to Martigny, where it turns sharply to the N.W., & enters the lake of Geneva near its S.E. extremity. At Geneva, it leaves the S.W. part of the lake. It enters France through the Jura mountains, & flows S. past Seyssel, where it becomes navigable: its course is now tortuously W. to Lyon, where it receives the Saône, & it then flows nearly due S. past St. Genis, where its bed is 640 feet above the sea, Vienne, Tournon, Valence, Avignon, Beaucaire, to Arles, where it separates into several branches, forming a delta called the Ile de la Camargue, & enters the Gulf of Lion, Mediterranean. Principal affls., on right, the Ain, Saône, Adeche, & Gard, on left, the Isere, Drome, & Durance. Its fall is much greater than that of the Rhine, & consequently its navigation is difficult and dangerous. It is connected with the Loire by means of the Saône & the canal du Centre; the canal of Burgundy unites it to the Yonne & Seine, & that of the Rhone & Rhine connects it with the Rhine. Distance from source to mouth 285 m., following windings 645 m., extent of basin 30,000 sq. m. The Rhone formerly disappeared at a place called the Perte du Rhone, on the frontier of France, but the rock which covered it has been removed.

It is beautifully located on the W. side of the r., between 50 & 60 m. above City Point, & 150 m. above the mouth of the r. It is directly opposite to Manchester, to which it is connected by 2 bridges. The situation is healthy & highly picturesque. Shockoe & Richmond hills stand opposite to each other, & Shockoe creek, an active stream, passes between them; & the city is spread over these hills, & along the margin of the creek. The elevations present many picturesque views of the city, of James r., & of the surrounding country. The city is regularly laid out, the streets generally crossing each other at right angles, & well lighted with gas. It covers an area of about three and a half sq. m., which is well built mostly with brick houses, & many have gardens planted with shrubbery attached. In the western division of the city, on an elevated plain, denominated Shockoe Hill, stands the capitol. It has a very commanding situation, in the centre of a public square, of an oblong form, containing about 8 acres, ornamented with shrubbery & laid with gravelled walks. It is a spacious & elegant building, surrounded on 3 sides by a lofty portico of the Ionic order. In the centre of a spacious hall, in the middle of the building, stands a marble statue of Washington. Near it is a marble bust of Lafayette. There is here an elegant monument to the memory of Washington in course of construction. The city hall is situated on Broad street, fronting Capitol Square: it is decorated at each end by 4 Doric columns. On the eastern part of the square is the governor's house. The county court house is situated about 1 mile from the capitol. The state penitentiary is in the W. suburbs; it is 300 feet long & 110 broad, in the form of a hollow square. In the N. suburbs is the almshouse, a spacious building, surrounded by extensive grounds. The medical department of Hampden Sydney College has a fine building of the Egyptian style of architecture. St. Vincent's college, under the control of the Catholic clergy, is situated about a mile E. of the city. Richmond college, 1 m. W. of the city, has 6 professors & 100 students. There are also a county & city jail, an orphan asylum, a theatre, a museum, 5 banks, aggregate cap. $2,114,—, 3 insurance companies, & 3 savings' banks, 2 markets, an armory, a masonic hall, several academies, & a Free Lancasterian school for the use of the poor. There are 23 churches,—4 Baptist, 1 Campbellite, 4 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 2 Jews' synagogues, 1 Lutheran, 4 Methodist, 3 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Universalist, & 1 African. The city is supplied by water, which is elevated by water power & 2 forcing pumps, into 3 reservoirs, containing 1,000,000 gallons each, from which it is distributed over the city. Richmond is well situated for commerce. Four lines of railroad here connect, viz., Richmond, Fred'burg & Potomac, Richmond & Petersburg, the Central railroad of Va., & the Danville railroad: & here terminates the James river and Kanawha canal. Vessels drawing 10 feet of water come to Rockets, about a mile below the centre of the city; & those drawing 15 feet, to Warwick, 3 miles below the city. The falls in James r. are obviated by the canal, & above them it is navigable for boats 220 m. Regular lines of packets connect the city with New York & other places, & it is connected by steamboats to Norfolk. The principal articles of exportation are wheat, flour, & tobacco. The exports amount to about $3,000,000 annually. The tonnage of the port in 1853, was 11,460 tons.

The manufactures of Richmond are also extensive. The falls of the James river afford a water power of unlimited extent. There are here very extensive flouring mills, furnaces, forges, machine shops, nail factories, rolling mills, 4 cotton fac., a paper fac., 40 tobacco factories, &c., employing a capital in 1850 of $1,000,000, & making articles valued at $2,000,000 annually; 14 printing offices, issuing 7 daily, 2 weekly, 1 semi-monthly, 4 monthly, & 1 quarterly publications. Richmond was founded by an act of the legislature of the state in 1742; & the seat of government was removed from Williamsburg to this place in 1780. In 1787, it contained about 300 houses. The canal around the falls of James r., which has added so much to the commercial advantages of Richmond, was completed in 1794. December 26th, 1811, the theatre of Richmond took fire, during an exhibition, when 600 persons were present, of whom 66 white persons and 6 people of color lost their lives. Among the former was George William Smith, Esq., the governor of the state. To commemorate this sad event, an Episcopal, denominated the Monumental Church, has been erected on the spot. It is an octangular building, two sides projecting & forming wings; & it has a monument in front.

RIGA, p-o., Lenawee co., Mich. Pop. of the t. 1850, 208.

RIGA, an important fortified city, and the second commercial port of European Russia, cap. of Livonia, on the Dūna, here crossed in summer by a temporary bridge of boats, 2,400 feet in length, about 7 m. from its mouth, & 25 m. N.E. Mitau. Lat. 56° 57′ N., lon. 24° 6′ 5″ E. Pop. including garrison, 71,228. The town-proper is enclosed, except on the river side, by a double line of fortifications, & has narrow though clean streets; the suburbs are more regularly laid out, but built chiefly of wood. Principal structures, the cathedral, rebuilt in 1547, church of St. Peter, with a tower 440 feet in height, the castle, with a chancery & residence of the general & civil governors; hall of the provinc. states, town-house, exchange, arsenal, and a magnificent column, with a colossal bronze statue of victory, erected in 1817. It has several colleges, a school of navigation, & various other schools, a public library, with 15,000 vols., & numerous scarce MSS., a cabinet of natural history, an observatory, & a society of Lithuanian literature. In 1835 it had 25 manufs. of cotton cloth, & rugs, sugar refineries, tobacco factories, & breweries. Some quays stretch for 1 m. along the river, but the inner harbor does not admit vessels drawing more than 12 to 15 feet water, & ships of larger burden load & unload at Bolder-aa, a small port outside of the bar, at the mouth of the Dūna, where is the custom-house. Its principal merchants are of German descent. Corn used to be the principal article of export, but it is now superseded by flax & flax seed, besides which hemp & linseed, wool, hides, tallow, timber, tobacco, spars, & feathers, are chief exports. It was founded A.D. 1200, & was one of the chief Hanseatic towns.

RIO BRANCO, or PARIMA, a river of Brazil, prov. Pará, rises near the source of the Orinoco, lat. 3° N., lon. 64° W.; runs at first E. to its junction with the Takutu, & thence flows mostly S. S. W. to the Rio Negro, which it joins as its principal affluent by several mouths, 70 m. S. E. Barcellos. Total course 700 m. Principal tributaries, the Itacutu or Takutu, Macajahi, & Catremani. In lat. 1° 45′ N., its navigation is impeded by a series of falls & rapids, formed by ledges of granite rock. The aggregate perpendicular descent of these throughout 7 m. is estimated at 60 feet, and at the largest—the Caruwanma—canoes must be unloaded. Its water are opaque & whitish (whence its name). On it are fort St. Joaquin, & the towns Carmo and Santa Maria Nova.—The upper part of the river San Miguel, Brazil, has the same name.

RIO BRAVO DEL NORTE. [RIO GRANDE.]

RIO CHELLY, New Mexico, a tributary of the Grand r. of Colorado.

RIO COLORADO. [COLORADO RIVER.]

RIO COLORADO CHEQUITO, New Mexico, rises in about lat. 34° 30′, lon. 168° W., & flows through a very mountainous region, a course of about 400 m., & enters the Rio Colorado at about 35° N. lat.

RIO DAS MORTES, a river of Brazil, prov. Matto Grosso, joins the Araguay; course N. & E. 500 m.

RIO-DE-JANEIRO, the metropolitan prov. of Brazil, between lat. 21° 25′ & 23° 20′ S., & lon. 40° 53° & 44° 40′ W., having E. & S. the Atlantic, and landward the provs. San Paulo, Minas Geraes, and Espiritu-Santo. Estimated area, 16,960 sq. m. Pop. exclusive of the cap. 550,000. Surface low along the coast, but the interior is mostly mountainous, consisting of the Serra do Mar, Organ mntns., and their ramifications. Principal river, the Paraiba, which forms a part of the N. frontier. Soil extremely fertile; products comprise sugar, coffee, cacao, cotton, maize, rice, indigo, & fine woods. Capital, Nitheroi. After Rio, the principal towns are Villa-do-Cabo, Cantagallo, St. Joao-de-Praia, & Lorena.

RIO-DE-JANERIO, the capital of the Empire of Brazil, and the most important commercial city of South America, is situated on an elevated tongue of land, on the W. side of a vast bay. Lat. of fort Vilagagnan, 22° 54′ 7″ S., lon. 43° 9′ W. Pop. 170,000, comprising Brazilians 60,000, foreigners 25,000, slaves 85,000. Mean temp. of year 78° .7; winter 68° .5; summer 79°, Fahr. Its port, which is large & deep, is defended by a castle. Rio consists of an old and a new town, the latter of which dates from 1808, & is separated from the former by an open space called the Campo do Honra; it extends on uneven ground, along the side of the bay. Streets generally straight but narrow & ill-paved. Many of the houses are built of granite, & it has handsome squares & monuments. Its general aspect is that of an European city, but it is unfortunately so placed as to be deprived of the benefit of the land breeze, by a range of mountains, & is exposed to suffocating heat, relieved only by the sea breeze in the middle of the day. The city is supplied with water by means of a magnificent aqueduct, which traverses a deep valley 7 miles in length, & has numerous public fountains. The environs of Rio are celebrated for picturesque beauty, and are provided with excellent promenades. The churches, of which there are upwards of 50, have no external elegance, but are mostly richly decorated in the interior. The chief public edifices are the Imperial palace, a plain brick building, the old palace on the shore, used for public offices, the naval & military arsenal, greatly extended in 1843, & a vast public hospital, erec. in 1841. Its educational establishments are the Imperial college of Don Pedro II., the college of St. José, schools of medicine & surgery, military & naval academy, & many public schools. The national library has 80,000 printed vols., & valuable MSS. Rio is the see of a bishop, the residence of a governor, & the seat of an electoral college, which had, in 1844, 256 electors; it has many scientific establishments, a museum of natural history rich in ornithology & mineralogy, a magnificent alcala or theatre, & a fine public botanic garden. From its position, Rio is naturally the great mart of Brazil, & especially of the provs. Mines Geraes, St. Paul & Goyaz, & its advantages are such as to fit it for concentrating the commerce of the globe. Its imports comprise the products of every country; its chief exports are cotton, sugar, coffee, rum, building timber, leather, tallow, gold, diamonds, topazes, ameythysts, & aquamarine. From official documents it appears that in 1843, there were in Rio 4,734 mercantile houses, of which 328 were were French, 95 English, 7 Belgian, & the rest Portuguese.—The bay or inlet of Rio, 17 m. in length, and 11 m. in extreme with, forms one of the noblest harbors in the world. Its entrance, 2 m. S. of the city, is 1½ m. wide between fort Sta. Cruz on the E. & a fort on the sugar loaf rock on the W. The bay contains many small isls., the largest of which is Ilha do Governador, 6 m. in length.

RIO GRANDE, p-o., Gallia co., O.

RIO GRANDE, a river of W. Africa, Senegambia, rises in Futa Jallon, near Laby, lat. 11° 20′ N., lon. 11° W., flows W. & enters the Atlantic by an estuary 10 m. across, between the Nuñez & Casamanza rivers. On it are the towns Kade, Jeba, and Bissao, and opposite its mouth are the Bissagos islands. The whole country between it and the Nuñez is supposed to be a collection of islands divided by its branches, many of which remain unexplored. Its banks are densely wooded, & studded with immense ant hills, the country watered by it is populous, & produces gold ivory, wax, hides, & horses.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Bolivia, S. A., rises by several heads near Cochabamba, flows E. & N., separating the deps. Cochabamba & Santa Cruz from those of Oruro & Sucré, &c., & near lat. 15° 10′ S., receives the Chapare, after which it is called the Mamore. Affls. the Chaolani, Piray, & Yapacani.

RIO GRANDE, a river, New Granada, sec. Isthmo, rises N. W. Panama, about 2 m. from which city it enters the Pacific Ocean. It receives several streams, is navigable for the last 5 miles of its course, & admits the entrance of large vessels at high water. Its head is near the Obispo, an affl. of the Cruces.

RIO GRANDE, a river, Mexico, Queretaro, Guanaxuato, Mechoacan, and Xalisco, enters the Pacific at San Blas, after a N. W. course of 400 miles across the Anahuac table land. It is greatly interrupted by cataracts, and is very rapid. Affls. the Lerma, &c. It traverses a part of the Lake of Chapala.

RIO GRANDE, a river of Mosquitia, C. A., enters the Caribbean Sea, 30 m. N. Pearl Key lagoon, and is said to be navigable for boats for 200 m.

RIO GRANDE, a name of the river Motagua.

RIO GRANDE CITY, p-o., Starr co., Tex.

RIO GRANDE (or RIO BRAVO) DEL NORTE, a river of N. Amer., rises in the mountainous region, lat. 38° 10′ N., lon. 110° W., near the head waters of the Arkansas and the Colorado of the West. Following a generally southern direction, it passes through New Mexico, where its principal affluent is the Rio Chamas from the west, and winds its way in a south direction, dividing in its course, below 31° 45′ N. lat., the United States from the Mexican Republic, to the Gulf of Mexico, into which it enters in 25° 55′ N. lat. Its tributaries below New Mexico are, from the N., the Rio Pecos, and from the S. W., the Conchos, Salado, Alamo, and San Juan. The length of the river in a straight line is about 1,200 miles, but from the meanderings of its lower course, it runs at least 2,000 miles from the region of eternal snows to the almost tropical climate of the Gulf. The elevation of the river above the sea at Albuquerque is about 4,800 feet; at El Paso about 3,800 feet; and at Reynosa, about 300 or 400 miles above its mouth, not more that 170 feet. The fall of the water between Albuquerque & El Paso is from two to three feet in a mile, and below El Paso about one foot in two miles. The fall of the river is seldom used as a motive power, except for some flour mills, which are oftener worked by mules than by water. The principal advantage at present derived from the stream is for agriculture, by a well-managed system of irrigation. As to its navigation in New Mexico, it is doubtful if even canoes could be used, except, perhaps, during May or June, when the river is in its highest stage, from the melting of the snows in the mountains. It is entirely too shallow, & interrupted by too many sand bars, to promise anything for navigation. On the southern portions of the river steamboats may ascend from the Gulf as far as Laredo, a distance of about 700 miles.

RIO GRANDE DO NORTE, a maritime prov. of Brazil, between lat. 4° 2′ & 7° 18′ S., & lon. 35° and 38° 40′ W., having N. & E. the Atlantic, W. the provs. Ceara, & S. Parahiba. Area, 31,230 sq. m. Pop. 110,000. Its name is derived from a river which, after an E. course, enters the Atlantic at Natal. Other rivers are the Serido & Appody. Surface level near the coast, uneven inland. Products the best Brazil wood, cotton, sugar, rice, drugs, salt, & large numbers of cattle. Besides Natal, the cap., it contains the towns Villa Flo, Arez, Anacu, Portalegre, Villa Nova de Princeza, & Villa Nova do Principe. The v. is on the Cocheco railroad, & contains a court house, 4 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Friends, & 1 Methodist,—a bank, 4 woollen fac., with 4,700 spindles, employing 180 persons, several stores, & 600 inhabitants. There are in the t. 4 fulling m., 4 woollen fac., 2 tanneries, 2 grist m., 4 saw m., 20 schools. Pop. 1840, 2,431; 1850, 3,006.

ROCHESTER, p-t., Windsor co., Vt., 43 S.W. Montpelier, 482 W. Surface mountainous & broken; soil much of it fertile. Drained by White r. & a branch, which afford water power. Chartered in 1780. The v., at the centre, is pleasantly situated on the E. bank of White r., & contains a Congregational & a Universalist church, & some mills. There are in the t. 2 fulling m., a grist m., 7 saw m., 13 schools. Pop. 1840, 1,396; 1850, 1,493.

ROCHESTER, p-t., Plymouth co., Mass., 54 S.S.E. Boston, 441 W. Buzzards bay bounds it on the S. Surface uneven; soil moderately fertile. In some parts it is rocky & unfit for cultivation, & in places very fertile. Drained by Mattapoiset & Sipican rivs. The principal v. is called Mattapoiset, situated on an inlet from Buzzard's bay, & contains 4 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Friends, & 1 Universalist,—various mechanic shops, & about 100 dwellings. The princip. business is ship-building & the whale fishery. It has a good harbor, & the largest whale ships come to its wharves. Salt is extensively manufactured here. There are in the t. a forge, an anchor fac., 2 grist m., 5 saw m., 42 schools. Pop. 1840, 3,864; 1850, 3,808.

ROCHESTER, city, port of entry, & cap. Monroe county, N. Y., is situated on both sides of Genesee river, 7 m. S. from its entrance into lake Ontario, and on the New York Central railroad, 252 miles W. of Albany, & 68 m. E. by N. from Buffalo. Lat. 43° 08′ 17″ N., lon. 77° 51′ W. from Greenwich. Pop. 1820, 1,502; 1830, 9,269; 1840, 20,191; 1850, 36,403; & in 1854, 40,000. It contains an area of 4,324 acres, & was incorporated as a village in 1817, & as a city in 1834. The city is laid out with general regularity, having wide & handsome streets, many of which are planted with shade trees. Its site is somewhat uneven, & rests upon a bed of limestone but a few feet below the surface, which is extensively quarried, & much used for building & other purposes. In summer, at low water in the river, the mass of this limestone is exposed, exhibiting for a long distance a solid base of rock. The area occupied by dwellings is very large for the population, the houses for the most part being separate dwellings. The E. & W. parts of the city are connected by 5 bridges. The principal street, called Main street, on the E. side, & Buffalo street, on the W. side, is a very long, broad, & handsome avenue, passing over the central bridge. The stores, & houses generally, are noted for their neat appearance. Brick and stone are the principal building materials within the limits of the fire districts. Several large parks are reserved as public grounds, of which the principal is Washington Square. The Court-house, on Buffalo street, is a large & elegant structure, with handsome granite portico, containing the county & city offices. The Arcade is a handsome marble building, containing the post-office, & is a hall of great resort, with numerous business offices. The Western House of Refuge for juvenile delinquents, a state institution, is a very extensive establishment, about 1¼ m. N. of the centre of the city; the building is a very large edifice of brick, presenting an imposing appearance, & is surrounded by work grounds & farm of several acres. The University of Rochester, established in 1850, has 8 professors, 109 students, & 10,000 volumes in its library. Commencement, 2d Wednesday in July. The Rochester Theological Seminary (Baptist) also established here in 1851–52, 2 professors, 20 students, & 3,000 vols. in library. The Athenæum, a popular institution, has a good library of 5,000 volumes, & annual courses of lectures. There are 5 banks, aggregate capital $930,000, 2 savings' banks, a mutual insurance co., 50 churches,—6 Baptist, 3 Congregational, 1 Covenanters, 5 Episcopal, 2 Friends, 1 Lutheran, 10 Methodist, 10 Presbyterian, 6 Roman Catholic, 3 Universalist, 1 Unitarian, & several others,—a mechanics' literary association, a young men's association, &c.; there are 15 printing offices issuing 3 daily, 3 tri-weekly, 9 weekly, 2 semi-monthly, & 2 monthly publications. The city government is vested in a mayor, recorder, & common council, all of whom are elected annually, & the city is divided into 9 wards, is well paved, & lighted by gas. Water is abundant from wells. The principal city market is a commodious structure, on the W. bank of the r. The city almshouse is in the S. suburbs.

The rapid growth and prosperity of the city have resulted from the natural advantages of great water-power here afforded by the Genesee river. Within the city limits the r. has a total descent of 268 feet, in which are 3 successive perpendicular falls of 96, 20, & 105 feet, & 2 rapids. The first great falls of 96 feet are a little N. of the centre of the city, & before the diversion of the stream above for mechanical purposes, they afforded at high water a very grand appearance. Below the first cataract the r. flows broad & deep for 1½ m. to the second, where it has a perpendicular fall of 20 feet, & thence pursues a noisy & rapid course for about 25 rods to the third & last fall, by which it descends 105 feet. Through the entire distance from the upper to the lower fall it flows through a narrow ravine, over 100 feet deep. The depression of the stream commences considerably above the first falls, & in ½ m. has a fall of 12 feet, easily used for manufacturing purposes. On each side of the river canals have been extensively constructed for the mills. Another power of considerable amount is created by the feeder for the Erie canal, which comes from the r. nearly 2 m. above. The immense water-power is used by various mills & factories, but chiefly by flouring-mills, which are the principal business establishments of the city. In 1850 there were 22 mills, with 100 runs of stone, nearly all of which were employed on flour. An approximate estimate of the amount of flour manufactured annually is 600,000 barrels, or 3,000,000 bushels. To the amount shipped should be added the amount consumed by 40,000 inhabitants, and the large population of the suburbs & vicinity. Other manufactures are extensively prosecuted. There are several iron furnaces, casting principally stoves & agricultural implements, 16 machine shops, 2 plough fac., 5 gun & pistol fac., 2 auger fac., an extensive edge tool fac., 2 brass foundries, a scale fac., a woollen fac., 8 tanneries, 5 breweries, 10 saw m., a plane fac., 4 piano fac., 4 paper fac., a cordage fac., several large boat-yards, last factories, cabinet furniture, &c. Capital employed in manufactures, 1850, $2,564,800; value of manufactured articles, $6,436,086.

Rochester enjoys good facilities for transportation of its imports & exports. The Erie Canal, giving it connection with the E. & W., here crosses the Genesee r. by an aqueduct, 804 feet long, resting upon 11 arches, erected at a cost of $80,000. The Genesee Valley Canal, completed to Dansville, 52 m., affords access to the interior. Though the r. is boatable above the city to Mount Morris, 45 m., it is little used for that purpose. The lines of railroads here centering are, the Central railroad, Rochester & Syracuse railroad, Buffalo & Rochester railroad, Rochester & Lockport & Niagara Falls r. r., & Rochester & Lake Ontario railroads. The Genesee Valley r. r. is in course of construction.

Rochester is the port of entry for Genesee collection district. The river is navigable for steamboats, &c., from Lake Ontario to the landing 2¼ miles below the centre of the city. A line of steamboats from Oswego to Lewistown arrive and depart daily, and a line from Canada tri-weekly. The total tonnage of Genesee district, 1853, was 1,327 tons, all of which was "enrolled & licensed," permanent, & employed in the coasting trade. Mt. Hope Cemetery, in the S. suburbs, is an extensive enclosure of the most beautiful grounds, improved by art, & in which are many tasteful monuments, tablets, &c.

In 1812 there were only 2 wooden frame buildings on the spot, each consisting of a single room; & when, a few years before, a proposal was made in the state legislature to build here a bridge across the Genesee, it was strongly opposed, & a member declared, that it was "a God-forsaken place, inhabited by muskrats, & visited only by straggling trappers."

ROCHESTER, a city, parl. & munic. bor., & river port of England, co. Kent, 28 m. E.S.E. St. Paul's, London, & 7 m. S.E. Gravesend, with which it is connected by r. r. Pop. of parl. bor. 1851, 14,938. It is finely situated on a bend of the Medway, here crossed by a noble bridge of 11 arches, erected in the reign of king John; & with Chatham on the E., & Stroud on the W., it picturesquely surrounds Chatham harbor. Its long, narrow, & winding main street contains many antique houses. The cathedral, mostly constructed by Gundulph, the first bishop after the Conquest, presents in its recently repaired interior one of the finest specimens of Norman & early English architecture; length 383 feet. The pa. church of St. Nicholas is also very ancient. The grammar school, founded in 1542, is supported by the dean & chapter, & has 6 exhibitions to the universities. Revenue of free mathematical school, 650*l.* per annum. Principal charities: St. Catherine's hospital for poor women, founded in 1315; Watt's hospital for the nightly entertainment of 6 poor travellers; Hayward's house of industry. The town hall is a handsome brick edifice, built in 1687. Here are also a custom house, theatre, assembly room, baths, two modern forts, several remains of ancient walls, gateways, & monastic structures, & on a rock rising from the river, majestic ruins of a Norman castle, built by bishop Gundulph. The trade of the city is comprised with that of Chatham. Coal is extensively imported for the supply of the interior of the co., & hops are exported. Vessels of heavy burden come up to the bridge. Market, Friday. It sends 2 mems. to H. of C. The bishopric is, next to Canterbury, the most anc. in England, having been founded by St. Augustine in 604, but it is also the smallest.

ROCKINGHAM, p-t., Windham co., Vt., 93 S. Montpelier, 459 W. Situated on the W. side of Connecticut river. Surface uneven; soil generally productive & well cultivated. Drained by Williams' and Saxton's rivers, which afford water power, & flow into Connecticut river. It contains Bellows falls, in Connecticut river. (See Bellows Falls v.) In 1785, a bridge was erected over the Connecticut, which, until 1796, was the only bridge over that river. Near the falls a great variety of minerals are found. There are 3 villa. in the t.—one at the centre, one at Bellows falls, & one in the S. part, on Saxton's river—each of which contains a church, several manufacturing establishments, &c. There are in the t. 7 fulling m., 4 woollen fac., 2 paper fac., 2 tanneries, a soap stone quarry, 5 grist m., 7 saw m., 17 schools, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper. Pop. 1840, 2,330; 1850, 2,887.

ROCKINGHAM, p-v., capital of Richmond co., N. C., 135 S.W. Raleigh, 409 W. Situated on Hitchcock's cr., 5 m. E. of Pedee r., & contains a court-house, jail, & 200 inhabitants.

ROCKINGHAM, p-o., Scott co, Iowa.

ROCKINGHAM, a market town & pa. of Engl., co. & 22 m. N.N.E. Northampton, in Rockingham forest. Area of pa. 880 ac. Pop. 261. Mkt., Thursday. Here are the remains of a castle, within the court of which is the mansion of Lord Sondes. The forest, formerly of great extent, is now enclosed.

ROCK ISLAND. Situated in the Mississippi r., at the foot of Rock r. rapids, & is 5¼ miles long, and three-fourths of a mile wide. The sides are of perpendicular rock, 20 feet above the highest floods. Fort Armstrong is situated on the lower extremity of the island.

ROCK ISLAND, county, Ill. Situated in the N. W. part of the state. Area, 366 sq. m. The Mississippi river runs on its W. boundary. Drained by Rock r. The surface is various. The soil is fertile, & along the Mississippi is a rich alluvion. Capital, Rock Island City. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $136,247; wheat, 83,076 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 215,255; oats, 31,041; wool, 8,865 pounds;—2 saw m., a tannery, a printing office, a weekly newspaper pub.;—4 churches; 2 sch., 189 scholars. Pop. 1840, 2,616; 1850, 6,957.

ROCK ISLAND, city, p-v., capital of Rock Island co., Ill., 150 Springfield, 879 W. It has been laid out on an extensive scale, at the junction of Rock r. & the Mississippi, & at the W. termination of the Chicago and Rock Island r. r. It has been in contemplation to cut a canal from the Mississippi, above the rapids, to Rock r., by which an immense water power would be gained. It contains a court-house, 4 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, & 1 Roman Catholic,—a bank, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper, 15 stores, several manufac. establishments, and 1,200 inhabs.

ROCK ISLAND, p-o., Warren co., Tenn., 88 S.E. Nashville, 611 W.

ROCK ISLAND, p-o., Austin co., Tex.

ROCK ISLAND, elevation 20 feet above the highest flood.—Rock rapids are opposite the village.

ROCK ISLAND RAPIDS, in the Mississippi, commence at Rock Island, just above the mouth of Rock r., & extend 15 miles up the river, with a descent in that distance of 21 feet 10 inches. In various places ledges of rocks extend across the river, and, at low water, are a great obstruction to navigation. But, by means of dams, the channel of the rivers has been made narrower, & the navigation much improved.

ROCKLAND, county, N. Y. Situated in the S.E. part of the state. Area, 172 sq. m. It is bounded on the E. by Hudson r. The surface is hilly & mountainous, & much broken; soil fertile. It contains some valuable minerals, particularly magnetic iron ore, & variegated marble. The New York & Erie r. r. commences at Piermont, & crosses the co. Capital, New City v., in Clarkstown t. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $239,209; wheat, 6,439 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 73,628; oats, 39,844; wool, 1,876 pounds;—21 flouring & grist m., 2 iron foundries, a woollen fac., 2 cotton fac.; 3 tanneries, 6 persons emp.; 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers pub. Cap. emp'd in manufac., $1,081,000; value of manufactured articles, $2,080,216;—35 churches; 13 acad., 207 pup.; 38 sch., 2,745 scholars; 36 libraries, 8,330 vols. Pop. 1840, 11,975; 1850, 16,962.

ROCKLAND, p-t., Lincoln co., Me., 45 S. by W. Augusta, on W. side of Penobscot bay. The v., formerly called E. Thomaston, contains several churches, 2 banks, aggregate cap. $150,000; an insurance office, 10 stores, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper, an iron foundry, 19 lime-burning establishments, & 2,500 inhabitants. Pop. of the t. 1850, 5,052.

ROCKLAND, p-t., Sullivan co., N. Y., 102 S.W. Albany, 321 W. Surface hilly & mountainous; soil gravelly loam, adapted to grass. Drained by Big Beaver Kill & its tributaries. It has a tannery, 2 grist m., 11 saw m., 6 schools. Pop. 1840, 826; 1850, 1,175.

ROCKLAND, t., Berks co., Pa. Pop. 1850, 1,369.

ROCKLAND, t., Bucks co., Pa. Surface hilly and broken. Drained by Maxatawny & Saccony creeks. It has a paper fac., 2 tanneries, 3 grist m., 4 saw m. Pop. 1840, 1,649; 1850, 1,369.

ROCKLAND, p-t., Venango co., Pa., 212 W.N.W. Harrisburg, 284 W. It has 2 fulling m., 5 grist m. 5 saw m. Pop. 1840, 1,178; 1850, 1,409.

ROCKTON, p-v., Herkimer co., N. Y. Situated on both sides of the Mohawk river, & on the New York Central r. r. Surrounded by picturesque scenery, and contains 6 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, 2 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, & 1 Roman Catholic,—an academy, a bank, 2 printing offices, each issuing a weekly newspaper, 30 stores & groceries, a woollen fac., 3 paper m., 3 flouring m., 2 plaster m., a trip-hammer works, 4 furnaces, a machine shop, a brewery, a fulling m., and 3,500 inhabitants. The river here has a fall of 42 feet in half a mile, affording great water power. The Erie canal has a feeder, which crosses the river in a fine aqueduct, 214 feet long & 16 wide, with walls 14 feet high, upheld by one arch of 70 feet span, & two others of 50 feet each. The canal passed the brow of a mntn. here, which reached to the border of the r., by expensive digging & embankment. In widening the canal, more ample room is obtained by occuping a part of the bed of the r., between an island & the S. bank. The v. was formerly called Little Falls.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, a station of the Hudson Bay Company, on the St. John or Peace riv. Lat. 56° N., lon. 120° W.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS, an extensive mountain system of N. America, forming a continuation of the great range which stretches northward through Mexico, and the southern portion of the United States, under the successive names of Sierra Madre, Mimbre, Grulles, & Verde, & commences to be called by the name of Rocky Mountains at about 42° N., and continues through the United States & British possessions, until it reaches the Arctic Ocean. In lat. 43° 10′ N., & lon. 11° 13′ W., it rises to a height of 13,568 feet, to which elevation the name of Fremonts Peak has been given, & at this point it throws off a spur called the Wind River Mountains which, passing in an easterly and then e in a northerly direction, is lost in the gentle undulations of the Black Hills, a little below the junction of the Missouri & Yellow Stone rivers. Between lat. 52° & 53° N., Mount Hooker rises to a height of 15,700 feet, & Mount Brown to a height of 15,900 feet. To the north of 53° N., the range begins to lower rapidly, & at 55° N., does not exceed 4,000 feet. Ultimately the average height does not exceed 2,000 feet. Beyond 53° N., the Rocky Mountains cease to have the character of a continuous ridge, but form a series of isolated groups, separated from each other by considerable depressions. The E. slope, which is at first very precipitous, terminates suddenly on the edge of a very extensive and elevated plateau; the W. slope forms a series of narrow longitudinal valleys, separated by ridges of comparatively moderate height, till, at a considerable distance to the W., another mountain mass begins to rise, forming the range which stretches continuously along the coast from Cape St. Lucas, at the S. extremity of the peninsula of Lower California, to Mount St. Elias, & has received the names of the Sierra Nevada, the coast range of California, & the Cascade mountains of Oregon, &c. This range contains numerous evidences of past volcanic agency, & has several active volcanoes; but the Rocky Mountains furnish comparatively few specimens of past volcanic motion, & none now in action, with the exception of a few remarkable fissures and hot springs in the desert region of Utah, & also near the sources of the Yellow Stone, on the eastern flank of the main mass. It consists chiefly of metamorphic masses of granite, gneiss, & mica schist. They are also, in general, scantily provided with vegetation, but occasionally magnificent forests occur, & in several of the less elevated districts toward the S. extremity of the range, the mica schist & gneiss are covered with many species of Artemisia, especially Tridentata, asters, & cactuses. The waters of the Rocky Mountains belong to three basins. The northernmost one on the E. slope receives its supplies chiefly by the Mackenzie, which flows N. to the Arctic Ocean, & by the Saskatchawan, & many other streams which flow E. to Hudson Bay; & on its W. slope the waters of Colville river flowing into the Arctic Sea. The second & most extensive basin is the Atlantic which receives its supplies partly through the N. American lakes, & partly by the Mississippi, & a smaller portion of the Rio Grande, entering the Gulf of Mexico. The third basin is the Pacific, to which Simpsons, Frasers, the Columbia with its many tributaries, & at the S. the Great Salt Lake, & the Rio Colorado, & the Sacramento, & San Joaquin. The Rocky Mountains have been but imperfectly explored; the culminating point is supposed to be in about 31° N. lat., rising some 18,000 ft. above the sea.

The lowest depressions in the U. S. are: 1st, in the neighborhood of El Paso, not far from lat. 32° N., about 5,000 ft. above the sea level; 2d, at about 35° N. lat., at the sources of the Canadian on the east, & Zuni Valley on the west; the exact altitude not at present known, but supposed to be one of the lowest; 3d, the Sangre de Christo Pass, 8,800 feet above the sea; fourth, the South Pass, elevated 7,490 feet, & its approaches very gentle; fifth, Lewis & Clarks Pass, near the head sources of the Missouri, & at an elevation of about 6,000 feet above the sea. These constitute the lowest depressions in the territory belonging to the United States. In the British Possessions, at about lat. 52° 30′, is McGillavrays Pass, or the Athabasca Portage, which has an elevation of 7,300 feet, & has long been used by the traders of the Hudson Bay Company, as the principal pass into the basin of the Columbia, from the east. The depressions within the United States territory, will be thoroughly examined by the several exploring parties now in the field, to determine the practicability of a route to connect the Atlantic & Pacific shores of the Republic, by means of the electric flash & the road of iron.

* "The United States, in reference to its geography, may be divided into three grand, well-defined divisions, each possessing characteristics peculiar to itself. They may be termed generally the Eastern, Middle & Western divisions. The first lies between the crest of the great Alleghany ridge & the Atlantic; the second extends from the former to the commencement of the great American desert, at the base of the Rocky Mountains; the third, is the intermediate territory from the last to the Pacific Ocean. With the first & second of these divisions most of us are personally familiar. There are some strong points of resemblance between them. They have a nearly uniform climate upon similar parallels. They are sufficiently watered from rains, & wooded for agricultural purposes. They are both penetrated by navigable rivers. The surface or topographical features of both are favorable to the easy construction of railroads & ordinary highways. In these particulars, these divisions are in fact so homogeneous in their leading aspects, that, contrasted with the third, they may be regarded as one. The third grand division presents a most striking contrast to the two already described. Perhaps its most remarkable characteristic is its great general elevation above the level of the sea, as it is to this elevation that many of its other peculiarities are due. This feature must be thoroughly studied & understood, in order to form a correct idea of the character of the country on the several routes, & the difficulties in the way of the construction of a railroad. The Mississippi river, in connection with its main affluent, the Missouri, is the dividing line between two great planes, one descending to its left bank from the summit of the Alleghanies, the other to its right, from the summit of the Rocky Mountains. The uniform & gradual descent of different portions of this great river is very remarkable. From the Gulf of Mexico to the Grand Falls of the Missouri, a distance of 4,000 miles, there is no obstacle to the running of light-draught steamboats at all seasons of the year, when the river is unobstructed by ice. From the mouth of the Ohio to the Gulf, a distance of about 1,200 miles, the fall is 275 feet, or nearly 2 3 10 inches to the mile. From the mouth of the Ohio to the Grand Falls of the Missouri, & to the Falls of St. Anthony on the Mississippi, the descent of the two rivers is nearly uniform; that of the Missouri being the greatest by about one inch in the mile. From the Falls of St. Anthony to the junction with the Missouri, the descent is about 125 feet in a distance of 700 miles, or at the rate of 6⅔ inches to the mile. From the Grand Falls to its mouth, the descent of the Missouri is about 1,900 feet in 2,600 miles, or at the rate of 7 3-10 inches to the mile. Governor Stephens estimates the elevation of the river, at the mouth of the Yellow Stone, at 2,000 feet above the sea, & at the Grand Falls 2,300 ft. As the distance between these points is about 700 m., the descent of this portion of the river is only about one-half as great as it is near its mouth. At the Grand Falls of the Missouri, the river descends over a series of cascades 368 feet, in the course of 18 miles. Above the Falls, the inclination of the river does not appear to increase very rapidly, as it is navigable for canoes for five hundred miles, & to a point within 38 miles of the waters of Clarks Fork of the Columbia. This was the route pursued by Lewis & Clark, on their way to the Pacific. At this point their expedition left the river; the elevation does not probably exceed 3,168 ft. From thence to the source, in a distance of about 25 miles, the rise is probably not less than 3,000 ft. The uniform inclination of this great river throughout its whole course, constitutes one of the most remarkable facts in the topographical features of the North American continent. As before stated, the Mississippi and Missouri rivers mark the boundary of two great planes, reaching to them from the summits of the mountain ranges on either side. A striking contrast presented by these planes, is in their dip or inclination to the point of their intersection, & their geological structure. While there is a great difference in the elevation of their upper angles, there is still greater difference in the inclination of the rivers which traverse them. The rock forming the Alleghany ranges being chiefly limestone, the rivers that fall from them have cut for themselves deep channels, far below the general surface of the country. They consequently have a gentle flow, with sufficient water to render them navigable for a great portion of the year. The main tributary entering the Mississippi from the East is the Ohio. The descent of this river from Pittsburg to its mouth, a distance of 975 miles, is 424 feet, or at the rate of 4 32-100 inches to the mile. Following up the Allegheny to Olean, in the State of New York, the head of steam navigation, a distance of 250 miles, we find the descent rapidly increasing. The elevation of this point is 1,403 feet above the sea, or 704 feet above Pittsburg, showing a fall of two feet eight inches to the mile. In fifty miles more we reach the sources of the river, in the town of Friendship, in this State, 1,678 feet above the sea, & 2,450 miles from the Gulf. If we examine the Tennessee & Cumberland rivers, which, with the Ohio, drain the greater part of the western slope of the Alleghany range, we find them possessing the same general characteristics as the Ohio. The Tennessee river at Chattanooga, 600 miles from its mouth, is 351 feet above the Ohio, showing a fall of about 7 inches to the mile. Above Chattanooga, the ascent increases rapidly; & upon entering the State of Virginia, about 300 miles from Chattanooga, an elevation of about 1,000 feet is obtained. From the State line to its source, the ascent is about 1,550 feet, in about 125 miles. The Cumberland, lying within the circle described by the Tennessee, has less descent; the fall from Nashville to its mouth being only 104 ft., in a distance of 240 miles, or at a rate of 5 1-5 inches per mile. The inclination of the head waters of the Cumberland river does not differ much from those of the Tennessee. I have been particular to give you the inclination of the rivers draining the western slope of the Alleghanies, or the great eastern plane of the Mississippi, that you may better appreciate the consequences that result from the greater slope of the corresponding plane upon its western side. The slight descent of the Ohio, Tennessee, & Cumberland rivers, give them gentle currents & deep channels, peculiarly adapting them as avenues of commerce. On the other hand, in ascending the table-lands which fall towards the right bank of the Mississippi & Missouri, we find that the rivers which traverse them have an inclination nearly ten times greater than those which enter the former upon the left. For the purposes of this paper, the comparison will be confined to the Arkansas and Platte, as these define two routes for the proposed road, & constitute, from their positions & general directions, appropriate contrasts to the Ohio, Cumberland, & Tennessee, & also afford the best illustration of some of the peculiarities of the great western plane they water. The Arkansas river, entering the Mississippi only about seven hundred miles above its mouth, within what may be termed the great delta of the Mississippi, & at an elevation of about 150 feet above the sea, the lower portion of it presents some of the characteristics of its recipient. It has a steamboat navigation to Fort Smith, about 500 miles, by the course of the river. In this distance the descent is probably 250 feet. In longitude 97° west from Greenwich it probably reaches about the same altitude as the Platte river at its mouth in longitude 96°. At these respective points the two rivers present similar characteristics, having rapid currents over wide sandy bottoms with low banks, & are entirely unfitted for any commercial purposes. Their respective elevations above the sea are about 1,000 feet. As we ascend the great plane, the two rivers maintain nearly the same altitude, showing a remarkable uniformity in the general surface of the country. From the mouth of the Platte to Fort Laramie the distance is about 575 miles, and the descent of the river 3,550 feet, showing a rate of fall of about six feet to the mile, or sixteen times greater than the Ohio. From Fort Laramie, to the South Pass, the descent is at the rate of 10¼ feet to the mile, in 185 miles; the crest of the Rocky Mountains at this point being 7,490 feet above the sea. The descent of the head waters of the Platte are nearly five times greater than that of the head waters of the Ohio. The rate of the fall of the Arkansas very nearly corresponds to that of the Platte. From the great Bend of this in longitude 98 west from Greenwich to Bent's Fort, which, like Fort Laramie, lies at the base of the mountains, the descent of the river is 2,300 feet in 311 m., or at a rate of 7¼ feet to the mile. From Bent's Fort to the summit of the Sangre de Christo Pass, the descent is 4,942 feet in 121 miles, which is at the rate of 40 feet to the mile. Bent's Fort is 3,858 feet above the sea, & the summit of the Sangre de Christo Pass, is 8,800 feet according to Capt. Gunnison. The fall of the upper portion of the Arkansas is more than twenty times greater than that of the Alleghany. Another great river possessing characteristics very similar to the above, though having a different direction & outlet, is the Rio del Norte. All three take their rise in the same great elevated Plateau, the Platte and Arkansas draining its Northern and Eastern, and the Del Norte its Southern & South Western slopes. The descent of the upper part of this river is much greater, probably, than either of the former. From San Felipe, in latitude 35° 30′, to a point near the Mexican boundary, the river falls at the rate of four feet per m., San Felipe is 5,158 feet above the sea, Santa Fe, 6,846. San Felipe is more than 300 miles south from the source of the river in the famous Coochatoopee Pass, the water from the southern slope of which falls into the Del Norte, at the rate of twenty feet to the mile, which is only one-half of the descent of the Huerfano from Bent's Fort to the Sangre de Christo Pass, and which Fremont & Heap describe as a very level route, we have 11,158 feet as the elevation of the Coochatoopee Pass, which is only 76 feet higher than the measurement of Gunnison makes it; viz. 11,082 feet. It must be borne in mind that the elevations I have given are not those of mountain summits, but of the lowest depression between them, such as are followed by the water courses, & have been selected on account of their great depression & favorable features as the great routes of travel to the Pacific. The general elevation of the neighboring planes is much greater, while upon all sides of these passes tower mountains covered with perpetual snow. The foregoing remarks have been descriptive of the Eastern & Southern slopes of the great Rocky Mountain Range. Upon reaching the summit of the plane or plateau, from which these mountains rise, we find it extends with very little depression, except where it is intersected by the waters of the Colorado & Columbia, to the Sierra Nevada on the Pacific. The great uniform elevation of the territory embraced within these mountain ranges, is one of the most distinguishing features in the topography of this Continent, & one of the most remarkable of the globe. Nearly every portion of it is thickly studded by ranges of mountains, some of which vie in elevation with those that enclose them. If possible, the country is still more barren than that already described. Throughout, is the same absence of water & wood. The sands drink up the feeble streams as they descend from the snowy hills. Nothing can be cultivated except by irrigation, which is confined to the narrow bottoms of the water courses. All else presents the desolation of the desert in all its hideousness. From North to South, this desert extends from an unknown distance below the Mexican boundary nearly to the British Possessions, & probably covers the larger portions of Oregon & Washington territories. Its breadth embraces about 22 degrees of longitude & measures from 900 to 1,100 miles. Its general elevation is about 4,500 feet, while throughout its whole extent rise mountains from 10,000 to 15,000 feet high. Within it is the desert of the Great Salt Lake, which is elevated 4,200 feet above the sea, & which has a system of mountains & rivers peculiar to itself. The first grand consequence that results from the great elevation of so large a portion of our continent, is the absence of rain. Its height above the sea would largely reduce the quantity, were there no other causes which influence the same result. Either side of the great plateau is flanked by the ranges of the Rocky & Sierra Nevada Mountains, which, intercepting the moisture borne into the interior from the sea, precipitate it upon their lofty summits. This fact explains the cause of the immense masses of snow which collect in the mountain gorges, particularly of the Sierra Nevada. Upon crossing these mountains into the great desert, the snow which accumulates in such immense bodies upon the western slopes, disappears. The same fact is noticed upon the Rocky Mountains, although their influence is not so striking as that of Sierra Nevada, from the greater elevation of their base, distance from the sea & the drier atmosphere by which they are surrounded. Upon their eastern slopes only a small amount of moisture falls. This is collected upon the lofty mountains, whose heights are sufficient, by the changes of temperature which they cause, to disturb the ordinary equilibrium of the atmosphere, & condense upon their summits the moisture held by it. This great elevated plateau, which embraces the Eastern & Southern slopes of the Rocky Mountains, extending from 250 to 300 miles from their base, presents all the characteristics of a true desert. On the East, the boundary of this desert may be described by a line drawn from the mouth of the Yellow Stone to the great bend of the Arkansas near the point of intersection of the parallel of latitude 38°, with longitude 99°. The line thence extends very nearly South, inclining a little to the west after entering Texas, and inclining to the east again on approaching the Rio Grande, & leaving a wide belt of desert country east of the river, to its mouth. Within the limits of this desert is the great Llano Estacado of Texas, an elevated & treeless plain. In latitude 31° 30′ Bartlett's Expedition crossed it, & for seventy m. from the Choncho to the Pecos, found no water. In latitude 32° 30′ its width is more than double the above. Between the Pecos & the Rio Grande, a distance of about 200 miles, is a high barren plain, portions of it being 5,000 feet above the sea. One of the most remarkable features of portions of this great desert, particularly that of the Great Salt Lake Basin, is the aspect of newness which it presents. Rain is the grand disintegrator of the earth's surface. Where it does not fall, the lapse of ages produces no perceptible change in the aspect of nature; consequently portions of the great American Desert present the same appearance they did ten thousand years ago. It seems not to have been disturbed since the warring forces of nature laid down their arms. This warfare would appear to have ended but yesterday. The yawning chasms, the blackened hills, the angular & jagged masses of rock piled up in endless confusion, the heaps of scoria glistening as if it ran from the furnace of yesterday, the vast plains unenlivened by a single specimen of organic or animal life, all bear witness of the external action of those terrific agency, which now quietly repose in the bowels of the earth. Over the scene of their warfare, through the agencies of milder forces, no veil has been thrown. It remains, & always will remain, intelligible alike to the lettered and unlearned, a record of a great crisis in the earth's history. Throughout this desert, wherever running water is found, its sources are always in lofty mountains. These streams constitute the oasis of the desert, & are oftentimes separated by jornadas, or sandy plains without water, all the way from 10 to 100 miles in extent. In the winter, which is the rainy season, these are crossed by mule trains with comparative safety, as portions of them abound in grass. In the summer or dry season, they are nearly impassable both for man or beast. Such is not an overdrawn picture of the physical characteristics of a territory embracing nearly one-half of the breadth of the North American Continent, & over which must be the route of most, if not all, the proposed Railroads to the Pacific. I have been particular not only to describe it with sufficient distinctness for the object I have in view; but, to contrast its peculiarities with those portions of the country with which we are all familiar. In this manner only, can a correct idea be formed of the magnitude & difficulties in the way of construction of a Pacific railroad."

* Poor's paper, read before the American Geographical and Statistical Society, 1853.

ROME (Ital. Roma), a city of Italy, cap. of the Pontif. Sta., & formerly the metropolis of the greater part of the world known to the ancients, is situated on the Tiber, 17 m. N.E. its mouth in the Mediterranean. Lat. of St. Peter's 41° 54′ 6″ N., lon. 12° 27′ 14″ E.; elev. of site above the sea, St. Peter's 95 feet, the Roman college 193 feet. Pop. 1852, 175,838. The city is built on marshy ground, at the foot of a range of low hills, & is separated by the Tiber into 2 unequal portions, which are divided into 14 Rioni (regions or districts); of these 12 are in Rome proper, or the space on the E. or lt. b. of the river, & only 2 on the W. or rt. b., called the Leonine city, or Trastavere, containing the Vatican & the Castle of St. Angelo. Its walls are 15 m. in circumference, & are pierced for 18 gates, 6 of which are built up,—the finest are the Porta del Popolo on the N., & the Porta San Giovanni on the S. of the city. Little more than one-third of the space within the walls is inhabited, most of the space S. of the capitol being used as gardens & vineyards. The most populous part of the modern city occupies the site of the ancient Campus Martius, a plain extending between the Capitoline, Quirinal, & Pincian hills. The Tiber, within the walls, has a winding course of 3 m. It is navigable only for small provision boats; after heavy rains it frequently rises 20 or 30 feet, & inundates a great part of the city. Near the middle of its course the Tiber forms an island, called S. Bartolomeo, 900 feet long & 300 feet broad, connected with the mainland by two bridges; besides which, the only others are the Ponto Sisto & the Ponto S. Angelo, the latter connecting the city with the castle of St. Angelo, the citadel of Rome, which serves for a state prison & a house of correction. The 3 principal thoroughfares of Rome diverge from the Piazza del Popolo, a large square at its N. extremity; the central of these the Corso, extends in a direct line S.S.E. for about a mile. There are in all 568 streets, 275 lanes, & 148 squares, of all dimensions; most of these are ornamented with richly sculptured fountains, of which there are in Rome 150. These are supplied with excellent water by 3 aqueducts; the finest is called Aqua Vergina,—the others are Aqua Felice & Aqua Paola. Notwithstanding its architectural & artistical riches, modern Rome has a sad & desolate aspect. Most of the streets are narrow, dirty, & unpaved; in those the finest palaces & the most wretched hovels are often seen side by side. Near the Capitoline Mount is the Ghetto, a Jews' quarter, a crowded, filthy space, enclosed by walls, the 2 gates of which are under charge of the police. The situation of Rome is unhealthy, especially in summer, from the effects of malaria; but from the mildness of its winter climate, it is a favorite resort for invalids. The mean temp. of the year is 50°.4; winter 46°.7; summer 74°.2 Fahr. Frost seldom lasts over the night, & snow falls on an average 14 days in the year, but, in the severe season of 1812, the ponds were frozen over for several days.

Rome has 364 churches, most of which are remarkable for their architecture & their decorations; of these the cathedral of St. Peter's is the largest & most sumptuous in Christendom. It was begun under Pope Julius II. in 1506, on the site of an old church of same name; it was planned & commenced by Bramante, but altered & carried on by Raphael, & Michael Angelo Buonarroti. It was dedicated 18th November, 1626. Length of the cathedral 607 feet, width 396 ft., height to top of cross 448 feet. The church occupies the place of Nero's Circus, & is erected on the spot where St. Peter was martyred. It occupied a period of 176 years in building, & required 350 years to perfect it. It cost $48,000,000; covers 8 acres. & is kept in repair at a cost of $30,000 per annum. The church of St. John Lateran, in which the Popes were crowned, is the mother church of Rome, & contains the gorgeous Corsini chapel. The church of St. Peter in Vincoli is regarded as the most ancient church in Rome. The Vatican, adjoining St. Peter's, is the largest palace in Europe, but irregular in its plan & not remarkable for its architecture; it is said to contain 4,422 halls, chapels, & other apartments; it became the permanent residence of the Popes after their return from Avignon in 1377. Its galleries & halls, & the Sistine chapel, decorated by Raphael & Michael Angelo, contain the most choice paintings & statues, including the portion of those carried off by the French, which were restored in 1815. Two of its vast galleries contain the famous lib. of the Vatican, which is estim. to comprise 100,000 print. books, & 25,000 MSS., of which 2,300 are oriental. One of its museums contains the Apollo Belvidere, and the Laocoon. The superb palace of the Quirinal, or palace of Monte Cavallo, long the usual summer residence of the Pope, is surrounded by extensive gardens; attached to this is the palace called the Dataria Apostolica, whence the pontif. bulls were issued. In the square of the Quirinal is the palace of the Consulta, seat of the supreme tribunal. The palace of Salviati contains the archives of Rome. In the Campidoglio, or modern capitol, forming 3 sides of a square, are the palace of the senator of Rome, that of the conservatori, the Capitoline museum, rich in objects of art & antiquities, and the university; between these is placed the famous bronze statue of Marcus Aurelius. There are upwards of 60 splendid private palaces; the finest of these are the Barberini palace, the Doria palace, remakable for its extent & its gallery of paintings, the Colonna palace for its gardens, the Rospigliosi & Farnese palaces, the latter celebrated for its architecture, the palace of Prince Canino for its Etruscan museum. The palaces called Villas, though mostly within the limits of the city, are situated amidst orange & citron groves, they are ornamented with fountains and statues; the most magnificent of these is the V. Borghese, on the Pincian hill, outside of the Porta del Popolo; the Villa Medici, formerly celebrated for its Venus, now a school of design for young French artists, & that of prince Ludovisi. Of the many scientific and literary establishments, the university of Rome has the first rank as one of the principal in Italy, and one of the oldest in Europe. In 1841, it was attended by 680 students. The chief of the others are the Roman college founded by the Jesuits, with a rich library and museums of natural history and antiquities; the college of the Propaganda, in which natives of India, Abyssinia, Armenia, & Greece are instructed, and to which a celebrated printing establishment is attached. There are English, Irish, Scotch, & 17 other colleges. In the institution of the Ripa Grande 1,000 children are instructed in arts & trades; and there are numerous schools of painting, sculpture, & architecture. The principal academies are, that called d'Arcadia, one of the oldest and most celebrated in Europe, the academy of natural history, with an observatory, & the academies of theology, archæology, the Tiberina, & others. Next to the library of the Vatican, the chief public libraries are the Casanatense in the convent of Minerva, with 120,000 vols., the Angelica library with 84,820 printed vols., and 2,945 MSS. Besides the museums of the Vatican and the Capitol, the public collections comprise museums of anatomy, natural history, mineralogy, antiquities, and mosaics, and there are numerous and valuable private collections. Rome has at present 8 theatres, the finest of which is that of Apollo on the Tiber, near the bridge of St. Angelo; a deaf-dumb institution, and numerous hospitals and benevolent institutions, orphan hospitals, and houses of industry, the chief of which are the hospitals of the Holy Trinity, St. Louis & St. Michael;—in that of St. Sisto 300 poor are clothed and fed. The chief industry of the inhabitants of Rome is connected with the production of articles of virtú, and the supply of the numerous artists, invalids, & other visitors; its few manufs. are confined to woollen & silk fabrics, hats, gloves, parchment, strings for musical instruments, artificial feathers, false pearls, mosaics, jewellery and trinkets. Many of the pop. are occupied in attendance on the ecclesiastical courts. In 1846, there were in Rome 32 cardinals, 29 bishops, 124 prelates, 1,738 secular clergy, 2,488 regular clergy, and 1,743 nuns. The noble remains of ancient Rome comprise the Pontus Ælius, now the bridge of St. Angelo, the Cloaca Maxima, a great subterranean tunnel still in good repair, the aqueducts already mentioned, the pantheon, the circus of Romulus, and the circus Maximus, the coliseum, remains of the theatre of Marcellus, the baths of Agrippa, those of Caracalla, Diocletian, Nero, Titus, &c.; the triumphal arches of Titus, Constantine, and Septimus Severus; the columns of Antoninus and Trajan, Egyptian obelisks, the Roman forum, now called Campo Vaccino. Rome was founded about 753 years B.C. In the 2 centuries preceding the Christian era, its dominion extended over all the countries of the Mediterranean, its territories were further extended by the first emperors, but in the fifth century, the barbarians of the N. and E. deprived it of several provs. The city was taken by Alaric in 410, & by Genseric in 455. It passed successively under the domination of the Ostrogoths and the Emperors of the East; it was given to the Popes by Pepin & Charlemagne in the 8th century, and then became cap. of the States of the church. From 1809 till 1814, it was cap. of the dep. Rome in the French empire. In 1848, an insurrection broke out after the assassination of Count Rossi, the Pope's prime minister, 15th November; the Pope fled in disguise on the 24th. A republican form of government was attempted in 1849, when, on the 8th February, the national assembly declared the Pope divested of all temporal power, but this was overturned by the intervention of a French force; the Pope returned on the 12th April, 1850.

Total area of European Russia.....1,606,871 geo. sq. m.....Pop. 62,088,000.

 By Ukase, Dec. 18, 1850, part of govs. Orenburg, Saratov, and Simbirsk were formed into the gov. of Samara. Area, 39,008 geo. square miles.

The Russian empire contains a greater number of distinct races than any other country, comprising Slavonians, Lettons, Germans, Caucasians, Jews, Walachians, Greeks, Persians, Indians, Samoyedes, Tartars, Tunguses, & Turks. The population according to origin is thus estimated: Russians (of Great Russia), 33,000,000; do. (Little Russia), 11,200,000; do. (White Russia), 3,600,000; Lithanians and Poles, 7,000,000; Finns & Lettons, 3,300,000; Tartars & Mohametans, 2,400,000; Germans, 600,000; Greeks & Armenians, 2,000,000; Jews, 1,500,000; races of the Oural, 600,000. The established religion of the empire is that of the Greek church, which is estimated to comprise 49,000,000 of the pop. Roman Catholic 7,300,000, Protestants 3,500,000, Mohametans 2,400,000, Jews 1,500,000, Armenians 1,000,000, Idolaters 600,000. It is usual to treat of the empire as divided into European, Asiatic, & American Russia, although these divisions are not officially recognized, & several of the govs., as Perm & Orenburg, are partly in Europe & partly in Asia. The relative area & population of the empire, according to the latest estimate, is given in the following table:—

European Russia extends from the N. slope of the Caucasus mountains, lat. 40° 20′, to Lapland, lat. 70° 16′ N.; & including the kingdom of Poland, from lon. 18° to the W. slope of the Ural mountains, gov. Perm, lon. 60° 45′ E. It is bound E. by Siberia & the Caspian Sea, S. by Asiatic Russia, the Black Sea, and the Ottoman & Austrian empires, W. by Moldavia, Austria, Prussia, the Baltic, & Sweden, and N. by the Arctic Ocean. The surface of Russia may be considered as one vast plain, enclosed by the Ural mountains on the E., the Caucasus on the S., & partly by the Carpathians on the W.; it opens to the Caspian Sea on the S. E. & the level countries of N. Germany on the W.; throughout its vast extent, it does not contain a single mountain; the highest point between the Baltic & the Black Sea near Kremenetz, is 1,328 feet in height; the Baltic provinces have a mean elevation of 1,000 feet above the Baltic. The centre of the country is occupied by a dome-shaped elevation traversed by the Valdai hills, the average height of which is 800 to 900 feet, & the summit 1,100 feet above the sea; these sink rapidly to the S.E., where they are lost in marshes. Russia is traversed by the largest rivers in Europe; these form the great N. & S. basins, the water-shed between which is not marked by mountains, but by slightly undulating ground; the Baltic receives the Tornea, Kemi, Ulea, Kumo, Neva, Narva, Duna, Niemen, & Vistula; the Arctic Ocean receives the Paswig, Kola, Petchora, and, by the White Sea, the Vigo, Onega, Dwina, Mezen; the Black Sea receives the Danube, Dniester, Dnieper, Don, & Kuban; the Caspian Sea, the Oural, Volga, Kuma, & Terek. In the N. of Russia, there are num. & exten. lakes; the chf. are lake Ladoga, the largest in Europe: lake Onega, in the gov. Olonetz; lakes Saïma, Payama, & Kolgis in Finland; Peipus, between the govs. Revel, Riga, Pskov, & Petersburg; Ilmen in the gov. Novgorod, Enara in in Lapland. The smaller lakes Bielo, in Novgorod, Koubinshoe or Koubensk in Vologda, are important for the internal navigation of the empire. The most valuable of the salt lakes is Elton in Saratov. Among the numerous islands belonging to the empire, the chief are the group of Novaia Zemlia (new land), in the Arctic Ocean, the archipelago of Spitzbergen, which is claimed by Russia, Kalgouf, & Weigatz islands. Geological phenomena, confirmed by history & tradition, warrant the conclusion that a great portion of Central Russia was under the sea at a very recent period. The soil comprises every variety, much of which is unfit for cultivation. The vast region of the tundras extending from lat. 64° N. to the N. coast, is a swamp in summer, and is covered with ice for nine months in the year; it only produces moss. S.W. of this, the country for a space of 150,000 sq. m., is covered with forests of pine, larch, & birch. The isthmus of Finland, between the White Sea and the gulfs of Finland & Bothnia, a space occupying 500 miles in length, & 400 in breadth, is covered with lakes interspersed with rocks & sand hills; while in the S.E. an immense desert, called a steppe, extends between the Ural & the Volga, estimated to contain 330,000 sq. m.; a portion of it affords tolerable pastures. W. of lon. 46°, a series of salt lakes occupy a hollow space, which probably once formed a portion of the Caspian Sea. This steppe is exposed to the greatest extremes of climate; in winter the thermometer is generally 15° and sometimes 35° below zero, while in summer the heat is upwards of 100° Fahr. From its vast extent, Russia has a great diversity of climate; the plains of the N., exposed to the winds of the Arctic Ocean, are much colder than the other countries of Europe in corresponding latitudes. The whole of the N. coast from lat. 66° on the White Sea, S.E. to lat. 62° N., lon. 59° E., has a temp. below the freezing point, and the surface is constantly frozen. Between this frozen space & lat. 58° N., the mean temperature varies from 32° to 40°; at St. Petersburg, which is within this space, the thermometer in December & January sinks to 22° below zero, while in summer it rises to 85° or 90°. S. of lat. 58°, the mean temperature is between 40° & 55°; the winters are short & severe, summers long & hot. In the interior, S.S.E. & S. winds prevail, while W. & N.W. winds are most common on the coasts. Rain is most abundant in the Baltic provinces, where the average annual fall is 15 to 20 in. The amount & frequency decreases in proceeding from W. to E., & during the long summer of the S. provs., rain very seldom falls. Snow falls early in winter,—the average number of days in the year on which falls at St. Petersburg, is 70.

Russia produces all the plants common to the best countries of Europe. Corn is raised more than necessary for consumption, and is extensively exported, although agriculture is in its rudest state. Rye is the chief crop, and is very widely raised; the cultivation of barley extends to lat. 67°, and oats to lat. 62° N.; wheat is grown chiefly in the Ukraine. The countries of central Russia, in the upper basin of the Volga, are the most fertile in the empire; and its middle portion, comprising the govs. of Nijnii-Novgorod, Penza, Kasan, & Simbirsk, is called the granary of Russia. Hemp and flax are extensively raised, chiefly on the Upper Volga; tobacco is cultivated principally in the Ukraine; excellent grapes are grown in the Crimea, and on the lower course of the Don & Volga, and the manuf. of wine from them has been recently much improved. The forests yield valuable produce, & building timber, tar, pitch, & potash, are widely exported. Black cattle & sheep are extensively reared; tallow & hides are exported in great quantities; sheep-skins form the dress of many of the peasantry, but the wool is of inferior quality. The horses of the S. & central provs. are large, in the N. they are small; those of the Cossack tribes are capable of enduring great fatigue. Camels are kept in large herds by the nomadic tribes in the steppes. The bison is found near the sources of the Narew; the reindeer is confined to the region N. of lat. 66° N.; the elk, wild hog, deer, & hare, are found in the forests of the N.; and the fur-bearing animals are actively hunted. In addition to the birds common to other countries of Europe, the capercailzie is found in the N., and the pelican in the S., on the shores of the Black & Caspian Seas; geese & ducks abound in the lakes. Fish is plenty in the rivers, especially in the Volga & the Ural, & in the White Sea, & the Sea of Azov. In the Arctic Ocean on the shores of Novaia Zemlia, the whale & seal are fished. The E. part of Russia is rich in minerals; the two govs. of Orenburg & Perm, & especially the latter, have numerous mines of gold, platinum, and copper; silver does not occur in European Russia; iron abounds in the S. provs. In the mining dists. of the Ural, the pop. is flourishing & industrious; the utmost activity is manifested—forests have been cleared, marshes drained, & the gorges of mountains have been filled with artificial lakes, water being the chief moving power. The mining establishments, whether imperial or private, resemble the manufacturing towns of Europe, and the manufs. of damasked steel equals that of Sheffield or Birmingham. Salt is extensively made in the govs. Perm & Viatka, and in the W., S. of Lake Ilmen. Lignite and brown coal occur in S. Russia, in the Crimea, & on the W. of the Ural mountains; the coal field on the Donetz is estimated at 160 m. long, & several feet deep. Coal beds of immense extent were discovered in the gov. Moscow in 1844. Since the time of Peter the Great, the progress of manufactures in Russia has been most rapid. In 1812, there were only 2,332 factories and 119,093 workmen in the empire; in 1828, the number of factories was 5,244, and of workmen 255,414; and in 1839, they were 6,855 factories with 412,931 workmen: they are still rapidly on the increase, and the improvements of their products have been commensurate with their progress. The gov. of Moscow is the centre of manufacturing industry, and next to it are the govs. Vladimir, Tula, Nijnii-Novgorod, Tambov, Kaluga, & Olonetz. The staple manufs. are woollens, silks, linens, cottons, metal wares, soap and candles, besides which the manufs. of glass, paper, porcelain, arms, jewellery, and morocco leather, rival those of the best products of Europe. Most of the articles used by the peasantry are made in the villages, one of which is usually devoted to a single branch of industry. In the kingdom of Poland, the chief manufs. are of woollens, linens, leather, and fur goods. The commerce of Russia is greatly facilitated by its numerous navigable rivers, and its vast and excellent system of canals, by means of which not only do the Baltic & the White Sea communicate with the Caspian and the Black Sea, but the great lakes and the principal rivers are united into a complete system of inland navigation. There are two great public companies, one instituted 1823, for establishing steam-packets on the Volga, the Kama, and the Caspian Sea; and the other, established 1824, for the steam navigation of the great rivers of the interior, the Black Sea, and the Baltic. The American commercial Company, created 1797, has establishments in Russian America, & at Moscow, Kazan, Tomsk, Irkutsk, & Kamtschatka. The only railroad yet completed is that from Warsaw, by Czenstochau & Cracow, joining the great Austrian & German lines at Kosel; and the great line from St. Petersburg to Moscow. Moscow is the centre of internal commerce; & the chief seaports are St. Petersburg, with Kronstadt, Riga on the Baltic, Archangel on the White Sea, Astrakhan on the Caspian, & Odessa on the Black Sea. The principal exports are tallow, hides, hemp, flax, iron, copper, linseed, building timber, wax, potash, train oil, skins, furs, and morocco leather. Imports, wine, cotton, silk, fine woollens, dyeing materials, tea, sugar, coffee, & other colonial produce, & machinery. In Russia, all power emanates from the emperor or czar, who is head of the church, & whose authority is absolute; all rank is based on the tenure of civil or military office. The nobility are a privileged class, they have great political power, & possess nearly all the land of the country. European Russia is divided into 50 govs. & 12 provs. besides the country of the Don Cossacks, a kind of military repub., the grand duchy of Finland, the kingdom of Poland, & several countries in the Caucasus, Siberia, &c.; some of which are actually, & others only nominally, dependent on Russia. The educational establishments are dependent on the government, & are placed under a minister of public instruction; they consist of district schools, parish, theological, & special schools, which in all amount to about 4,856. In 1844 there were 73 gymnasia with 19,453 pupils; but besides these there are numerous military & theological academies & seminaries, & great progress in education has been made within the last half century; however, it is estimated that only 1 in 143 of the pop. are under instruction, while in Prussian Saxony, the proportion is 1 in 6. In Poland there were in 1844 only 10 gymnasia with 4,001 pupils. The university of Warsaw has been suppressed. The grand army of Russia in 1853 was composed of 699,000 men, with 1,468 cannon & 126,000 irregular troops, with 224 pieces of artillery. The navy is composed of 60 vessels of the line, 37 frigates, 70 corvettes, brigs, &c., & 40 steamers.—(Almanach de Gotha.)

The Fremden Blatt gives the following statement as a reliable and trustworthy view of the actual state and effective condition of the Russian navy:—"The entire marine of Russia is collected at two stations, those of the Baltic and of the Black Sea. Of these, that of the Baltic Sea is divided into three sections, and that of the Black Sea into two. But this does not include the various gun boats & small craft. Each division of the fleet consists usually of one three-decker, eight two-deckers, six frigates, one corvette, & five smaller vessels. Thus the Baltic fleet would number 27 vessels of the line, including three three-deckers, 18 frigates, & 15 corvettes, brigs, & smaller vessels, besides a considerable number of steamers. That of the Black Sea, on the other hand, will account to 18 vessels of the line, & among them 3 three-deckers, besides 12 frigates, 10 corvettes, & several steamers. Hence the Russian marine amounts in all to 45 vessels of the line, 30 frigates, 5 corvettes, & 20 brigs, besides the very considerable force of steamers & gun boats which the Russian inspiration places at 400 or 500 vessels. The aggregate of the Russian crews is given at 50,600 men, of whom 30,800 belong to the Baltic, & 19,800 to the Black Sea fleet. The grand Russian three-deckers are the Russia, of 130 guns; the Twelve Apostles, of 120 guns; the Three Saints, of 120; and the Warsaw, of 120. Admiral Prince Menschikoff is at the head of the naval staff; the Grand Duke Constantine is High Admiral of the Russian fleets; Von Kalsakoff & Von Ricord are also admirals.

Great Russia is the N. and middle portion of the empire in Europe, formerly called Muscovy.—White Russia, a portion of Lithuania.—Black Russia, the W. part of do.—New Russia, a region in the S., comprising the territories of the Cossacks.—Little Russia, in the S.W.—Red Russia, now forms a part of Austrian & Russian Poland (Galicia & Poland). For the govs. into which these now are div., see table.

The countries, provinces, & states annexed to Russia from Sweden, Poland, Turkey, Persia, &c., are as follows:—St. Petersburg, founded by Peter the Great, when Russia conquered Sweden, 1703; Cronstadt town, founded 1702, harbor built 1710; Finland, Principality of (population in 1846, 1,411,952), 1809; the Åland islands (pop. 15,000), 1809; Poland (part annexed to Russia, pop. in 1847, 4,857,700), first dismembered in 1772, & secondly in 1793, & thirdly in 1795, and next in 1801 and 1832; Poland, part of, near Bessarabia and Galicia, in 1792, 1793, 1795; country north from the Crimea, 1774; the Crimea, 1783; country between the Sea of Azoff & Caspian Sea, & north & east from Independent Circassia, 1783; Mingrelia, on Black Sea (pop. 61,000), 1803; Odessa (pop. in 1845, 70,577), country seized in 1789, & town founded 1792; Ganja, south from Georgia, 1803; Imeretia annexed, 1804; Sheki, east from Georgia, 1805; Shirvan, east from Sheki, on Caspian Sea, 1805; Talish, next Persia, and along part of shore of Caspian Sea, 1813; Bessarabia, 1812; Georgia, 1814; Erivan, Nakshivan, Talish, Karabagh, east from Kars & next to Persia, 1828; Akhalzikh (Akhaltsikhe), south from Mingrelia, 1829; country between the mouths of the Danube, 1829; country between Circassia and the Crimea, 1829; Akultzikh; south from Imeretia, 1829, 1828; the forts on the eastern Black Sea in Independent Circassia, at various periods.

RUSSIA IN ASIA embraces Siberia, or the whole of N. Asia, E. of the principal crest of the Ural mntns. [SIBERIA]; & the region of the Caucasus, comprising all the countries situated between the Black & the Caspian Seas, forming a great general government, the cap. of which is Tiflis. It is subdivided into 12 provs., & includes several regions which are only nominally subject to Russia, besides many countries which do not recognize the authority of, & are consequently at war with, that power. [CASPIAN, CAUCASUS, DAGHESTAN, GEORGIA.]

RUSSIAN AMERICA, comprises the whole of the continent of N.W. Am., W. of lon. 141° W., & a strip on the coast extending S. to lat. 55° N., bounded on the E. by British America, S. & W. by the Pacific Ocean, & N. by the Arctic Ocean, & the following island groups: Prince of Wales island, Duke of York Archipelago, George III. Archipelago, the Kodiak islands, & the Aleutian islands. The principal settlement is New Archangel, a small town with 1,000 inhabitants, on the island Sitka, the largest of the group of George III., which is called Baranov by the Russians, & was named George III. by Vancouver. It is the seat of the governor of all the establishments of Russian Amer., & has fortifications, magazines, and governor's residence, all built of wood. There are in the t. 3 cotton fac., 3 tanneries, 2 grist m., 2 saw m., an academy, 21 schools. Pop. 1840, 4,408; 1850, 5,798. The Eastern r. r. passes through it.

SACOMB, a pa. of Engl., co. Herts, 3¼ m. N.N.W. Ware. Area, 1,510 ac. Pop. 313.

SACRAMENTO, river & valley, California. The Sacramento valley extends from 40° 30′ N., to the south 180 miles; comprising within its limits the country from the foot of the Californian Range on the E. to the Coast Range on the W.; its form is that of an oval, the greatest width being at Sacramento City, where it is 50 m. broad. The whole of this extent is an inclined prairie of alluvial, rising about 4 feet to the mile, the upper part being 900 feet above the level of the sea; this is divided into two distinct terraces throughout its length, called the upper & lower prairies. The low undulating hills which form the upper prairie, project into the lower prairie to various distances, & give its boundary an irregular outline; the height of this upper prairie above the lower is about 60 feet, the slope varying, & in some instances is quite steep. Through this valley the Sacramento flows, inclining to the E., from which side it receives its principal tributaries; the largest among these is the Rio de las Plumas, or Feather river, which has several mountain streams running into it, the Yuba, Bear, & Deer. The Feather River joins the Sacramento 15 m. above Sacramento City, & 90 m. from the bay of San Francisco; it is 100 m. in length; its course, after reaching the Sacramento valley, is nearly S., & 50 m. from its mouth dwindles into a mountain stream, taking its rise in the northern part of the Californian range; during the dry season, it is fordable at its mouth, but there are many quicksands, which render it dangerous; the banks are 20 or 30 ft. above the usual level, but, like the Sacramento, it overflows during the season of rains. The American fork joins the Sacramento at Sacramento City, & at its junction is but little more than 100 feet wide, rapid, and shallow; the banks are high and capacious enough to accommodate a large body of water. The tide is felt up as high as the junction, where it rises 2 or 3 ft., but no counter-current is produced. The upper prairie at the head of the Sacramento valley is between 200 & 300 feet above the level of the river, and inclines like the lower prairie to the S.; its width does not exceed 5 m., which is about the average as the valley is descended. Its undulating hills consist of a clayey & sandy loam, gravel, & pebbles, while the soil of the lower prairie is rich alluvial. The southern part of the prairie on the W. side of the river is covered with oaks, which likwise grow on the upper prairie, and as they approach the mountains, become more dense & are intermingled with other forest trees. Nearly in the centre of the lower prairie, between the Sacramento & Feather rivers, stand the Bute hills, which rise to the height of 1,794 feet above the plain, & in diameter some 10 miles. The base is nearly on a level with the upper prairie, & the deposit around them resembles that already described. At the time of floods, the waters of the Sacramento reach their foot, & vast numbers of game seek them for safety. They are of volcanic formation. On the lower prairie are here & there small lakes or ponds, some of which are supplied by streams & others are stagnant. These are surrounded by a thick underwood interwoven with vines, & being sunk many feet below the surface, render it difficult to obtain the water. There are occasional deep & dry gulches, which are filled by watercourses during the rainy season. Towards the latter part of the dry season (September & October), the lower prairie becomes rent in many places by the continued drought.

The valley of San Joaquin is 140 m. in length & 50 miles in width. Its features, as has already been remarked, are different from those of the Sacramento, its terraces not being so well defined, nor are they of the same character. The lower prairie is almost entirely wanting, yet it has two distinct elevations: the difference in level of these divisions averages 40 feet, though in places the rise is almost imperceptible. The soil of the lowest corresponds to that of the upper prairie of the Sacramento, that of the higher terrace is much better. The river San Joaquin passes down the middle of this valley, & from the Californian Range on the E. receives all its tributaries, there being no streams flowing into it from the W. The Chintache & Tule lakes, which unite & occupy a basin of some 70 m. in length by 8 in width, act as a reservoir to this river, receiving the small mountain streams which flow from the Californian Range & the most southern end of this valley. When these lakes rise they connect with the San Joaquin & discharge the surplus water through its channel; the altitude of these lakes above the sea is 1,000 feet, making the fall of the riv. in its descent through the valley equivalent to 7 feet to a mile.

In consequence of the San Joaquin having no lower prairie to overflow, it has cut itself a deeper channel than the Sacramento, & at low water its banks are some 20 or 30 feet higher than those of that river. During the dry season it derives its waters from the W. slope of Sierra Nevada, through the channels of the forks of the San Joaquin, all of which converge & form the main branch in lat. 36° 50′ N., & 119° 25′ W. lon., & by its other tributaries, viz., the Mariposa, Tuolumnes, & Stanislaus rivers; the Cosumnes and Mokelumne enter the slough near its junction with the Sacramento. The slope toward the west from the Californian Range is gradual & easy of ascent, approaching the valley by undulating hills, capable of cultivation, & well covered with timber. The numb. streams enable a large portion of this side to be irrigated. The eastern side of the coast range is destitute of these advantages, & a short time after the rains, suffer all the effects of drought & excessive heat, being deprived even of the winds from the ocean, which may be occasionally enjoyed by the opposite or eastern side, & is consequently comparatively barren & useless. Time has had little effect upon its rocks, which have undergone but little decomposition. The trees on the W. side of the valley are a hardy species of oak, and are very sparsely scattered over the prairie; the ground is almost entirely bare of grasses, & vegetation is only perceived around the pools. This valley is principally valuable for its timber, & the cultivation of the grape, which succeeds better than the cereals. The streams afford positions for water-mills; & as such, will be found useful for the timber. The land above the outlet of Chintache Lake is good soil, and covered with extensive groves of timber, the natural grasses are more abundant & the drought less severe; the streams which flow from the head of the valley discharge themselves into the lakes, but they are much smaller than those emptying into the San Joaquin; as the Californian Range does not here reach the snow line, this will account for the decrease of water in the lakes during the drought, for the supply at that season does not replace the evaporation. Both lakes are surrounded by extensive sloughs, the earth being a rich alluvial deposit from the surrounding mountains, is covered with the tule, which here grows to a large size. This basin is looked upon as one of the most fertile upland districts of California; & quantities of game & animals resort to it for sustenance; its climate is suitable for all the productions of both the temperate & the torrid zones.

The valley of San Juan is situated at the S. of the Bay of San Francisco; it is but small in extent when compared to the other two; but in soil, climate & productions, it exceeds them both; it lies between the hills before spoken of & the Coast Range, being 60 m. in length, extending beyond the Mission of San Juan, and from 15 to 20 m. in width; it is apparently a level plain, but ascends gradually towards the S.; the prairie or plain extends to the foot of the high hills on the E., but on the W. it has undulating hills.

SACRAMENTO, county, Cal. Centrally situated. Area, 950 sq. m. Drained by the American Fork on the N., & the Cosumnes & Mokelumne rivers on the S., all tributaries of the Sacramento, which forms its W. boundary. Surface level on W., & hilly along the extreme eastern part; soil exceedingly fertile. Value of live stock 1852, $1,335,698; of agricultural products, $737,643; horses, 3,729; mules, 1,190; cows, 3,945; beef cattle, 3,718; work oxen, 2,057; sheep, 3,017; hogs, 4,617; wheat, 14,290 bush. produced; barley, 157,071; Indian corn, 1,247; oats, 10,760; potatoes, 28,204; large quantities of garden vegetables. Capital invested in quartz mining, $124,165; in placer mining, $89,803; other mining operations, $169,850. Pop. 12,589, of which 195 were negroes, 80 mulattoes, 62 Indians, & 804 Chinese.

SACRAMENTO, p. o., Marquette co., Wis.

SACRAMENTO CITY, capital Sacramento co., & of the state of California. Situated on the left bank of the river Sacramento, immediately below the junction of the American Fork, 120 m. from the Ocean, & is accessible at all seasons for steamboats of the largest class. It is built on a plain, protected from inundation by a levee, & is surrounded by a highly fertile region. The streets running E. & W. are designated by the letters of the alphabet, & those N. & S. by the numerals. It contains the state house, court house, churches for Baptists, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, & Roman Catholics; an acad., several private banking & forwarding houses, a theatre, several hotels, 400 store houses, an extensive machine shop, iron foundries, steam saw mills, & manufactories of small wares of various kinds, 5 printing offices issuing 4 daily & 3 weekly newspapers, &, 1854, 12,000 inhabitants. The first house was built in 1845, since which time it has increased with the most astonishing rapidity, notwithstanding the great destruction of property from being inundated, & by two fires destroying at each time nearly one-half of the buildings. Gold was first discovered in California at Sutter's Mill, on the American Fork, 50 miles E. from Sacramento, & this section still forms the richest diggings, & draws its supplies of provisions, &c., mostly from Sacramento.

SAINT AUGUSTINE, city, port of entry, & capital of St. Johns co., Flor., 200 E. by S. Tallahassee, 880 W. It is situated 2 miles back from the Atlantic shore, on the S. point of a peninsula, connected with the main land by a narrow isthmus, protected from the swell of the ocean by Anastasia island, not sufficiently high to obstruct the sea breezes or a view of the ocean. The site of the city, though scarcely 12 feet higher than the level of the ocean, is healthy and pleasant, which makes it a favorite resort of invalids from the N. Snow is almost unknown, & frost is felt only one or two months in the year, & in some seasons it is not perceived at all. In the summer the sea breezes temper the heat, & the land breezes render the evenings cool & pleasant. It is in the form of a parallelogram, fronting E. on Matanzas sound, forming a harbor sufficient to contain a large fleet in safety. A bar at the mouth of the harbor has not more than 9 ft. of water at low tide, within which it is 18 or 20 feet. The city is one mile long, & three fourths of a mile wide. The principal streets cross each other at right angles, & are narrow, & some of the streets are very crooked. The houses are generally built of stone, two stories high. A fine large square opens from the Matanzas into the E. part of the place, on the W. side of which stands the court house, which contains the public offices. On the N. side is situate a splendid Rom. Catholic church. On the S. side is Trinity church, a neat Gothic structure. In front of the harbor is a neat market place, & the intervals around the square are filled up with dwelling houses & shade groves. Fort Marion stands at the N. end of the town, & completely commands the harbor. The city contains 4 churches,—1 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, & 1 Rom. Catholic,—an U. S. land office, 20 dry goods & groceries, various mechanic shops, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper, & 1,834 inhabitants. In the S. part of the t., fronting the Matanzas, are extensive barracks. A regular packet runs to Charleston.

SAINT JOHN, county, N. B. Extends along the northern shore of the Bay of Fundy for 70 miles, its average breadth being 8 miles. The coast line is almost entirely composed of barren rocks; but, owing to its vicinity to the city of St. John, much of the land in the valleys & less elevated parts have been carefully cultivated, producing good crops, especially of potatoes & other garden vegetables. Its coast line is indented with numerous small bays, & the St. John crosses the county & forms a good harbor. Capital, St. John. There were in the county in 1851, neat cattle 3,738; sheep, 3,747; swine, 1,550; horses, 1,219; wheat, 249 bush. produced; Indian corn, 168; buckwheat, 9,758; barley, 510; oats, 30,961; potatoes, 105,695; peas, 255;—14 grist m., 51 saw m.; 17 tanneries, 56 persons employed; 6 iron foundries;—40 churches; 108 schools, 1,992 scholars. Pop. 38,475.

SAINT JOHN, county, Can. E. Situated toward the S.W. part of the province, bordering on New York. Area, 350 sq. m. Drained by several small streams entering Richelieu r., on its E. border. Surface undulating; soil very fertile. Capital, St. Jean. Formed from Huntingdon co. by the representation act of 1853. Pop. 15,226.

SAINT JOHN, city & seaport of the province of New Brunswick. Situated on a rocky peninsula, on the left bank of the river St. John, at its entrance into the Bay of Fundy. Lat. of lighthouse on Partridge I., at the entrance of the harbor, 45° 14′ 06″ N., lon. 66° 3′ 30″ W. from Greenwich, Eng. Pop. 1840, 20,716; 1852, 22,745; 1854, 25,000. It is built on rugged & uneven ground; the streets are regularly laid out, & some are very steep, especially those leading from the lower to the upper parts of the city; a projecting rock divides the lower portion, called respectively the upper & lower coves, and in the former the warehouses & public wharves are built, furnishing extensive accommodations for shipping. The principal edifices are of brick or stone, & consist of a city hall, 16 churches,—3 Baptist, 1 Congregational, 1 Christian Baptist, 3 Episcopal, 3 Methodist, 3 Presbyterian (1 of which belongs to the Scotch Presbyterians, 1 to the New Brunswick presbytery, & of the Reformed church of Irel.), & 2 R. Cath. The provincial lunatic asylum, a provincial penitentiary, a marine hospital, &c. It has 2 banks, aggregate cap. $250,000, a savings' bank, 3 insurance offices, a Madras school, a public grammar school, a society library, a mechanics' institute, a chamber of commerce, &c. The city is divided into 7 wards, & governed by a mayor, 7 aldermen, & 7 councillors; is lighted with gas, & well supplied with water by a joint stock company. A suspension bridge connects the suburb of Carlton, on the right bank of the river, which contains 3 churches.—1 Baptist, 1 Episcopal, & 1 Presbyterian.—& 2,000 inhabitants. The harbor of St. John is commodious, safe, & never obstructed by ice. On Partridge island is a battery & lighthouse; & on a shoal, dry at low water, is a lighted beacon. The commerce of St. John is extensive, the exports amounting in value, in 1852, to £714,860; of imports, same year, £1,063,554. There were registered, same year, at St. John, 78 new vessels, of an aggregate burden of 39,033 tons. The fisheries within the harbor are valuable; the take yearly amounts to about 15,000 barrels of herrings, 3,000 of salmon, & 2,000 of shad, besides supplying the markets of the city with a variety of other kinds of fish. The city was founded by the loyalists, who left the United States at the close of the war of the revolution, & has suffered severely by fires at different periods, especially in 1837, when 115 houses & stores were consumed. The r. St. John, at its entrance into the harbor, passes through a fissure in the solid rock, exhibiting every appearance of having been occasioned by some convulsion of nature. The great mass of water is forced through a channel only 450 feet wide, rushes downwards with great velocity, forming the falls, which are simply a sluice on a grand scale. "The ordinary tides rise below the falls 26 feet; above the falls their common elevation is only about 18 inches; therefore the fall outwards is 24 feet 6 inches. The entrance of the river at the gorge is too narrow to admit the sea or the flood tide to flow in freely, &, therefore, there is the singular occurrence of a fall inwards at high water, & a fall outwards at low water." The falls are level, or it is still water, at about three and a half hours on the flood & about two & a half on the ebb, so that they are passable four times in twenty-four hours, about ten or fifteen minutes at each time. No other rule can be given, as much depends on the floods in the river St. John, & the time of high water or full sea, which is often hastened by high southerly winds. For a few days in the spring of the year, the height of water in the river St. John renders the passage of the falls extremely difficult.

SAINT JOHN BAPTIST, par., La. Situated in the S.E. part of the state, a little W. of New Orleans. Area, 260 sq. m. The Mississippi r. passes through it, & Lake Pontchartrain lies on its N.E. border. The only land capable of cultivation is on the margin of the streams, & is very fertile. It produces cotton & sugar. Capital, Bonnet Carre. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $205,450; Ind. corn, 188,390 bush. produced; sugar, 11,935 hhds.; molasses, 638,230 gals.;—2 saw m. Cap. employed in manufac., $31,200; value of manufactured articles, $77,450;—1 church; 9 schools, 452 scholars. Pop. 1840, 5,776; 1850, 7,317.

SAINT JOHNS, r., Me., rises by several branches in Somerset co. Its head waters approach near to those of the Chaudiere, in Canada, & the Penobscot, in Me., & by a broad sweep it passes through the N. part of Maine, & below the entrance of St. Francis r. it forms the N. boundary of Maine until it crosses the United States boundary into New Brunswick, in about lat. 47° N., where it pursues a S. & S.E. course until it enters the Bay of Fundy. The Aroostook, a large tributary, rises in the N. part of Penobscot co., & crossing Aroostook county enters it in New Brunswick. The St. Johns is navigable for sloops of 50 tons 80 miles from its mouth; and, with the exception of 2 short portages, nearly to its source, a distance of 350 m. The free navigation of this river, by the treaty of Washington, will benefit both the State of Maine & New Brunswick.

SAINT JOHNS, r., Flor. This r., or sound, rises in an immense marsh, elevated but little above the level of the ocean, & flows northwardly nearly parallel with the ocean, until it turns suddenly to the E. & flows into the Atlantic. It receives in the upper part of its course the Ocklawaha, a large branch, previous to which it passes through Lake George. Its whole course is about 250 m. It often spreads from 3 to 5 m. in width, though in other places it is not more than one-fourth of a mile wide. Vessels requiring 8 feet water enter Lake George & Dunns Lake, 150 m. from its mouth. At its entrance, it has 12 feet of water on the bar, & it is here only 1 m. wide. The light-house on the S. side of the r. at its entrance, is in lat. 30° 20′ 30″ N. lon. 81° 33′ W. from Greenwich, Engl. Built in 1829, shows a fixed white light elevated 65 feet above the level of the sea, & is visible for a distance of 12¼ nautical miles. Tonnage of the port 1852, 417.

SAINT JOHNS, county, Flor. Situated on the Atlantic border. Area, 972 sq. m. Drained by St. Johns & North rivers, & Matanzas sound. It produces cotton, Indian corn, & sugar cane; & of fruits, oranges, citron, & lemons. It has much fertile land, & some incapable of cultivation. Live oak is extensively found bordering the St. Johns river. Capital, St. Augustine. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $29,800; rice, 426 pounds produced; sugar, 290 hhds.; molasses, 6,325 gals.;—a saw m.; 1 printing office, 1 weekly newspaper pub. Cap. employed in manufac., $6,310; value of manufac. articles, $16,450;—4 churches; 3 acad., 160 pupils; 1 school, 50 scholars. Pop. 1840, 2,694; 1850, 2,525.

SAINT JOHNS, p-v., Welland co., Can. W. It has 2 stores, a woollen fac., a plough fac., a number of mills, & 150 inhabitants.

SAINT JOHNS, p-o., Au Glaize co., O., 95 N. W. Columbus, 480 W.

SAINT JOHNS, a t., seaport, & capital of the isl. & British colony Newfoundland, North America, near the extremity of the most E. of the numerous peninsulas which project from the E. portion of the island; lat. 47° 33′ 6″ N.; lon. 52° 43′ W. (B); on an acclivity, & consisting chiefly of one street about 1 m. in length, rather irregularly built, but containing many good shops & stores; the former mostly of stone. The houses in this part of the town are small, & built of brick; but in the upper parts they are of wood. Pop. 1850, 19,000; in 1852, 21,000 (resident), 6,000 fishermen. The town, however, has, upon the whole, been much improved since the fire of 1846, both as regards the style of building, & the width & regularity of the streets. It is well supplied with water & gas, the former brought from a pond on an adjoining eminence, called Signal Hill. The public buildings, exclusive of the churches, are, the government-house, a large plain structure; house of assembly, a handsome building of granite; a lunatic asylum, hospital, & the market & custom houses, the upper story of the former used as a court-room. There are nine places of worship,—3 Episcopalian, 1 Established Church of Scotland, 1 Free Church, 1 Methodist, 1 U. Presbyterian, & 2 Roman Catholic. The educational institutions comprise two schools in connection with the Church of England, one in connection with the Established Church of Scotland, & two in connection with the R. Catholic church. There are several societies, religious & benevolent, a mechanics' institute, with museum, library, & reading-room attached; & an agricultural society, a brewery, distillery, flour mill and foundry, a botanic garden, marine promenade, & three cemeteries. The trade of St. Johns consists chiefly in supplying the fishermen, most of whom are Roman Catholics, with clothing, provisions, & fishing & hunting gear. The harbor of St. Johns is excellent, although narrow at the entrance; the channel, from point to point, being only 360 fathoms wide. The tide rises 5 feet, neap-tides 3½ feet, but very irregularly, being much influenced by the winds. The narrows leading to the harbor are protected by a battery. During the spring season, the harbor is thronged with merchant vessels from London, Liverpool, Poole, and Greenock, laden with dry goods, & salt for curing, &c.; from Hamburg and Copenhagen with biscuits, butter, pork, glassware, earthernware, & hosiery; from the U. States with butter, pork, beef, & flour; from Spain & Portugal with salt, wines, & preserves; and from Barbadoes, & some of the other West India isls., with sugar, molasses, & rum. The export fish trade commences early in August, when, & for some weeks previously, numbers of Spanish vessels arrive, bringing cargoes of sugar & molasses, the proceeds of which they invest in cod-fish. Besides its fisheries, St. John's is extensively engaged in sealing; from 150 to 200 schooners & brigs, varying from 70 to 120 tons, muster in the harbor in the months of February & March, preparatory to proceeding to the sealing ground. The town is overrun with dogs, which make a great noise during the night; but are useful, although of vicious tempers, being employed in dragging catamarans loaded with wood. St. Johns was nearly destroyed by fire in 1846.

SAINT JOHNS, or DORCHESTER, p-t., Chambly co., Can. E., 27 m. S.E. Montreal, on the Champlain & St. Lawrence railroad. It contains 5 churches,—2 Episcopal, 1 Methodist, & 2 Rom. Catholic,—26 stores, a tannery, a foundry, a weekly newspaper, and 2,500 inhabitants.

SAINT JOHNSBURY, p-t., Caledonia co., Vt., 7 E. Danville, 37 N.E. Montpelier, 546 W. Surface uneven; soil fertile. Drained by Passumpsic r. & its tributaries. Chartered in 1786. First settled in 1788. The v. at the centre is on the Connecticut & Passumpsic rivers r. r., 61 m. from White river junction, and has 3 churches,—1 Congregational, 1 Methodist, & 1 Universalist,—a bank, 2 stores, a grist m., a saw m., a tannery, a printing office issuing a weekly newspaper, & 350 inhabitants. There are in the town 3 falling m., 3 tanneries, 5 grist m., 7 saw m., a blast furnace, a machine shop, 'Fairbanks' extensive balance factory, 2 potteries, an academy, 15 schools. Pop. 1840, 1,887; 1850, 2,758.

SAINT JOSEPH, p-t., Berrien co., Mich., 195 W. by S. Detroit, 652 W. Drained by St. Joseph & Pawpaw rivers, which unite in the town. Lake Michigan bounds it on the W. The v. is situated on the S. side of St. Joseph river, at its entrance into the lake. It contains 2 churches,—1 Episcopal & 1 Roman Catholic, —12 stores, 4 large forwarding & commission houses, a bank, 2 steam saw m., & 1,000 inhabitants. It is one of the most important ports on the W. side of the peninsula. A pier has been constructed, 2,000 feet of wharf built, & vessels drawing 6½ feet of water can enter the harbor. A bridge across the St. Joseph river here, cost $15,000. There in the town 2 saw m. Pop. 1840, 489; 1850, 1,250.

SAINT JOSEPH, p. v., Buchanan co., Mo., 160 N. W. Jefferson City. Situated on the left bank of Missouri r., & contains 3 churches,—1 Baptist, 1 Methodist, & 1 Roman Catholic,—20 stores, & 1,200 inhabs.

SAINT JOSEPH DE MASKINONGE, or MASKINONGE, v., St. Maurice co., Can. E., on the left bank of the River St. Lawrence, 60 m. N. Quebec. It has a Roman Catholic church, 10 stores, several mills, & 450 inhabitants.

SAINT JOSEPHS, bay, Flor., lies within Cape St. Blas, a long & crooked peninsula. The bay is 20 m. long, & from 7 to 8 wide, with a broad entrance from the N.W., near Cape False, affording 17 feet of water on the bar. A middle ground occupies much of the space between Cape False & the peninsula, having from 9 to 11 feet of water. There is a channel on the S.E. side of the entrance close to the peninsula, nearly equal in depth to the N.W. passage. The water becomes more shoal 4 miles from the S.E. end of the bay. There is a picturesque island, 2 miles from the S.E. end, covered with live oak, cedar, & palms. The N.E. shore is intersected by ponds & lagoons.

SAINT JOSEPHS, r. of the Maumee, Mich., rises, by several branches, in the central part of Hillsdale co., & flows a southwesterly course, across a corner of Ohio into Indiana, & joins the St. Mary's at Fort Wayne, forming Maumee r. It affords much water power.

SAINT JOSEPHS, r. of Lake Michigan, rises in the N.E. part of Hillsdale co., & flows E., & after a broad southerly bend, in which it enters Indiana, it proceeds N.W. until it enters Lake Michigan. In length and volume of water it is the second river in the state, being 250 miles long, but in a direct line not more than 150 miles. It is navigable for keel boats 130 miles, to Lockport. At its mouth is a good harbor, and, by a pier, is sufficient for any number of vessels required by the lake navigation. There is a sand bar at its mouth, which has 6 feet of water. The light-house is on the right bank at its entrance into Lake Michigan. It receives many tributaries, & affords much water power. Its intervales are very fertile, in some places, heavily timbered.

SAINT JOSEPHS, island, Mich. Situated in the straits of St. Mary, between George's island on the N. W. & Drummond's island on the S.E. It is 20 miles long & 8 broad, at its medial breadth, dividing the passage into two parts. The S.W. passage is called Muddy lake, & the United States boundary passes through it. On its S. extremity are the remains of an old British fort.

SAINT JOSEPHS county, Mich. Situated in the S. part of the state. Area, 528 sq. m. Organized in 1829. Drained by St. Joseph's river & its branches, Prairie, Portage, Rocky, & Pigeon rivers. The surface is undulating; soil very fertile. Capital, Centreville. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $345,945; wheat, 265,011 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 431,327; oats, 114,308; wool, 68,137 pounds;—12 flouring and grist m., 21 saw m.; 4 iron foundries, a woollen fac., 6 distilleries; 2 printing offices, 2 weekly newspapers pub. Cap. employed in manufac., $270,655; value of manufactured articles, $447,892;—14 churches; 103 schools, 4,338 scholars; 16 libraries, 4,338 volumes. Pop. 1840, 768; 1850, 12,725.

SAINT JOSEPHS, county, Ia. Situated in the N. part of the state, bordering on Mich. Area, 468 sq. m. Drained by St. Josephs r. & Kankakee r., which, with other streams, afford water power. The surface is level, with many fine prairies & timber land in the south. The soil is fertile. Capital, South Bend. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $246,054; wheat, 161,956 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 346,841; oats, 109,516; wool, 31,167 pounds;—6 flouring & grist m., 6 saw m.; 4 tanneries, 13 persons emp.; 1 printing office, 1 weekly newspaper pub.;—17 churches; 2 acad., 60 pupils; 47 schools, 1,353 scholars; 1 library, 275 vols. Pop. 1840, 6,425; 1850, 10,954.

SAINT LAURENT, p-v., Montreal co., Can E., 6 m. distant from the city of Montreal. It contains a Roman Catholic church & 250 inhabitants. Pop. of pa. 2,623.

SAINT LAURENT (D'ORLEANS), p. v. & pa., Montmorency co., Can. E., & on the Isl. of Orleans, 15 m. N. E. Quebec. It has a Roman Catholic church, 2 stores, 4 saw m., & 900 inhabitants.

SAINT LAWRENCE, r., U. S. & Canada, forms the outlets of the great lakes Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie & Ontario, & after a course of more than 2,000 miles, flows into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It forms the boundary, with the middle of the lakes through which it passes, between the United States & Canada, until it arrives at the 45th degree of N. lat. It has different names in different parts of its course. From its mouth to Lake Ontario it is called the St. Lawrence; between Lakes Ontario & Erie, Niagara r.; between Lakes Erie & St. Clair, Detroit r.; between Lakes St. Clair & Huron, St. Clair r.; & between Lakes Huron & Superior, St. Marys r. It is navigable for ships of the line 400 miles, to Quebec; & for ships of 600 tons to Montreal. The distance from Montreal to Lake Ontario is nearly 200 miles. From Quebec to Montreal, it has an average breadth of 2 miles. At its mouth, the Gulf, from Cape Rosier to Mingau settlement, in Labrador, is 105 miles in length. The elevation from tide-water to Lake Ontario (exceeding two hundred feet) is overcome by seven canals of various lengths, from 12 miles to one mile (but in the aggregate only forty-one miles of canal), having locks two hundred feet in length between the gates, & forty-five feet in width, with an excavated trunk, from one hundred to one hundred & forty wide on the water surface, and a depth of ten feet water. From Lake Ontario to Lake Erie an elevation of three hundred and thirty feet is surmounted by a canal twenty-eight miles in length, with about thirty cut stone locks one hundred and fifty feet long, by twenty-six & a half feet wide, designed for propellers & sail craft. These locks will pass a craft of about five hundred tons burden, while those on the St. Lawrence have a capacity double this amount. The total cost of this navigation may be set down at $12,000,000. The St. Lawrence canal was designed for paddle-steamers, which are required as tugs, or to ascend against the current; but from the magnitude of the rapids & their regular inclination, the aid of the locks is not required in descending the river. At some of the rapids there are obstacles preventing the descent of deeply-laden craft, but the government are about to give the main channel in all the rapids a depth of ten feet water, when the whole descending trade by steam will keep the river, leaving the canals to the ascending craft.

SAINT LAWRENCE, county, N. Y. Situated toward the N.E. part of the state. Area, 2,717 sq. m. The surface is diversified by gentle swells, broad valleys & extended tracts of level country. In the S. E. part it is hilly & mountainous. The soil is generally productive. The St. Lawrence river runs on its N. W. border for a distance of 75 miles. Drained by St. Regis, Racket, Grass, Oswegatchie, & Indian rivs., & their tributaries. Black lake is an expansion of Indian r., 20 m. long & 2 wide. There are other small lakes. In the town of Canton, a natural canal, 6 miles long & from 30 to 80 yards wide, connects Oswegatchie & grass rivers, & is boatable. Lead ore is extensively found in the vicinity of Rossie v. Iron ore is extensively found—some of it magnetic. Marble is abundant. The Northern railroad passes through the county in an easterly direction from Ogdensburg. Cap., Canton. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $2,144,176; wheat, 289,956 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 244,690; oats, 353,993; wool, 287,900 lbs.;—27 flouring & grist m., 9 iron foundries, 6 woollen fac; 24 tanneries, 5 persons employed; 7 printing offices, 7 weekly newspapers pub. Cap. employed in manuf., $1,141,370; value of manufactured articles, $1,782,617;—94 churches; 18 academies, 972 pupils; 436 schools, 23,050 scholars; 437 libraries, 43,672 vols. Pop. 1840, 56,706; 1850, 68,617.

SAINT LOUIS, r., Minnesota Ter., after a course of about 200 miles, flows into Fond du Lac, the W. end of Lake Superior. It is much obstructed by falls and rapids.

SAINT LOUIS, county, Mo. Situated on the E. border of the state. Area, 550 sq. m. The Mississippi r. runs on its E. boundary, & the Missouri r. on the N. W. The surface is undulating; soil generally very fertile. Maramec r. runs partly on its S. border and partly within it. Capital, St. Louis. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $394,856; wheat, 98,430 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 668,210; oats, 138,837; wool, 13,245 pounds;—20 flouring & grist m., 11 saw m.; 17 printing offices, 7 daily, 3 tri-weekly, 1 semi-weekly, & 12 weekly newspapers, & 6 monthly publications, —58 churches; 1 college, 250 students; 63 academies, 3,992 pupils; 55 schools, 2,514 scholars; 10 libraries, 37,900 volumes. Pop. 1840, 35,979; 1850, 104,978.

SAINT LOUIS, city, Mo., capital. St. Louis county is situated on the right bank of the Mississippi, in lat. 38° 37′ 28″ N., & lon. 90° 15′ 16″ W. from Greenwich, & is one of the largest & most flourishing cities in the great valley of the Mississippi. It is 1,200 miles above New Orleans, & 1,350 miles above the mouth of the river. About 180 miles south of the city, the Ohio comes in to the Great Father of Waters, from its eastern sources in the Alleghanies, after a course of 1,000 miles, while a short distance above its mouth, the Cumberland & the Tennessee pour their streams into La Belle Riviere. To the northward, 17 miles, the mighty Missouri pours out its turbid stream into the Mississippi, & the waters flow down to the very front of the city, before the clear waters of the Mississippi yield themselves to the embraces of the great rivers of the West, coming down from the snows of the Rocky Mountains 2,000 miles away. At a distance of 33 miles to the northward, the Illinois—now connected with the lakes by the Illinois & Michigan canal—comes in from the north east, & is navigated by St. Louis boats as far as the junction of the canal & river at La Salle, 290 miles from St. Louis. Boats start from St. Louis regularly for the following points on the different rivers, and nothing shows more forcibly the immense inland navigation of which St. Louis is the great centre. From St. Louis to St. Anthony's falls on the Upper Mississippi, almost due north, a distance of 771 miles; from St. Louis to New Orleans, due south, 1,200 miles; from St. Louis to St. Joseph on the Missouri, 485 miles, (while every spring the fur-traders send steamboats up as far as the mouth of the Yellow Stone, a distance of 1,500 miles)—from St. Louis to La Salle, 290 miles; from St. Louis to Pittsburg, 1,100 miles, thus making 3,846 miles of direct steamboat navigation, centering at St. Louis. The amount of this navigation may be seen, when it is stated that the steamboat arrivals alone, for the year ending December 28th, 1853, were 3,307, and their aggregate tonnage 835,937 tons. St. Louis is the centre of a great railroad system, radiating to all parts of the Union. The system, as at present planned, may be stated as follows: The Pacific Road with its branches. This road runs from St. Louis to the Maramec river, the main line then crosses the divide between the Maramec & the Missouri to Jefferson city, the capital of the state; thence leaving the river, it runs directly to the mouth of the Kansas river, to be extended to the Pacific, through the great chain of the Rocky Mountains. This road is 311.60 miles in length; will be finished to Jefferson city the coming winter, & to Kansas in 1856.

The south-west branch of the Pacific railroad, leaves the main road at Franklin on the borders of St. Louis county, & then runs south-westwardly, crosses the Gasconade river, & then follows the divide between the waters of the Osage & Gasconade, to the south-west corner of the state, ready to be projected thence to the Pacific by any southern pass that may be discovered, whether that be Coocha Tope, or any other. The road most nearly finished is the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, connecting the St. Louis with Cincinnati, & the different roads radiating from that point. This road is 340 miles in length & will be completed by 1855, at a cost of about $10,000,000. It has the broad six-foot gauge, as has also the Atlantic & Mississippi, which connects St. Louis with Terre Haute, and the great lines of the Indiana & Ohio railroad, & their eastern connections. This road was put under contract in the spring of 1854, & will be finished in 1856. The Chicago & Mississippi railroad, connecting the cities of Alton & Chicago, is completed. This road runs two lines of packets, between St. Louis & Alton, thus connecting St. Louis with Chicago. Two companies are authorized to build roads between Alton & St. Louis. The Belleville road connects St. Louis with the thriving & busy town of Belleville, the county of St. Clair, Ill., & is about 20 miles in length. This town is a place of considerable importance as a manufacturing town, & bids fair to grow to a large size, as it affords great facilities as a manufacturing suburb of St. Louis, being underlaid by a fine bed of coal. It is proposed to extend this road to the Ohio river at Paducah, connecting with the roads to Mobile & New Orleans. To the northward direct, the North Missouri railroad is in process of construction, is completed to St. Charles on the Missouri river, & will be to the line of the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad by 1856, and to the state line in 1857. From the state line, a company has been chartered to carry the road onward through Iowa, to the Falls of St. Anthony, & the Red River of the north. To the southward, the St. Louis & Iron mountain railroad is under construction, to the Iron Mountain & Pilot Knob, those wonderful upheavals of the furnaces of the pre-Adamite world. This road will be completed in 1856, as far as the Iron mountain. Thence it will be extended by the way of the Chalk Bluffs, through Arkansas to the New Orleans roads at Fulton. Another extension connects this road with the Tennessee & Kentucky roads at some point on the Mississippi, below the mouth of the Ohio.

This chain of railroads, the North Missouri & its extensions, with the Iron mountain road & its extensions, will form the Great Mississippi Valley railroad, connecting the far south & the far north, thus binding in still closer union these extremes of the valley. Heretofore the commerce of St. Louis has been exclusively carried on her rivers, as r. r. cannot compete with water navigation in the carriage of heavy freights. Passengers & very valuable goods will take the quickest route, while freights will take the cheapest, & it is evident that nothing that we know of as yet, can compete in cheapness with water carriage, especially for long distances.

St. Louis is now the second city of the great valley in the amount of its commerce; it will soon be the first, for it will be found that the great centre of the internal commerce of a country, will be the great city of the country. The prospect is, that St. Louis will be the great centre of mining & manufacturing interests in a few years. No state more abounds with minerals than Missouri. The south-eastern part of the state is completely a mineral region, abounding in ores of lead, copper, iron, zinc, cobalt, nickel, coal, & other minerals. Lead abounds all through the southern parts of the state, & is found on the head waters of the Gasconade & the Osage rivers. Beds of the finest coal are found in different parts of the state. On the Osage river, coal, limestone, and iron are found close together, & overlying each other. On the Pacific road near the Osage, a cannel coal is found in inexhaustible quantities, some of the seams are thirty feet thick. On the south-west branch of this road, the lead, iron, & copper regions are reached in about fifty m., & are now worked. With the junction of the Pacific road & the south west branch at Franklin, the lead, copper, iron, & coal, will be brought with a total transportation of only 110 miles, 30 for the metals & 80 for the coal. The North Missouri also passes over fine fields of coal, which will be called into use as soon as the road is built. The Iron mountain r. r. strikes the mineral region at the distance of 30 miles from the city, & from that point until it comes out on the borders of Arkansas, it passes through a tract exceedingly rich in mineral treasures.

The iron at the Iron Mountain has been estimated at 210,000,000 tons above the surface. This hill seems to be a solid mass of iron ore, 600 feet high. Near this road, soapstone, kaolin, & pottery clay of the finest quality, are found. Coal is found in the immediate vicinity of St. Louis. The mineral region of this state is not a barren territory, but is covered with heavy timber, and is capable of cultivation up to the very mouth of the pits. On the head waters of the Maramec & Gasconade yellow pine is found in large quantities, but generally the timber is oak. With such natural advantages, requiring only capital, skill, and energy to develop them, St. Louis will soon become a great centre of manufacturing interest, and she will soon be as much noted for her furnaces, forges, foundries, as she is now for her cotton trade. Some few facts may give an idea how the manufactures of this city advance. Ten years ago there were but 3 foundries in the city; in 1854, there are more than 20 busily and profitably engaged, in turning out steam engines, machinery, &c. One establishment engaged in the building of locomotives for the Pacific, Ohio, & Mississippi roads, employs 150 men. One stove foundry made 8,000 stoves in 1850. The St. Louis Rolling Mill, in the upper part of the city, was erected in 1850. The mill is 256 feet long, and 130 wide. Thirty-nine furnaces are in operation, subdivided as follows: 11 boiler, 2 scrap, 1 lump, 3 bar mills, 2 billet, 2 slab, 2 sheet, 1 dandy, 1 annealing, 1 nail-plate, 2 railroad chairs, & 1 spike and rivet machine. The main supplies of iron from this mill are derived from the Iron Mountain, & its weekly products average 120 tons of finished iron, in the shape of bar iron, boiler plate, sheets, nails, railroad & boat spikes, rivets, & railroad chairs. It employs 314 hands & 39 wagons & carts, & consumes 1,500 bushels of coal daily. There are several large furniture manufs., producing large quantities of work, one of which turns out 250 bedsteads, 50 tables, & 100 bureaus per week. A soap & star candle factory on Park Avenue, W. of 7th street, turns out annually, 1,020,000 lbs. of star candles, 1,200,000 of tallow, 4,500,000 of soap, 240,000 gals. of lard oil; aggregate value, $500,000. St. Louis is celebrated for its saddlery & harness manufactories. In 1846, one house employed 25 hands & produced $40,000 worth of goods. In 1846, the sales were $60,000; in 1847, $100,000. In 1853, the products were $175,000. Connected with this manufactory, is a tree factory, in which Grimsly's patent dragoon saddle-trees, & all kinds of Spanish saddle-trees covered with raw hide, are made. This factory turns out $25,000 of work per annum, & employs 20 hands. There are several other large establishments, & the business is increasing every year. About 450 hands are engaged in this business, & the annual product is estimated at $1,000,000. There are several large planing mills, doing a large & profitable business, one of which employs from 65 to 70 men constantly. The St. Louis Shot Tower is 175 feet high, and does so heavy a business as to defy competition. The company manuf. 16 sizes patent shot, 6 sizes buck shot, & different sized bullets for the Indian trade and other uses, & also supply the trade with small bar lead. This establishment consumes 5,000,000 lbs. of lead, of the value of $300,000, & employs 30 hands. The machinery is propelled by steam, & the lead is raised by steam power. One house produces 600 boxes of starch per week, & its annual product is $300,000, & the business is increasing. The largest sugar refinery in the West, is on Main and Lewis streets & the river. The principal building fronts 240 feet on Lewis street, by 80 feet deep, & is 6 stories high; the Boiler, Engine, & Retort house is 45 feet front by 240 feet deep, & an additional refinery building, 60 feet front by 130 feet deep, 6 stories high. The new retort house is 48 feet front by 130 deep. On the block south of the refinery, is a row of fire-proof warehouses for their own use, fronting 200 feet on Lewis street, by 125 feet deep, and 4 stories high. Two squares distant, on the west side of Main street, is the cooper's shop, a stone building 200 feet front by 90 feet deep, & 2 stories high, with a cellar under the whole building; the stave yard is 90 by 250 feet. The consumption of raw sugar is 20,000 tons, or 40,000,000 lbs., worth, when manuf., $2,500,000. The refinery employs 300 hands, the cooper shop 100 hands, who make casks, &c., for refined sugar, syrups, & molasses. The coal is obtained from their own coal banks, owned by the concern, in the Illinois bluffs, about 7 miles from the city, which distance it is hauled in waggons. The whole number of men employed in this establishment cannot be less than 500, besides the mechanics employed in building and enlarging the works. The capacity of their works is now equal to the consumption of 30,000 tons, or 60,000,000 lbs. of raw sugar annually. A great object of attraction at this place is the Artesian well which the Messrs. Belchers are digging to supply their works with pure water. This has penetrated through 2,200 feet of rock. It was commenced with a cistern 15 ft. deep, thence to the depth of 80 feet, the well is 16 inches in diameter; the next 380 feet is 9 inches diameter, and the remainder 3¼ inches diameter. The work is driven by a steam engine, & is worked most of the time day & night. The first 1,500 ft. were through solid limestone, since then it has passed through sandstone, clay, & limestone. An abundant supply of water was obtained at a depth of 1,700 ft., but the water contains sulphur and salt. They expect to strike clear & sweet water at a depth of 2,500 feet. The cotton factory employs 110 hands & runs 1,000 spindles, mostly making cotton yarns. The proprietors intend putting in looms to weave one-half their yarns into brown sheeting. One lead-pipe & sheet-lead fac. manuf. 2,800,000 lbs. of lead. There are other large establishments engaged in making carriages, saws, braces & bits, wooden & willow ware, brushes, and the other different articles. The Pacific railroad is manufacturing its own cars, & a car factory is now proposed by capitalists, to prepare cars for the different roads now in progress. There are 36 breweries in the city, producing about 216,000 barrels, valued at $1,050,000. There are seven different Omnibus lines, having over 100 omnibuses, and requiring 426 head of horses & mules, & employing 150 men, & a capital of $140,000. The number of bricks made in 1854, was 36,000,000. Very many large & fine buildings were erected, & in all parts of the city the demand for buildings & houses of all descriptions is far ahead of the supply.

The steamboat tonnage of this city will appear from the following tables. For the year ending June 30, 1853, the following cities stood entered on the books of the Custom House as follows:

	1850.	1851.	1853.
St. Louis	24,995	34,065	45,441
Cincinnati	16,906	14,187	10,191
Nashville	3,776	3,587	3,414
Louisville	14,820	12,937	14,166

thus showing an increase at the rate of 10,000 tons per year. For the year ending Dec. 31, 1853, the sugar landed at St. Louis, was 50,774 hhds., 13,993 bbls., 46,257 boxes & bags; molasses 54,933 bbls. & hhds. For this article, St. Louis is the great central supply mart. By the government returns, all the sugar shipped from New Orleans for 1852, was 50,793 hhds., & 6,584 bbls., while St. Louis imported 50,774 hhds., & 13,993 bbls. The whole imports of coffee into the United States in 1853, were 199,089,823 pounds, & of this St. Louis imported 16,714,720, or about one-twelfth. To show the business of the year, we give the receipts of certain articles, with increase & decrease as follows:

The city government is vested in a mayor and subordinate officers, and a common council. The mayor is elected annually. The council consists of a Board of Aldermen, elected for two years, & a Board of Delegates elected annually. The recorder, who exercises the judicial function, under the ordinances of the city, is elected every two years. The remaining elective offices, are Auditor, Treasurer, Comptroller, Superintendent of Water Works, & Superintendent of Work House. The population in 1820, was 4,123; 1830, 6,694; 1840, 16,649; 1850, 74,439; 1852, 94,000; 1854, 114,650. The assessed value of the real estate was in 1840, $8,682,506.00; 1846, $15,055,720.99; 1850, $29,676,649.24; 1853, $39,397,186.33. The city is supplied with water, by reservoirs filled from water pumped up from the river by steam pumps, & these reservoirs are now so much improved & enlarged as to hold 900,000 cubic ft., 7,000,000 gallons of water. The works are now being enlarged, as the supply is hardly equal to the demand. The pipe through which it is distributed through the city, is over 30 m. in length, & is continually extending. There are 33 m. of street paving, or macadamizing, & 100 miles of sidewalk. The paved wharf is one mile in length. There are now building about thirteen miles of sewers. The gas is supplied by a company, which has laid 34½ miles of pipe, & supplies 1,107 street public lamps. The Fire Department has 796 enrolled members, distributed among ten companies. There are 14 volunteer military corps, comprising dragoons, artillery, riflemen, & infantry, organized into a battalion, & a regiment. There are six parks, only one of which is improved. St. Louis, containing 30 acres; Exchange Square, 7 acres; Washington Square, 6¾ ac.; Carr Square, 2½ ac. There is a spacious city hospital, completed in 1847, & one established by the Sisters of Charity, a Juvenile Reform School, a Home for the Friendless, an Asylum for the Blind, an United States Marine Hospital, & other charitable institutions.

Bellefontaine Cemetery, about five miles north of the city, contains 221 acres. The Roman Catholic Cemetery contains 130 acres; this is not yet fully laid out. Besides these are the Wesleyan Cemetery, & others.

The debt of the city is nominally $2,700,000, but a large proportion of this has been contracted by her subscription to railroads. The corporate property owned by the city is estimated at $1,845,304, by the Board of Assessors. The works for the improvement of the harbor have succeeded in confining the whole body of water of the river between Bloody Island, & the St. Louis shore, a distance of nearly five miles, and have cost the city $250,000. Congress, by the acts of 13th June, 1812, & 26th January, 1831, gave to inhabitants for the use of schools, all the vacant lands in the village, & the common fields. These lands are now forming quite a large fund, which is applied to the support of common schools. One-tenth of the proceeds of the lands sold by the city in the commons, also, is applied to this fund, in addition to which an additional tax is levied upon the property in the city. The value of the lands belonging to the schools is estimated at $500,000, & produces an annual income of $14,000, while the amount raised by taxation is $28,000, making the total income of the School Board $42,000. There are now 13 school buildings, & a High School is now building. The number of scholars the past year was 3,881. Besides these, there are numerous private schools, which are very successful.

There are several very large & fine churches scattered through different parts of the city, & occupied by the different denominations. They number about 50. There are two Medical Colleges, a Mercantile Library Hall, costing $115,000, three theatres, ten market houses, & a large court house, which, when finished, will cost $500,000.

The growth of St. Louis is substantial, & progressing with a rapidity that will, in a few years, make it the great city of the Valley of the West. It has enjoyed no extraneous helps, has no banking facilities, as there is but one bank, with a capital used in the city of only $300,000, & all that it has done has been from its own resources. Of the energy & determination of the citizens may be judged, when in the spring of 1854, they voted to raise $1,200,000 for the Pacific Railroad, by direct taxation, payable in four years, or $300,000 per annum, when the city & county had already given their bonds for $2,000,000. The vote was six to one.

St. Louis was first settled by Pierre Ligueste Laclede, & his associates, under a grant from the Governor General of Louisiana, to the Louisiana Fur Company, dated in 1762. On the 15th February, 1764, he established the post of St. Louis, which, although not the first settlement in the state of Missouri, has become the most important. St. Geneva, which had been established some ten years before, had become the depôt of a considerable trade in furs & lead, but Laclede preferred to be nearer the mouth of the Missouri, upon which river the heaviest fur trade was conducted. In 1778, Laclede, then on a voyage to New Orleans, died near the mouth of the Arkansas. This post was established in the same year, with the treaties by which France ceded to Great Britain, all the country east of the Mississippi, except New Orleans, & to Spain all west of that river. Prior to that time the French had several settlements in what is now Illinois, such as Cahokia, Kaskaskia, Peoria, &c.; but such was the love of the people for their own ruler, that most of the settlers moved into Missouri, & established the different villages in the neighborhood. In the French documents of that day, St. Louis is spoken of as St. Louis of the Illinois. In 1765, St. Ange, commandant at Fort Chartres in Illinois, surrendered that post under the treaty & removed to St. Louis, where he was obeyed as the governor, although he possessed no legal authority. This power he exercised as the judge and notary of the infant colony until 1770, when Don Pedro Piernas, took possession for his majesty, the King of Spain, to whom the country belonged by virtue of the treaty of 1762. He was succeeded in 1775, by Francisco Cruzat, & he by Fernando de Leyba, in 1778, and he again by Cruzat, in 1770. Next came Manuel Perez, Don Lemon Trudeau, & Delault Delapus, who surrendered the country to the United States, on the 20th December, 1803. The year 1780, is called "L'Annee du grand coup," or year of the great attack, on account of an attack made upon the post by the English and Indians, but which was repulsed by the villagers. In the year 1785, there was a great flood, which has been equalled only by its successors of the years 1844, & 1851, & which overflowed the American bottom, and which gave to that year the name of "L'Annee des Grandes Eaux." The year 1788 was called "L'Annee des Air Brulans," on account of the arrival of ten barges from New Orleans. The honey-bee crossed the river in 1792. In 1799, the thermometer sank to 32 degrees below zero, & was called "L'Annee de Grand Hiver,"—& in 1801, on account of the disease, was called "L'Annee de la Picotte."

The United States took possession in 1803, and a district government was established in 1804, under the title of the District of Louisiana, the territory south being the territory of Orleans. The governor and judge were authorized to make laws. General Harrison, then governor of the north-west territory, or Indiana, the power was exercised by him. In 1805, the district became a territory, & James Wilkinson, the Governor, & Return J. Meigs, & John B. C. Lucas, judges of the Superior court, constituted the Legislature of the territory. On the 6th of March, 1821, Missouri was admitted into the Union, & the terms of the act of admission were accepted on the 4th July, by the people assembled in convention at St. Louis.

At the time of the first settlement of the place, a line of bluff bank, of the height of about forty feet, ran along the river bank. A little back from this was a gentle rise, & then 100 yards back was another rise, to the general level of the plateau, or plain, upon which most of the present city is built. The present Fourth street was about 100 yards from the edge of this plateau. The present Main street, or La Rue Principale, as the French called it, ran on the edge of the first level: the second street, or La Rue d'Elize, or Church street, ran at the foot of the last rise, while the third, or Rue des Granges, ran just on the edge of the plateau. These were the three main streets of the old village, & were each about 264 feet wide, while the cross streets were 324 feet wide, & the blocks were 300 French feet, or 320 English feet square. The streets of the American part of the city are laid out with greater width, varying from 50 to 100 feet in width. To the south of the old town, lay the commons belonging to the village, while to the west & north-west, on the prairie, lay the common fields of the village,—strips of one or two arpens front by forty in depth,—so called because they were surrounded by one common fence. Part of these commons, five miles from the court house, the city has lately divided into lots & sold at prices ranging from $6 to $55 per front foot, while the whole of the St. Louis, or nearest common field, has long since been cut up into lots and sold out.

The city was first incorporated in 1809, & included the common field & the common. In 1822, the charter of incorporation narrowed the limits to a mile in length on the river, & running back to 7th street, a distance of about half a mile, enclosing an area of 385 acres. In 1841, the limits were extended on account of the increasing population, running from Rocky Branch to the arsenal, a distance of nearly five miles, & westwardly about a mile, the area being 2,630. It is expected that the area will again be enlarged this coming winter, so to embrace the whole of what were the old commons & common fields, containing an area of about 20,000 acres.

SALEM, (the Naumkeag of the Indians), city, port of entry, & one of the capitals of Essex co., Mass., on the Eastern railroad, 14 N.N.E. from Boston, & 454 N.E. W. The pop. in 1810, was 12,613; 1820, 12,731; in 1830, 13,886; in 1840, 15,082; in 1850, 20,264; 1854, 23,000.

It is chiefly built on a tongue of land formed by two inlets from the sea, called North & South rivers; over the former are two bridges, (one of which is crossed by the railroad,) connecting it with Beverly. The harbor has good anchorage ground, but vessels drawing more than 12 or 14 feet of water must be partially unloaded before they can come to its wharves. The situation of Salem is low, but pleasant & healthy. The newer portions is well built, & many of the residences are tasteful & elegant. The compact part of the city is about 2 m. in extent and nearly a mile in width. The streets are irregular, having been originally laid out without much regard to symmetry & beauty. In the northern part of the town there is an elegant public square or common, containing about 10 acres, surrounded by a handsome public walk, ornamented with rows of trees. An aqueduct supplies the city with spring water. Salem was long the second town in New England in wealth, commerce, & population; and it was early distinguished for its East India trade, by which it was greatly enriched; but this branch of commerce, though still carried on, is less extensive than formerly. On a peninsula below the town are Fort Pickering & Fort Lee; and on Baker's island there is a light-house, situated in lat. 42° 32′ 12″ N., lon. 70° 39′ 30″ W. from Greenwich, Engl. It shows two fixed lights, one elevated 70 feet, & the other 81 feet above the level of the sea, and are both visible for a distance of 13 nautical miles. The city contains a court-house, a city hall, a custom-house, a market-house, an Atheneum, a Lyceum, the Essex institute, 19 churches,—3 Baptist, 4 Congregational, 1 Christian, 1 Episcopal, 1 Free, 1 Friends, 2 Methodists, 1 Roman Catholic, 4 Unitarian, & 1 Universalist,—7 banks, with an aggregate cap. of $1,750,000, a savings' bank, 3 insurance companies, an extensive cotton fac. with 31,000 spindles, employing 750 persons, & makes annually 5,000,000 yards of sheeting, 2 patent cordage facs., a dyeing establishment, an iron foundry, 2 brass founderies, 41 tanneries, 11 boot and shoe facs., &c., &c., 6 printing offices issuing 1 tri-weekly, 2 semi-weekly, & 3 weekly newspapers. Among the public institutions is a society formed of those who, as captains or supercargoes, have doubled the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn, formed in 1801, for the relief, when necessary, of the families of its members, & for advancing the knowledge necessary for the East India trade. It has a museum, consisting of curiosities collected from all parts of the world; to it strangers have free access when introduced by a member. Next to Plymouth, Salem is the oldest place in the state, having been settled in 1628. Incorporated a city in 1836. The territory, which originally included Danvers, Beverly, & Marblehead, was purchased of the Plymouth colony by a company in England, & was settled by a colony under John Endicott, as agent, & John Winthrop was its first governor, appointed by the company in England. This colony so increased that in a few years Boston, Charlestown, & Dorchester, were settled by emigrants from it. In 1692, the celebrated delusion denominated "the Salem witheraft" prevailed, & 19 persons were hanged as witches, in this & some neighboring towns, including Charlestown & Boston. The first trial was of a person living in what is now Danvers, & the house is still standing in Salem in which the trials were held, & the place of execution is now denominated "gallows hill," from which now peaceful spot the most delightful view of the city is obtained. At length this severity was condemned, & the occasion of it was pronounced a delusion. These colonists undoubtedly erred exceedingly, but their error belonged to the age. The English laws at the time recognized witchcraft as a capital offence, & these laws were sanctioned by such men as the learned & upright judge, Sir Matthew Hale.

Salem was distinguished as the early supporter of the American Revolution. On the closing of the port of Boston, the general court was removed to this place, & General Gage hoped that the inhabitants would be conciliated by the prospect of increasing prosperity. But by an unanimous vote in a public town meeting they gave him to understand that they disdained to flourish on the ruin of Boston, & they offered resistance to an attempt to seize some military stores before the battle of Lexington. During the revolutionary war Salem was distinguished for the number, boldness, & success of its privateers, amounting to 60 vessels, manned by 4,000 men.

Principal towns, Vathi, on its N. side, with a good harbor, & Khora, the cap., near the S. coast, on a portion of the site of the ancient Samos. The island had in antiquity a famous temple of Juno, of which few, if any, vestiges remain. It was the native country of Pythagoras, & the sculptor Theodorus. The Samiotes were among the first to join the late Greek war of independence, throughout which they successfully held the island against the Turks. In the Little Boghaz, a narrow strait between Samos & the mainland, the fleet & army of Xerxes were defeated the same day that his troops in Greece, under Mardonius, were dispersed & destroyed at Platæa, B. C. 479.—II. an ancient city of Cephalonia, on the bay of Samos, an inlet of its E. coast, now a vill., cap. dist., around which are various remains of antiquity.

SAMOTHRAKI, or SAMOTHRACE (Turk. Semendrek), an island belonging to European Turkey, in the Ægean sea, 14 m. N. N. W. Imbros. Area, 30 sq. m. Pop. 1,500, a poor & hardy race. Surface mountainous, & rises to 5,248 feet above the sea. Principal products, corn, oil, honey, wax, goat-skins, & leather. SAN ANDERS, p-o., Milan co., Tex.

SAN ANTONIA (DE BEXAR), cap. Bexar co., Tex., 90 S. by W. Austin. Situated near the head sources, & on both sides of the San Antonia river, & is one of the most ancient towns in North America. It is built mostly of stone, the houses one story in height, with terraced roofs. It has 2 churches,—1 Episcopal and 1 Roman Catholic,—a convent, an academy, an arsenal, several stores, & 3,488 inhabitants. It contained, previous to the Texian revolution, a population of 8,000 souls. In its vicinity stands the ruins of the ALAMO; it was an oblong enclosure with walls about 10 feet high, & 3 feet thick, covering about an acre of ground; it has been styled the Thermopylæ of Texas, in commemoration of the heroic defence of TRAVIS & his brave comrades.

SAN ANTONIO, a town of Venezuela, dep. & on an affluent of the Apure, prov. & 110 m. E. Varinas.—II. (de Laguna), Ecuador, dep. Assuay, on the Huallaga, near its junction with the Amazon.—III. (de los Cues), a town of Oaxaca, 70 m. N. Oaxaca, & having some Aztec remains.—Antonio, a river of Texas, which, after a S.E. course of nearly 200 m., enters the bay of Espiritu Santo, 25 m. N. E. Refugio. In its latter part it is navigable, & the towns Bexar & Goliad are on its banks.—(Sta Barbara), a small town, Chili, dep.

& 135 m. E.S.E. Concepcion, on an island in the Biobio, near the Andes.—II. a town, Venezuela, dep. & on S. bank of the Orinoco, opposite the influx of the Ventuari.—A strait of the Pacific O., 15 m. across, between the mainland & the island Santa Cruz, 120 m. S.E. Monterey.—(San Bartholome), a vill. of New Granada, dep. Magdalena, & on the river at the influx of the San Bartholome, 60 m. S.E. Remedios.—II. a vill. & fort Durango, Mexico, 215 m. N. Durango.—Also, one of the Caroline islands, Pacific O., lat. 15° 10′ N., lon. 168° 52′ E.—(Bernardo), a group of islets, New Granada, near the entrance of the Gulf of Morrosquillo, & off the Point of San Bernardo, 50 m. S. Cartagena.—(Blas), a seaport town, Xalisco, Mexico, on the Pacific, 35 m. W.S.W. Tepic. Its harbor is bad. Pop. formerly large, now 3,000, & its trade chiefly transferred to Mazatlan.—Point San Blas, New Granada, is a headland on the N. coast of the isthmus of Panamá, 48 m. E. Puerto Bello.—(Sta. Cruz-de-la-Sierra), the most E. & largest dep. of Bolivia, extending between lat. 15° & 21° S., & lon. 58° & 65° W., having E. Brazil, & on other sides the deps. Beni, Cochabamba, & Tarija. Surface mostly level or undulating, drained by the Ubahy, Rio Grande, or Guapey, & covered with unexplored forests. Prod. comprise sugar, coffee, cacao, rice, cotton honey, & indigo, & it is supposed to be rich in minerals; but civilized settlements are scantily sprinkled over its surface. Principal towns, San Lorenzo de Frontera, Santa Cruz, Santiago, San Juan Bautista, & Concepcion. The town Santa Cruz is a decayed place near the cap. San Lorenzo.

SAN AUGUSTINE, county, Tex. Situated in the E. part of the state. Area, 530 sq. m. Drained by Ayish bayou, & by Atoyac bayou on the W. Surface undulating, mostly covered with wood; soil very fertile, large portion included in the tract known as the "Red Lands." Capital, San Augustine. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $131,539; Ind. corn, 115,284 bush. prod.; sweet potatoes, 32,400; peas and beans, 6,338; cotton, 1,020 bales;—a saw m.; 1 printing office, 1 weekly newspaper published. SAN COSME, p-o., Rusk co., Tex.

SAN DIEGO, bay, San Diego co., Cal. It is the shape of a crescent, & is 5 m. in length, & 1 in breadth, & is, next to San Francisco, the best harbor in California. Lat. of Point Loma (where the government propose to place a light, on a tower 25 feet in height, and which will be visible 31 statute miles), is 32° 40′ 13″ and lon. W. from Greenwich, Engl., 117° 12′ 22″. "Vessels in sight of the coast, & approaching San Diego from the N., will observe an opening in the hills, & the appearance of an inland bay. This is False Port, & must be avoided. Immediately N. of False Port, commences a table land about 450 feet high, & extending southwardly 6 or 7 m. The extremity of this table land, forming a very steep bluff 300 feet in height, is called Point Loma, & forms the entrance to the harbor of San Diego. Those bound from the S.-ward will first sight the group of high, rocky islets, called Los Coronados. From thence to Point Loma, the course is N. ¼ E., & the distance 15 nautical miles. On a clear day Los Coronados will serve as a landmark, & guide vessels coming from any direction. Steer right through the kelp, giving Point Loma a berth of half a mile, & in a few minutes you will open Ballast Point, a low beach of shingle stones forming a natural breakwater. Then round up gradually, until you bring Ballast Point in range with the easternmost house on the Plaza, & be careful not to open more of the village, otherwise you will be too far to the E., & in danger of getting aground on Tuninga shoal. The breakers show its position. You can carry 4 fathoms within a ship's length of the point. Keep on the above range; &, when up with Ballast Point, steer direct for the Plaza, & anchor where you please. Inside of the breakwater, & about 250 yards true N. of its extremity, is a shoal spot with 12 feet water at low tide. The shoals on the starboard hand are plain in sight, except at very high water. Beyond the Plaza, the shoals are easily distinguished. The channel, however, is buoyed. From the Plaza to New town, four miles distant, you can carry 6 fathoms of water. A mile beyond New Town the bay becomes shoal. There is no water nearer than San Diego, 4 miles from the Plaza. It is obtained from San Diego river."

SAN DIEGO (St. James), county, Cal., is the southermost county in the state, & contains 11,000 sq. m. It has the Pacific Ocean on its western boundary, & the Colorado river on its eastern boundary. It is crossed from north to south by the Sierra Nevada. Drained on the western slope by the San Mateo, S. Margarita, De la Martires, San Luis, and San Diego rivers or streams, the eastern slope, which comprehends one-half of the surface of the county, is entirely devoid of streams, except in the rainy season, & then they disappear immediately on cessation of the rains. There were in 1852, 1,767 horses, 262 mules, 904 cows, 3,164 beef cattle, 563 oxen, 1,580 sheep;—wheat, 1,056 bush. produced; Ind. corn, 1,205; barley, 1,221; potatoes, 52 acres in cultivation. Pop. 1852, 2,932.

SAN DIEGO, p-v., capital San Diego co., Cal., 500 m. S.E. San Francisco, 18 m. north from the Mexican boundary line. It is situated on a plain four miles from the anchorage of the Plaza. It contains a Roman Catholic church built of adobes, several stores, & 800 inhabitants. The harbor was discovered, & named by Sebastian Viscayno, in 1603; & in 1768 two expeditions were fitted out, one by land & the other by water. The first division reached the place on the 14th of May, & the second on the 1st of July, 1769, & on the 16th of July, the land was taken possession of, and the Mission of San Diego was established under the direction of Father Janipero Serra, this being the first civilized settlement founded in Upper California. San Diego presents an arid appearance, but it possesses, nevertheless, a pleasant & luxuriant climate, with a clear blue sky, enhanced by a most magnificent view of the Pacific Ocean. There are no building materials or timber in the vicinity, but the water is the best that is known on the county. It abounds in copper mines, whilst it produces the best of olives & Indian pears, & although its vineyards have not increased in number, yet the fruit they bear is certainly the very best that California yields.

SAN ELAZARIO, p-o., El Paso co., Tex. Situated on the lt. b. of the Rio Grande.

SAN FELIPE, p-v., cap., Austin co., Tex., 120 E.S.E. Austin. Situated on the rt. b. of the Brazos river. It had prior to the revolution, 600 inhabitants; it was burnt by the retreating Texan army; since that time it has been rebuilt, & now contains a court house & 1,000 inhabitants.

SAN FELIPE, a town of Venezuela, dep. Caracas, 60 m. W.N.W. Valencia. Pop. 7,000. It was originally settled by Canary islanders; its vicinity is very productive of cocoa, coffee, maize, & rice.—II. a fort, Honduras, C. A., on the Golfo Dulce, lat. 15° 38′ N., lon. 89° 1′ 45″ W.—III. a town, Guanaxuato, Mexico, 40 m. N. Guanaxuato.—IV. (Felipe-de-Aconcagua), a t., Chili, cap. dep. Aconcagua, in a fine valley, about 15 miles from the Andes, 40 m. N. Santiago. Pop. recently estimated from 12,000 to 13,000. It is regularly built, & has handome public walks, a central square, in which are the chief public buildings; houses of one story, & mostly furnished with gardens. Near it are copper mines.

SAN FERNANDO, a small town of Venezuela, S. A., dep. Caracas, 30 m. N. the Orinoco, & on one of its affls.—II. a town, Chili, cap. dep. Colchajua, 80 m. S. Santiago.—III. de Apure), Venezuela, dep. & on rt. bank of the Apure, at the influx of the Portuguesa, 70 m. S. Calabozo. Pop. 6,000.—Several vills. Mexico, vills. & forts in New Granada, & C. A., &c., have this name.—The Serra de San Fernando, or Doirados, S. A., separates the Brazilian prov. Matto-Grosso from the Bolivian territory of the Chiquitos, lat. 18° S., lon. 59° to 60° W.

SAN FRANCISCO, (BAY OF), Cal., one of the best harbors of the Pacific ocean. The entrance is very remarkable, bold, & rocky; a mile wide & 4 m. in length, with deep water & no obstructions. It then expands into an extensive bay, in which lie several islands; that of San Angelo is the largest & highest, & covered with vegetation to its very top. The next in size are Yerba Buena & Alcantras. The bay of San Francisco is 36 m. in length by an average of six in width; a large portion of its southern, eastern, & northern shores are bordered by extensive & wide mud-flats, preventing the landing, at low water, of even a boat; so much so that the eastern shore may be said to be inaccessible for a distance of 30 m.; and this impediment prevents it from ever becoming useful, except by the construction of extensive artificial works. On the N. it is bounded by the Straits of San Pablo, which divide it from the bay of that name. The bay of San Pablo is nearly circular, about 10 m. in diameter, the largest segment of which is a mud-flat, with but a few feet of water over it. On the E. side lies the channel, with a sufficient depth of water for large vessels, leading to the Straits of Karquines, at the mouth of the Sacramento river. On the western side of the bay of San Francisco, from the Straits of San Pablo, for a distance of 15 m., the country is broken & mountainous, & the shores rocky & indented by small bays. These obstructions reduce this extensive bay very much in size, & it becomes still more so when the safety & convenience of vessels is taken into consideration; indeed, with the deep water, cross tides, & exposed situations, there are but 2 safe anchorages, viz.: San Fransisco and Sausalito. The Bay of San Francisco has been celebrated, from the time of its first discovery, as one of the finest in the world, & is justly entitled to that character, even under the seaman's view of a mere harbor. But when all the accessary advantages which belong to it—fertile and picturesque dependent country; mildness & salubrity of climate; connection with the great interior valley of the Sacramento and San Joaquin; its vast mineral & other resources are all taken into account, with its geographical position on the line of communication with Asia, it rises into an importance far above that of a mere harbor, & deserves a particular notice in any account of maritime California. Its latitudinal position is that of Lisbon; its climate is that of Southern Italy; settlements upon it for more than half a century attest its healthiness; bold shores & mountains give it grandeur; the extent & fertility of its dependent country give it great resources for agriculture, commerce, and population.

Sausalito, or Whaler's Harbor, is on the N. side of the entrance, under Table Hill, which protects vessels from the prevailing westerly winds. This anchorage is the principal resort of whalers. Here they can obtain wood & water, & refit. The water in the summer is obtained from small springs. From Yerba Buena, the distance to the mouth of the bay of San Pablo is 10 m., the course N. by W. passing to the right of San Angelos Isl., & to the left of Molate. The points San Pedro & San Pablo, which form the mouth of the bay, are 2 m. asunder. The channel to the Strait of Karquines is on the E. side of the bay of San Pablo. It has 4¼ fathoms water, & is a mile wide. The Strait of Karquines, through which the river Sacramento discharges its waters, runs nearly E. & W. for the distance of 8 m., & at its narrowest point is half a m. wide, with very deep water—from 12 to 17 fathoms. The banks on both sides are high, & composed of sandstone. The Napa creek empties into the straits from the north, about a m. from the bay of San Pablo. Passing through Karquines Straits, the bay of Suisun is entered. It extends 11 m. to the N.E., & is 2 m. wide. Suisun creek flows into it on the W., & on the E. it receives the waters of the Sacramento & its tributaries. The channels through the Delta of the Sacramento are narrow, & pass into each other, forming islands. These cover an area of 25 sq. m., which is entirely overgrown with Tula (Scirpus lacustris). The true channel of the river lies through the S. branch, its direction being due E. It has sufficient water for vessels not drawing over 12 feet. Eleven m. from Suisun bay, the course of the river changes to the N. for 2 m. At this point the left-hand channel must be taken, as it is the one leading to the Sacramento proper, the right one leading to Marsh's Landing & the San Joaquin. In proceeding up the Sacramento, the river gradually changes its course to the N., with several considerable bends; and at the low stage of water is navigable as far as Sacramento city a distance of 50 m. above where its deltas discharge into Suisun bay, &, by the water communication, 125 m. from San Francisco. Three & a half miles above the American Fork, sand-banks are encountered. These intercept the navigation during the dry season, & are met with as far as the mouth of the Feather r. Above the Feather riv., the Sacramento changes its character, becoming very tortuous, but is navig. for steamboats to Butler city, 234 m. above San Francisco. During the ann. freshets, these rivs. would afford good opportunities for the transportion of timber from the upper country, where it is found of large dimensions, & in great abundance. The branch leading to the mouth of the San Joaquin is 10 m. long, & is navigable for vessels to that place. The San Joaquin can be ascended by steamboats 189 miles above San Francisco. In the season of the rains, the country for several miles around its mouth is overflowed, & when not under water, is a large marsh. The bay of San Francisco is well adapted for a naval depôt, or a place for our whalers to recruit at. Its possession insures us the command of the Northern Pacific, & the protection of our large and extended interests there.

SAN FRANCISCO, river, N. Mexico, is formed by 2 principal branches, and flows south into it, just above the confluence of that stream with the Gila river.

SAN FRANCISCO, county, Cal. It is formed of the entire peninsula formed by the bay of San Francisco & the Pacific Ocean, & contains 190 sq. m. The Sierra Morena, or Brown Mountains, commence at a point about 10 m. S. of the city, & extend along the coast, rising over two thousand feet above the sea, and unite with the range in Santa Clara co. This range protects the valley from the coast winds. Soil rich & productive. The only stream of note is the San Francisquitta creek, dividing this county from Santa Clara. Capital, San Francisco. There were in 1852, beef cattle, 3,419; cows, 1,342; working oxen, 246; horses, 2,215; mules, 577; wheat, 5,300 bushels produced; Ind. corn, 1,360; barley, 18,450; oats, 3,900; potatoes, 10,050; other produce, 5,150. Acres of land in cultivation, 1,297. Capital employed for other pursuits out of the limits of the city, $761,500. Estimated amount of taxable property, $20,000,000. Amount of property assessed, $17,794,711. Pop. 36,151; white males, 30,-, 156; mulattoes, males 103, females 38; negroes, males 270, females 53. Indians domesticated, males 96, females 63; foreign residents, males 16,537, females 2,766.

SAN FRANCISCO, city & capital of San Francisco co., Cal., is situated on the eastern slope of the ridge dividing the bay of San Francisco from the Pacific O. Lat. 37° 47′ 35″, lon. 122° 26′ 15″. Pop. by the state census 1852, 34,776 (5,154 females, 29,166 males); 1854, estim. at 50,000. The entrance from the Ocean is through the Golden Gate, a narrow strait about a mile in width, with rocky walls on each side, & 4 miles in length, where it opens into the magnificent Bay of San Francisco. The city is built on the sandy slope, descending from the hills to the waters of the bay, & spreads out in all directions. Central Wharf extends 2,300 feet into the bay. The streets are laid out with regularity, some parallel with the shore, & rising one behind another in a succession of terraces; crossing these, a series of streets extend from the water over & between the hills, excavated in some instances to the depth of 10 feet. The houses first built were mostly of wood, but since the great conflagrations of 1849 and 1852, brick, stone, & iron have been extensively employed in the construction of buildings. The public buildings are a city hall, court house, a custom house, a branch of the mint of the U. S., an exchange, a city hospital, 20 places of worship, belonging to Baptists, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Unitarians, &c. Pure water is brought from the mountain lake, 3 m. distant, and distributed through the city in iron pipes, & gas is absent being introduced to light the city. Here is concentrated an immense capital employed in the purchase of gold dust & private banking.

As the mines of California, & the shipments of gold dust are the principal features of attraction, we first enter upon that field, & annex the amounts which have been sent forward for the year 1850, which amounts to $29,441,583. This statement is a sufficient answer to the too often expressed opinion that the mines were becoming exhausted, & that California must prove a failure by-and-bye. For the two past seasons the summer months have produced the greatest amount of gold, the wet diggings being worked then to a greater extent than the dry. This accounts for the fact that the shipment in the month of August exceeded that of any other month in the year. Fixing the amount of gold exported, & which was regularly shipped & entered, for the period named above, at $30,000,000, in round figures, & add to it an estimate of $12,000,000, as having gone forward in private hands, & $6,000,000 retained for circulation, & the aggregate shows the enormous sum of $48,000,000; an amount exceeding one-third the total of all the products of the United States exported during the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1850, & nearly one-third the am'nt of imports; $12,000,000 more than the exports of the State of New York or Louisiana; $35,000,000 more than Alabama; $38,000,000 more than South Carolina; $40,000,000 more than Massachusetts or Maryland; $41,000,000 more than Georgia; & $43,000,000 more than Pennsylvania. And while viewing this statement, it will at the same time be borne in mind that the States which show the largest amount of exports, are those which possess the advantage of having ports sit. on the sea-board, & which do the carrying trade of States more remotely located.

The amount shipped in 1851, amounted to $34,492,634; in 1852, $45,801,322; & in 1853, $49,672,210. From the same source of information, the custom house books, we have compiled the following receipts of bullion, at this port, for the year 1850, $1,722,600; the largest proportion of this amount of bullion has been received from the Atlantic States, though a no inconsiderable amount has found its way from the old world —sent hither from both localities, for the reason that in no country in the world does an investment of money pay as well. Securities are ample, & the losses small, in comparison with the flood of disasters which sweep over other localities. Individuals may be ruined by fire in an hour, but the money loaned at from 3 to 10 per cent. per month interest, generally comes in but for a small proportion of the loss. As connected with the subject of currency, we will here take occasion to say that in no other section of the globe, are the generality of bankers more careful, judicious, & business-like, than in San Francisco. The rapid changes which are noted every day, necessarily compels them to watch the course of events with a careful regard for their own interests; & the exceptions to the general classification for integrity & business capacity, are but few. The principal business is done by 15 banking houses, but in addition there are other smaller operators, whom it would not perhaps be proper to classify amongst the leading bankers of the city, their transactions being mainly confined to the purchase & sale of gold dust, & do not do a legitimate banking business.

The steam marine of San Francisco is composed of 15 large steam-ships, running to Panama, Realejo, Punta Arenas, & other ports, & several to the Columbia river, Oregon. There are employed in the river trade 50 large class steam-boats, & 270 craft of various kinds, the entire tonnage amounting in 1853 to 97,699 tons.

San Francisco was incorporated a city in 1846, & is divided into 8 wards, & is governed by a mayor & 8 aldermen, & 8 assistant aldermen, & has an efficient police. The place where the city now stands was first called Yerba Buena Cove; & there was a v. here which consisted of a few adobe houses, & it bore the name of Yerba Buena until March, 1847. "This great metropolis of the western seas, built upon more hills than Rome was, &, unlike her, built almost in a "day," contains a pop. of 50,000, who, attracted by the sparkling of gold, have come hither from every quarter of the habitable globe. From the sunny climes of Spain & Italy, from the fairy lands of Persia and Arabia, from the regions of snow & ice in Norway & Russia, from the corn & vine lands of pleasant France, from the British isles & colonies, from the green South America, from the imperial dominions of the near relative of the Sun & Moon, & from the golden islands of the Pacific, have they come in myriads to California. In the streets the fair European jostles with the swarthy Kanaka or the darker Hindoo; the pious Mussulman says his daily prayers, as he passes the churches of the Christian, the calculating German drives hard bargains with the volatile Frenchman, & the stiff-made Yankee daily deals with the long-tailed Chinaman. Such an omnium gatherum of humanity was never before witnessed in the world's history. The golden charm has spoken the "open sesame" to the brazen gates & lofty walls that have heretofore enclosed a nation of millions, and the whole world has sent her representatives in great convention to a little spot that a few years since was known only as a resort for whalers or merchant vessels who were on the Pacific coast. No man can accurately calculate the result of this union, but its effects must be grand & lasting. The southron of Europe will return to his home, the fur-clad northerner will again visit the cold land of his childhood, the light-limbed oriental will go back to his fairy land, the long-tailed child of the sun will enter again his noble wall, the bearded Turk will once more listen to the muezzim as it is sounded from the minarets, & the unsophisticated children of the sea will return to their flowery islands. But all will carry back with them a knowledge of the English language, an idea of the American institutions & liberties, a portion of the energy and ardor of the great Anglo-Saxon race, & an understanding of the blessed principles of Him whose precepts will yet spread peace among the nations, & make the "wilderness bud & blossom as the rose tree."

SAN SALVADOR, a republic of Central America, lies between Guatemala on W. & N., Honduras on the N.E. The Bay of Conchagua separates it from Nicaragua on the S.E. and has a coast line along the Pacific of about 150 miles, & furnishes the roadsteads of Acajatla & Libertad; and within the bay of Conchagua the fine harbor of La Union. Area, 7,500 square m. It is divided into four deps., which are subdivided into 16 districts.

Departments.	Population.	Capitals.
Santa Ana	72,450	Sonsonate.
San Miguel	100,250	San Miguel.
San Salvador	110,300	San Salvador.
San Vicente	80,000	San Vicente.
	363,000

The surface bordering the Pacific coast, & inland about 15 m, is mostly level and low, thence rises into a hilly region, much broken by rocky masses & isolated peaks, including 5 volcanoes, of which San Salvador broke out in an eruption, and, with the occurrence of an earthquake, almost entirely destroyed the capital in the early part of 1854. San Salvador and San Vicente peaks rise to an elevation of 9,000 feet above the sea, & Yzalco, although not so elevated, is an active volcano. The largest river is the Sempa, which rises in a lake in Honduras, passes entirely across the republic, & enters the Pacific. The Paza and the Sirama are the 2 other largest streams, of which there are several, forming a fine flow of water for the purpose of irrigation. There are 2 or 3 lakes about 10 m. in extent, & many thermal & mineral springs occur in all the departments. Gold & silver are found to some extent; iron ore of excellent quality was formerly manufac. into steel much esteemed for articles of cutlery. The soil is, where susceptible of irrigation, of extraordinary fertility, & was formerly extensively cultivated. Indian corn, coffee, cotton, & other vegetable products, & fruit of various kinds, succeed well; but the most important crop is indigo, which here grows to great perfection and in abundance. Cattle, hogs, and poultry are numerous, and easily raised. The lands near the coast, in the neighborhood of Acajutla & Libertad, produce the article commonly known as the Balsam of Peru, of which about 20,000 bbls. are produced annually, & a fine cedar timber is obtained. The climate is very warm near the coasts, but in the interior of various grades of temperature, according to elevation, & is represented to be very healthy. The inhabitants are very industrious, and rank among the best in Central America. The government is administered by a president & council, consisting of a minister of interior and exterior, & a minister of war, & the archbishop of San Salvador, & has a legislative chamber of 25 deputies. (See article Central America.)

SAN SALVADOR, a city & cap. of the Republic of San Salvador, C. A., on a riv. tributary to the Pacific O., 105 m. S.E. Guatemala. Pop. 16,000. It stands between wooded heights, in a well-watered vale, S. the volcano of San Salvador, & is regularly built. It is a depôt for sugar & indigo, & has some manufs. of iron wares & cotton goods. It was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake in 1854. The Fed. district comprised a radius of 11 m. around the city, & on the side of the Pacific, to the port of Libertad, 26 m. distant.—II. a vill., Ecuador, on an affl. of the Napo, 26 m. E. Avila.—III. (Guanahani or Cat Island), one of the Bahama islands, Atlantic, 28 m. E. Eleuthera. Lat. 24 N., & lon. 75° 30′ W. Length 46 m., breadth 5 m. On its E. side it is bordered by reefs. This was the first land discovered in the New World by Columbus, who landed here, Oct. 12th, 1492.—San Salvador Paquena is an island on its W. side.

SAN SIMEON, port, San Luis Obispo county, Cal., 40 N.W. San Luis, an open roadstead.

SANTA ANNA, county, N. Mex. Situated centrally toward the N. Area, 450 sq. m. Drained by the River Puerco, entering the Rio Grande, which bounds it on the E. Mount Taylor, one the highest elevations of the great mountain mass, which here assumes the name of Rocky Mountains. Surface mostly mountainous, with fertile valleys. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $109,099: wheat, 9,740 bushels produced; Indian corn, 24,373; peas & beans, 728; wool, 2,825 pounds;—7 churches. Pop. 1850, 4,645.

SANTA ANNA, p-o., De Witt co., Ill., 84 m. N.E. Springfield, 719 W.

SANTA ANNA, a town of San Salvador, C. A., 11 m. W. San Salvador. Estimated pop. 10,000. Its vicinity produces indigo & the best sugar in the country. Some iron mines are wrought.—II. SANTA BARBARA, county, Cal. A southern co. having the Pacific Ocean on west & south, & the co. comprehends the islands of Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Santa Rosa, San Bernardio, & island de Encanapa. Surface mountainous, with deep fertile valleys. Drained by Santa Clara, San Benaventura, and Santa Inez rivers, crossed on the N.E. by the coast range of mountains, which in some places reach an elevation of 4,000 feet. It has salt springs, hot springs, & tar springs. Soil bordering the streams, when irrigated, exceedingly fertile; hilly parts very fine for grazing. The islands abound with goats, are the rendezvous of otters, seals, sea-elephants, & beavers. Capital, Santa Barbara. There were in 1852, 690 acres under cultivation; tame cows, 1,560; wild cows, 30,-178; working oxen, 522; beef cattle, 50,297; sheep, 7,391; horses, 2,990; mules, 120; wheat, 615 bushels produced; beans, 1,083; Indian corn, 2,316; barley, 4,748; potatoes, 3,323;—6 churches; 1 academy, 12 students. Pop. 1850, 2,131; whites, 1852, 2,181.

SANTA BARBARA, p-v., capital Santa Barbara co., Cal., 280 m. S.E. from San Francisco. Situated around a harbor of the same name, & has a Roman Catholic church built of adobes, an academy, a court-house, & about 800 inhabitants. It was first settled in 1780, and has long been an extensive shipping place for hides, &c.

SANTA CLARA, county, Cal. A central western county lying between the coast range of mountains & the smaller range which extends southwardly from the San Francisco peninsula, and contains 1,000 sq. miles. Drained by the Arroya del Coyote, and the Gaudalupe, emptying into the Bay of San Francisco, & by the Almeda cr. on the N. and the Rio Pajaro on its S. boundary. It is the most fertile and highly-cultivated county in the state; & it abounds with fine timber & valuable mines of cinnabar. "The works for separating the quicksilver are at New Almaden v., on the W. border of the co., 25 m. S. San Jose, in a little valley at the foot of the hills which contain the treasure; & the buildings for furnaces, the offices, stables, & residences of the operatives, altogether form a prosperous village. With the number of furnaces now in operation, from 175 to 200 hands are constantly employed. Over $300,000 were expended by the company in the preparations necessary prior to the commencement of remunerating operations. The current expenses are about $40,000 per month, & the yield of quicksilver is about 7,500 pounds for the same period—worth, at the present rates, $63,750. Extensive additions & improvements of the works are now being made, & will, when completed, treble the produce of the mines. The cinnabar is brought down from the hills, at present, on pack mules. It is in contemplation to construct a railroad which shall perform the duty, & thus effect a great saving. Large and improved furnaces are being constructed; & in every department no capital or labor is spared necessary to secure the benefits arising from experience, or afforded by the genius of the inventor. The furnaces now in use are what are known as the 'cylinder.' The cinnabar having been broken in small pieces, is thrown into the cylinders, & subjected to an almost white heat, which expels the metal in the form of vapor. The vapor passes through a retort & condenser, & is then drawn off ready for bottling. Within the company's grounds, and by the banks of a stream, which supplies the place with the purest 'mountain dew,' we were shown a mineral spring which we doubt not will prove a Saratoga in future years to those who seek restored health and energies at its fount. We drank freely of the water, and found it quite as pleasant as any of the medicinal springs of New-York or Virginia. Its analysis gives carbonate of soda, chalybeate of iron, and a slight trace of sulphur. It is beautifully clear, light, sparkling and effervescing."—Capital, San José. There were in 1852, 4,371 horses, 609 mules, 4,201 cows, 16,020 beef cattle, 3,546 oxen, 3,620 sheep; 19,666 acres in cultivation; capital invested, $1,152,325; wheat, 122,-192 bushels produced; Indian corn, 19,645; barley, 415,340; oats, 13,520; potatoes, 656,700. Pop. 6,664.

SANTA CATALINA, island, Los Angelos county, Cal. It is of irregular form, 30 miles long, and 20 wide, on the Pacific Ocean, 25 miles S. Point Vincente.

SANTA CLARA, p-v., Santa Clara co., Cal., 45 m.

SANTA FE, city, capital Santa Fe county, & of the territory of New Mexico. It is situated at the base of a spur of the Rocky Mountains, 15 miles east from the Rio Grande del Norte, on a small branch of that river. It is in lat. 35° 41′ & 106 W. lon. from Greenwich, and is elevated about 7,000 feet above the sea. It is 1,400 miles distant from the entrance of the Rio Grande into the Gulf of Mexico, and 1,067 miles by the great caravan route from St. Louis, Mo. Pop. 1850, 4,846, but including the several surrounding villages embraced within its incorporation, they amount to about 6,000. The city is very irregularly laid out, & most of the streets are little better than common highways. The buildings around the public square are the Government house, the barracks, 5 Roman Catholic chapels, several private residences, & most of the shops of the American traders; these buildings are the only ones which have any pretensions to architectual regularity, the fronts of which are shaded with portales of the rudest description: there are 2 printing offices issuing a weekly & a bi-weekly publication. The mountains about ten miles to the north-east of the town are supposed to attain an elevation of 12,000 feet above the sea, & their summits are covered with perpetual snows. The silver mines are among the mountains to the southeast, where are procured washings to a large amount annually.

SANTA FÉ, a dep. of La Plata, S. A., between lat. 30° & 33° S., lon. 61° & 62° W., W. the river Paraná which separates it from the dep. Entre-Rios, & having S. the dep. Buenos Ayres, N. & W. salt deserts, intervening between it & the deps. Santiago and Cordova. Surface mostly a level terrace, covered with grass or mimosas; rain very rare: chief produce, cattle and horses. Principal rivers, the Salado, and the Tercero, or Carcaranal.—Santa Fé, the cap. town, pop. 4,000, is on the E. bank of the Salado, 8 m. N.W. Paraná, or Bajada de Santa Fé, the cap. of Entre-Rios. Other principal places are Rosario & Fort Sant Espiritu.—II. Also an island in the above dep., La Plata, between the Paraná & Salado, 50 m. in length, by 6 in average breadth, & having the town Santa Fé at its N., and Fort St. Espiritu at its S. extremity.

SANTA LUCAH, p-o., Gilmer co., Ga.

SANTA MARIA, a small island off the coast of Chili, dep. & 30 m. S.W. Concepcion, in the bay of Aranco. Its surface was raised from 8 to 10 feet by the earthquake of Feb., 1835.—II. Maria de Belem, a city of Brazil. [PARA.]—III. (Maria de Fé), a town of Paraguay, 45 m. E. Neembucu. Here the naturalist Bompland was long detained a prisoner by the dictator Francia.

SANTA MARTA, or MARTHA, a seaport town of New Granada, S. A., dep. Magdalena, cap. prov., on the E. shore of a bay of the Caribbean sea, 40 m. N.E. the mouth of the river Magdalena. Pop. 8,000. It has some good residences, a conspicuous cathedral, & a tolerable harbor, defended by a castle and several batteries. Before the revolution it was of more importance than at present.—(Sta Teela), a vill. & fort, Uruguay, on the Brazilian frontier, 128 m. W.N.W San Pedro de Rio Grande.—(Teresa), a fort, Uruguay, on the Atlantic, near the Brazilian frontier, & 95 m. N.E. Maldonado.—II. (de Jesus), a market town, Venezuela, dep. Apure, on the Meta, 46 m. W. its junction with the Orinoco.

SANTA ROSA, I., Cal. It lies 15 m. S.W. Santa Cruz I., & 10 m. long, & 5 broad.

SANTA ROSA, county, Fl. Situated in the W. part of the state. Area, 1,550 sq. m. Drained by Black Water & Yellow rivers, & tributaries, and also by Escambia r., which forms its W. boundary. Santa Rosa I., 35 miles long, extends along the gulf shore & Escambia & Pensacola bays extending inland 20 m. Surface generally undulating, level near the gulf coast: soil fertile. Capital, Milton. There were in 1850, live stock valued at $46,287: rice, 18,686 pounds produced: cotton, 11 bales:—a cotton factory. Cap. employed in manufactures, $236,950; value of manuf. articles, $290,720:—3 churches; 1 academy, 60 pupils; 7 sch., 100 scholars; 1 library, 60 vols. Pop. 1850, 2,883.

SANTA ROSA, p-o., Sonoma co., Cal.

SANTO DOMINGO, or DOMINICAN REPUBLIC, occupies the eastern & largest portion of the Island of Hayti. (For description of the Island see page 774.) It claims for her possession the extent of territory as settled by the treaty of limits between Spain & France in 1777. The area comprises more than three-fifths of the whole island, & may be taken on a general estimate at 17,000 geo. sq. m. It is divided into the following five provinces, which are subdivided in communes:—

Santo-Domingo, including the capital	Pop. 25,000
Azua-de-Compostela	" 15,000
Seybo	" 20,000
Santiago-de-los-Caballeros	" 33,500
Concepcion-de-la-Vega	" 33,000
Total	126,500

The principal ports are Santo-Domingo, Porto-Plata, & the Bay of Samana. Among the towns & places in the interior the following deserve to be mentioned. Azua, where Hernandes Cortez was a public notary: Concepcion-de-la-Vega, for the proximity of Fort-Concepcion, constructed by Christopher Columbus, & Santo-Cerro, where he erected a cross. The ancient town of La Vega, situated at the foot of Santa-Cerro, was buried by an earthquake in 1564; it was afterward removed to its present situation, on the right bank of the Camu. Santiago-de-los-Caballeros was founded by the dissolute hidalgos in the company of Christopher Columbus; it lies on the rt. bank of the river Yacki, & is the second town in the Dominican Republic. Besides these, Higuey, Seybo, San-Juan-de-Maguana, Neybo, Bani, San-Cristoval, Bayaguana, Monte-Plata, Cotuy, & Boya, famed as the place of refuge of Henriquillo, the last of the Haytian caziques, whom Charles V. permitted to retire there with the miserable remnant of the indigenous race.

The products in the S. provinces of the republic consist of the spontaneous produce of mahogany (of which Santo-Domingo furnishes the best in the world), satinwood, fustic, lignum-vitæ, & brazil-wood; in prov. Seybo cattle is raised; but by far the most industrious part is the N., generally called the Cibao, where the staple article consists of an excellent quality of tobacco, of which, according to the season, 50,000 to 80,000 seroons (1 cwt. each) are produced.

The soil of the republic is suited for any tropical produce, but unfortunately a great indolence prevails amongst the generality of the inhabitants, & the great advantages which nature has bestowed remain undeveloped.

The following table exhibits the imports & exports of the Dominican Republic, during the years 1849 to 1852:—

The revenue of the republic amounted in 1852 to $374,516. The expenditure under ordinary circumstances amounts to about $250,000. The republic owes no foreign debt. Unfortunately a fictitious currrency is in circulation, which, as it is not redeemable, is subjected to continual variation. The effective army amounts to 12,000 men, but in case of need 16,000 men may be raised. The republic possesses, moreover, three corvettes & five schooners, equipped as men-of-war, and mounted with 44 guns. The constitution of the Dominican Republic is based upon that of Venezuela. The Congress assembles annually, & consists of 15 deputies, 3 for each prov., who form the Lower Chamber or Tribunado, & 5 senators, one for each prov., constituting the Upper Chamber, or Consejo Conservador. The French code of the Restoration has been adopted in legal proceedings, & for the maintenance of order. The executive power rests in a president, who must be a Dominican by birth, & 35 years of age; elected for 4 years. The prevailing religion is R. Catholic, with an archbishop, who still bears the ancient title of Primate of the Indies, although he has not a single suffragan. Other creeds are tolerated. The R. Catholic inhabitants are superstitiously religious; public instruction is neglected, even in its primary elements.

The Dominicans declared themselves independent of Spain on the 30th Nov., 1821, & assumed the name of the Republic of Spanish Hayti, but the mass of the inhabitants belonging to the colored race (blacks & molattoes) preferred annexing this portion of the isl. with the western or Haytian republic. Gen. Boyer, the President of Hayti, availing himself of this dissatisfaction, marched with an army of 12,000 men upon the city of Santo Domingo, forced the provisional government to surrender their authority to him, uniting thereby the whole island under one government. The Haytians governed the Dominicans with great oppression. After twenty-one years of suffering they, on the fall of General Boyer, declared themselves independent. A number of young, determined men, rose in the night of February 26, 1844, & having succeeded in driving the Haytian garrison into the citadel, they proclaimed, at the sunrise of February 27, the Dominican Republic. The Haytian troops were obliged to capitulate, & they were embarked for Port-au-Prince. The new president, Hérard-Rivière, marched with an army of 20,000 men upon Santo-Domingo, but Gen. Pedro Santana defeated him at Azua, & compelled the invading army to retreat within their own territory. The provisional Junta of the Dominican Republic then framed a constition, & elected Pedro Santana as first president. He was followed, in 1848, by Gen. Jimenes. Soulouque, the present (1854) emperor, then president of Hayti, attempted in 1849, anew to re-conquer the territory, with an army of about 5,000 men, but was signally defeated at Las Carreras, on the river Ocoa, April 21, 1849, by Gen. Santana, who had only four hundred men under his command. For this great victory Santana received the title of "Libertador de la Patria," & pecuniary votes from the Congress.

Gen. Jimenes, the president of the Dominican Republic, not being fitted for his task, & the invading army having been driven out of the country, General Santana was called upon to restore order within the republic, & to force Jimenes to resign. The latter refused, & Santana laid the city of Santo-Domingo, which was in the possession of Jimenes, under siege. After some bloodshed, the consuls of G. Britain, France, & the United States, succeeded in inducing Jimenes to resign, & to embark with a number of his partisans on board of a British ship-of-war for Curaçao. Gen. Santana directed the affairs until a new election had took place, by which, upon his recommendation, Señor Buenaventura Baez was named president. During his administration, Baez succeded in entering into treaties for the recognition of the republic & reciprocal commerce with G. Brit., France, & Denmark. The mediation of G. Birt., France, & the U. States, was likewise solicited to procure a peace with Hayti, & the recognition of the independence of the Dominican Repub. But Soulouque, now emp. of Hayti, has hitherto strenuously refused to recognize the independence of the Dominicans, while Britain & France have declared that on any invasion by Soulouque of the Dominican ter. they will blockade his ports. It may be likewise observed, that Spain has not yet relinquished her rights upon her former colony.

SANTO-DOMINGO (more commonly, SAN-DOMINGO), the cap. city of the Dominican Repub., which includes the E. part of the isl. Hayti, on the S. coast, at the mouth of the Ozama in the Carrib. Sea; lat. 18° 28′ N., lon. 69° 50′ W. Pop. 10,000. It is nearly in the form of a trapezoid, extending about ½ m. E. to W., with nearly the same maximum breadth, & is surrounded by walls flanked with bastions. It is built with great regularity, consisting of spacious but mostly unpaved streets, which intersect each other nearly at right angles, & the houses are the greater number of stone, & the remainder of wood. They are generally only one story, flat roofs, & barred windows with projecting lattices. Some of the houses built by the early settlers in the Moorish style, are still standing. The most conspicuous public building is the cathedral, commenced in 1514, during the governorship of Don Diego, the son of Columbus, & finished in 1540; it is a large & handsome Gothic structure, with a lofty roof, supported by 14 massive columns, & a richly-ornamented high altar. The ashes of Columbus & his brother Bartholomew reposed in it for nearly two centuries and a half, but on the cession of the island to France were removed to Havana. Besides the cathedral, there are 14 other churches & chapels, one of the latter belonging to the Wesleyans. The convents, of which there were several, are now in ruins. The largest & most celeb., that of San Francisco, during its greatest splendor contained 300 monks; its extensive ruins form one of the most striking features of the city, when approached from the sea. The other principal buildings are the national palace, where the Spanish governor used to reside; and immediately adjoining it, the ruins of Don Diego's palace; the handsome modern building where the sittings of the national congress are held; the townhouse or cabildo, an ancient stone structure, with Moorish arches, & an old carved ceiling in its principal hall; the Jesuit's college, now a ruin; a new college, indifferently attended; a citadel with extensive barracks, a well-kept arsenal, an ordinary & a leper's hospital. Santo-Domingo was founded in 1496, by Bartholomew the brother of Columbus, on the E. or lt. b. of the Ozama; and here it was that Bobadilla imprisoned Columbus. In consequence of a great hurricane which laid the town in ruins in 1502, it was transferred to its present site on the rt. b. & advanced so rapidly, that its historiographer, Oviedo, in describing it to Charles V., in 1528, declares it equal to any city of Spain in respect of the beauty of its situation, the regularity of streets, & the magnificence of its buildings. The first blow to its prosperity was struck in 1586 by Sir Francis Drake, who took it by assault, pillaged, & nearly destroyed it. The earthquakes of 1684 & 1691 ruined most of the magnificent buildings which Drake had spared. The spoliations of the Haytians during their occupation of the city, from 1822 to 1824, deprived it of many of its most interesting monuments.

SAN, SANTA, SANTO, & SAO, Saint, prefixes to the names of numerous places in Brazil.

SAN PAULO, a marit. prov. in S. of Brazil, betw. lat. 23° & 26° S., & lon. 45° & 54° 40′ W., having E. the Atlantic, W. & N.E. the river Paraná, separating it from Paraguay & the prov. Matto-Grosso, N. & N. E. the provs. Goyaz, Minas-Geraes, & Rio de Janeiro, S. the Missiones (Plata confed.) and the provs. Rio-Grande-do-Sul, & Santa Catharina. Area, 173,160 sq. m. Pop. 458,000. A mountain chain, composed of the Seras do Mar & Cubatao, divides the narrow coast line from the wide inland region traversed by the Rio Grande, Tiete, Paranapanema, Ibahy, Iguassu, &c., tributaries of the Paraná, & the first & last named of which form respectively N. & S. boundaries. The Igupa is the only river of consequence flowing into the Atlantic. This is one of the richest provs. of Brazil. The products, common to S. Europe, are intermixed with those of tropical climates; as rice, manioc, maize, coffee, sugar, cotton, tobacco, & sweet potatoes, with wheat, rye, cherries, & peaches. On the banks of the Tiete, a Chinese colony was some years ago located, & engaged in the culture of tea; but the plant did not flourish, & Paraguay tea is that mostly in use. Live stock of many kinds are numerous; gold, silver, iron, sulphur, & many gems are among the mineral products.—S. Paulo, the cap., is situated between two streams, tributaries to the Tiete, 220 m. W.S.W. Rio de Janeiro. Pop. 22,032. It is irregularly laid out; houses partly of stone, but chiefly of earth, two stories in height, & furnished with balconies. The cathedral, 12 other churches, several hospitals, the provincial senate house, formerly a Jesuit's college, & the palace of the governor, are its chief public edifices. It is an archbishop's see, & the seat of several superior schools. It has also a botanic garden. Its vicinity is picturesque, and interspersed with numerous villas. It is one of the oldest cities in Brazil, having been founded in 1554.

SAN, or SAO PEDRO DO RIO GRANDE, a marit. prov. of Brazil, between lat. 25° 30′ & 33° 30′ S., and lon. 50° & 57° 20′ W., having E. the Atlantic & the prov. Santa Catharina, & on other sides the prov. San Paulo, the Plata Missiones, Uruguay, & a neutral territory. Area, 118,758 sq. m. Pop. 260,000. Surface mostly level. The coast is bordered by numerous lagoons, & it contains the large Lake of Patos. Chief rivers the Uruguay, & the Iguassu or Curytiba forming its N. boundary. Products comprise wheat & numerous other grains, manioc, sugar-cane, coffee, olives, Paraguay tea, & excellent timber; most of the land is, however, in pasturage, on which large herds of cattle feed; & hides, horns, bones, & other animal products form the principal exports.

SANTA (ANNA), a mkt. town, prov. Matto-Grosso, 30 m. E.N.E. Cuiaba. Pop. of dist. 4,000.—II. (or Vida Nova), a market town, prov. Santa Catharina, 20 m. N.E. Laguna. Pop. 2,000.—III. a market town, prov. S. Pedro-do-Rio-Grande, on the Sino, N. Porto Alegre. Pop. 1,400.—IV. a small island, prov. & 40 m. E.N.E. Maranhao, near the coast; & an island in the prov. Goyaz, formed by two branches of the river Araguay, 250 m. long, & 40 m. broad.—Barbara, is a town in the prov. Minas Geraes, 30 m. N.N.E. Ouro Preto. Pop. of dist. 4,000.—Catharina, Catharina (Santa).—Cruz, a town in the prov. & 120 m. S.E. Goyaz, cap. comarca, on the Pari. Pop. 3,000.—Helena, a town in the prov. Maranhao, W.S.W. Guimaraes.—Isabel, a town in the prov. and N. E. San Paulo.—Luzia, a town in the province & 120 m. E.S.E. Goyaz. Pop. of dist. 3,000.—Rita, a market town, prov. Minas Geraes, S.E. Total	37,079	33,940	2,120	73,228

The islands are all high, steep, & mountainous, with many lofty summits, which are entirely of volcanic origin; but, not being protected by barrier reefs, except in one instance, are almost destitute of good harbors. Hawaii, the most E. & largest of the isls., is particularly elev. on its W. coasts. These, overhanging a narrow, arid beach, rise into steep, bleak volcanic mntn. slopes, which only in their upper parts become watered & wooded, & afford cultivated ground to maintain a considerable population; on the other coasts the slopes are less rapid, the shores spread out into wider plains, & the valleys opening from them contain much fertile soil. The interior of the island forms a plateau from 3,000 feet to 4,000 feet high, & is almost entirely covered by thick forests, partly roamed over by herds of wild cattle. Above the plateau rise three volcanic peaks, still active, the loftiest 12,800 feet high. Of Mauna-Loa, one of these peaks, a great eruption took place in 1852, when a column of molten lava was projected into the air a height of 500 ft. The lava formed in some places a river 1 m. wide, & filled up ravines 100 feet, 200 feet, & 300 feet deep. The altitude of the eruption was about 10,000 feet above sea level. The second island, Maui, W. from Hawaii, is no less mountainous, & consists of two peninsulas connected by a flat isthmus; the one on the W. with hills of only moderate height, & a fertile soil, while the other runs to the height of 10,000 feet. Oahu, the third large isl., has in its N. part two summits rising from 3,000 feet to 4,000 feet; but the whole of the S. part consists of a large & fertile plain, forming the best-cultivated & most populous district of the whole group. On its S. shore a wide barrier-reef contributes to form the excellent harbor of Honolulu. Kauai, the fourth large island, resembles Hawaii in its formation, & has an elevated plateau, with mountains rising from it to the height of 7,000 feet. The inhabitants of the group belong to the light-colored oceanic stock, & bear a very close resemblance to the other islanders of the Pacific, particularly the Tahitians, in bodily appearance as well as in customs and modes of life, though in none of the other groups has civilization made so decided progress, and produced more abundant fruits. In 1852 the number of free schools was 535, & of scholars 15,482. The islands were discovered by Cook in 1778; & though that distinguished navigator afterwards lost his life by the natives at Hawaii, they from the first manifested a decided inclination to live on friendly terms with Europeans, & a peculiar aptitude for understanding and adopting European manners & arts. They also gave a welcome reception to the Protestant missionaries sent among them, & voluntarily exchanged heathenism for Christianity. The benefits thus obtained have been seriously interfered with by the intermeddling of Popish priests, whose alleged ill-usage by the natives has furnished the French with a pretext of demanding redress, & thereby endangering the independence of the native government, though the monarchical principle was more fully recognized in it, & less hampered by the influence of powerful chiefs than in most other islands of the Pacific. The advantageous position of the Sandwich Islands, making them a kind of connecting link between America & China, led to the early establishment of numerous European and American settlers, & the rapid rise of a very extensive trade. To the three principal whaling grounds of the North Pacific—one on the equator, another near Japan, & the third toward the Behring Sea,—they form a kind of common centre to the ships passing between them; & hence Honolulu, the capital of the group, promises to become the entrepôt of the N. portion of the great ocean. One very remarkable circumstance connected with this group is the rapid decrease of its population. Captain Cook estimated it at 400,000; probably 300,000 would have been nearer the truth. In 1823, within the course of half a century, it had diminished to 140,000. An actual census in 1832 gave only 130,315; & another in 1836, 108,579; in 1850, 84,165; & in Dec. 1853, 73,137. The decrease has thus continued without interruption since the island was discovered; & independent of the census, is proved by the quantity of rich land once occupied, but now lying waste from want of hands to cultivate it. One cause of decrease is the number of young men who leave the islands in whalers & other ships & never return; but the main cause appears to be the prevalence of measles, hooping-cough, & similar diseases.

The total amount of imports for 1853 has exceeded those of 1852 by $522,082 64. From the United States, they amounted to $954,919 93, which is more than three-fourths of the whole amount imported. The following are the imports for the past 4 years:—

1850.	1851.	1852	1853.
$1,035,058 70	$1,823,821 68	$759,868 54	$1,281,951 18

Giving an average for the four years of $1,225,175 02. The amount of imports for 1853 exceeds the average of the past four years by $56,776 16.

FOREIGN EXPORTS—COMPARISON FOR FOUR YEARS.

1850.	1851.	1852.	1853.
$46,529 72	$381,402 55	$381,143 51	$191,397 66

DOMESTIC EXPORTS.

1850	$596,522 63	1852	$638,395 20
1851	309,828 94	1853	275,374 17

REVENUE.

1850	$121,506 73	1852	$113,091 93
1851	160,602 19	1853	155,640 17

VESSELS.—THE FOLLOWING ARE THE ARRIVALS:—

	1850.	1851.	1852.	1853.
Merchant	469	446	235	194
Whale-ships	237	135	519	535

Of the above whale-ships, some have touched at two or more ports, consequently the number of different vessels are not so great as the figures seem to show. From the above statistics, says the Polynesian, the great lack of a domestic export, to anything like the amount of our imports, is glaringly conspicuous, & will call for some renewed effort, we trust, to create or increase it. An export is now the great desideratum.

VALUE OF GOODS IMPORTED INTO THE SANDWICH ISLANDS DURING THE YEAR 1853.

One-third of the superfices is occupied by barren and stony deserts; forests are extensive, & afford excellent timber, & wheat, barley, & peas are exported, although agricultural operations are conducted in the rudest manner, & there are no good roads. The cultivation of the vine is increasing in importance; olive oil is of inferior quality; tobacco is a royal monopoly; silk is produced in small quantity. Domestic animals are small & of inferior breeds. Cheese from the milk of sheep & goats is extensively made, & forms a valuable export. Deer, wild boars, & foxes abound, & the skins of hares, rabbits, martens, & foxes, are exported. Salt is a royal monopoly. Tunny & coral fisheries are are important, but conducted chiefly by foreigners. The island affords valuable lead and other minerals, but they are rendered useless for want of means of conveyance. Manufactures are unimportant. Since 1838, the island has been div. into 3 administrative portions, Cagliari & Nuoro in the S., & Sassari in the N. These are subdivided into 11 provs., named from their chief towns—Cagliari, Iglesias, Isili, Lanusei, Nuoro, Sassari, Alghero, Cuglieri, Oristano, Ozieri, & Tempio. The isl. is governed by a viceroy, resident at Cagliari, who is Lieut. & Captain-general. The religion is exclusively Roman Catholic. There are two universities, one at Cagliari with 402, & another at Sassari with 318 students in 1838. There is a primary school in each village. Sardinia was colonized by the Carthaginians, from whom it was taken by the Romans in the third Punic war. On the fall of the Western Empire, it came successively under the power of the Vandals, Goths, & Moors. At the end of the 12th century, it was held by the Genosese, & afterwards by the kings of Aragon till 1713. In 1720 it was acquired by Savoy in exchange for Sicily. It was the only portion of the Sardinian dominions which was left in the power of the sovereign during the usurpation of the French from 1798 to 1814.

SAVANNAH, p-o., Macon co., N. C.

SAVANNAH, city, port of entry, & capital of Chatham county, Georgia, is situated on the right b. of the Savannah r., 17 m. from its mouth. It is in 32° 4′ 56″ N. lat. & 81° 8′ 18″ W. lon. from Greenwich, & 4° 10′ W. from Washington. It is 118 S.W. from Charleston; 123 S.E. Augusta; 158 E.S.E. Milledgeville; 662 S. by W. from W. The population in 1810, was 5,195; in 1820, 7,523; in 1830, 7,776; in 1840, 11,214; in 1850, 15,312; in 1854, 19,000.

The city is built on a sandy plain, elevated about 40 feet above the level of the tide. It was formerly considered unhealthy, which chiefly arose from the rice grounds in the neighborhood; but the citizens subscribed $70,000 to induce the owners of the plantations to substitute a dry for a wet cultivation of that article, by which the health of the city has been much improved. The city is regularly laid out in the form of a parallelogram, with streets, many of them wide, crossing each other at right angles. There are ten public squares, containing 2 acres each, at equal distances from each other. These squares, & many of the streets, are bordered with trees, & particularly with the Pride of India, which gives them a beautiful appearance. The monument erected to General Greene, & especially the one to the memory of Count Pulaski, who fell in the attack against the British at Savannah, is a beautiful & tasty structure. Many of the houses are of brick, & a considerable number of them are elegant. The city is lighted with gas, & well supplied with water from the river, raised by 2 powerful steam engines into a reservoir 120 feet above the surface of the river, and distributed through the city in iron pipes. On the E. & W. of the city are marshes; & a pine barren extends 2 m. to the S.

It has a good harbor. Vessels requiring 14 ft. of water come up to the wharves of the city, & larger vessels come up to Five Fathom Hole, 4 miles below. The city is defended by Fort Wayne on the E. side, & by Fort Jackson at Five Fathom Hole, 4 m. below, and by Fort Pulaski on Cockspur isl., 14 miles below the city. Much of the trade of Georgia centres in Savannah—the principal articles of which are cotton, rice, & lumber; 20 steamboats of a large size, & 50 steam towboats navigate the river. On Tybee island, at the mouth of the river, is a light-house. One line of steam packets ply regularly between Savannah & New York, Charleston, & also Philadelphia, & one connects with the British line to the Bermudas & British West Indies, & sailing vessels to all the Atlantic ports of the Union. The Savannah river furnishes great facilities for internal trade, & this river is connected to the Ogeechee by a canal 16 miles long, which terminates at Savannah.

There are 16 churches.—2 Baptist, 2 Episcopal, 1 Jews' Synagogue, 1 Lutheran, 1 Mormon, 1 Methodist, 2 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, and 4 colored congregations, 3 of which are Baptist, & 1 Methodist. The Exchange is a heavy Gothic building, 5 stories high; the academy is 180 feet long by 60 wide, 3 stories high. The City Hall, the Hospital, the Court House, Exchange, Custom House, Female Asylum, Armory, Arsenal, Hall of the Georgia Historical Society, Athenæum, Institute of the Sisters of our Lady of Mercy, Academy, &c.; 5 banks, aggregate capital $2,419,940; 4 printing offices, issuing 3 daily & one weekly newspaper. Capital employed in manufac.

1850, $130,550; value of manufactured articles, $256,250. Savannah is the port for an extensive region, rich in agricultural & mineral wealth, & by the immense extent of railroad converging to this point (about 1,200 miles) will undoubtedly be the port of the Southern Atlantic coast. The cotton shipped from Savannah, September, 1852, amounted to 11,261 bales of sea isl., & 341,857 bales of upland, and the same year there were shipped 39,929 casks of rice, & 25,508,500 feet of lumber. Tonnage of port 1853, 20,595 tons.

This city was founded in 1733 by General James Oglethorpe and others. It was taken by the British in 1778, but they abandoned it in 1782. On the 10th of January, 1820, 463 buildings were burned, occasioning a loss of property amounting to $4,000,000; but it has been rebuilt with additional beauty.

Surface mountainous; traversed on S. & S.E. frontier by the Erzgebirge & Riesengebirge mountains, which rise to 4,000 feet in height; the mean elevation of the country is about 1,100 feet. The climate of Saxony, except in the mntns. dists., is mild & salubrious; mean temp. of year at Dresden, 49° .1; winter, 32° .7; summer 66° Fahr. Soil fertile in grain, and cultivated with the greatest care; the chief crop is rye; wheat & barley are grown in the valleys, oats & potatoes in the higher dists. Fruit is extensively cultivated, & good wine is produced from the vineyards of the Elbe. The forests, which cover ⅓ of the surface, furnish excellent timber. The breed of merino sheep is celebrated and yields valuable wool, much of which is exported to England. Cattle are of a superior description; horses are not extensively reared. The country is drained by the Elbe & its affls., the Black Elster, the Mulde, & the Saale. Saxony is rich in mines of iron, lead, copper, silver, cobalt, bismuth, antimony & coal. Mining occupies a great proportion of the pop. Upwards of 500 mines are in active operation; the centre of the mining dist. is at Freiberg. Porcelain, clay, marble, and building stones are abundant. The chief manuf. of Saxony is that of cotton, in the spinning of which great improvements have recently been made, & there are many cotton printing works. The other chief branches of industry are linen & woollen weaving, stocking-making, & the fine porcelain of Meissen, called Dresden China. Commerce very extensive, especially in books & manufactured goods at Leipzig. The religion of the majority is Lutheranism. Public instruction is more developed than in any other country of Europe, the proportion being 1 pupil for every 6 of the pop.; & the university of Leipzig is one of the principal in Germany. The electorate of Saxony, created in 1422, was erected into a kingdom by Napoleon in 1806, who united to it the grand duchy of Warsaw, which, along with some portions of the Saxon territories, was detached from it in 1815. Previous to 1835, Saxony was divided into the 5 circles of Meissen, Leipzig, Erzgebirge, Voigtland, and Lusatia. The gov. is a hered. limited monarchy; a rep resent. system was organized in 1836. SCILLY ISLANDS, a group off the S.W. coast of England, included in the co. Cornwall, 30 m. W.S.W. the Land's-end. Lat. of lighthouse on St. Agnes 49° 53′ N., lon. 6° 20′ W. They consist of about 140 islets & rocks, the principal of the former being St. Mary, Tresco, St. Martin, Bryhar, St. Agnes, & Sampson. Aggregate area, 5,770 ac. Pop. 1851, 2,617, employed in fishing, agriculture, & manufacturing kelp. Climate mild, & soil in many parts fertile, producing good barley, rye, oats, & potatoes. Trees are few. Horses & cattle small; sheep plentiful, as are wild fowl. Hugh-Town, the cap., on the isl. St. Mary, is the seat of a judicial court of 12 persons, who undertake the civil government of the isls., & it has a pier, fort, & custom house. These isls. communicate by packets with Penzance, between them & which port is a dangerous rocky ledge termed the Wolf. They have several secure roadsteads; but numerous shipwrecks have occurred on them, in one of which 3 line-of-battle ships, under Sir Cloudesley Shovel, were totally lost, Oct. 22, 1707. They have been considered the Cassiterides or tin islands of the ancients, & there is a tradition that a tract of land connected them with Cornwall, but they have no mines of tin or any other metal.—II. a group in the Pacific Ocean, lat. 16° 28′ S., lon. 156° 10′ W.—Scilly is a fishing vill. of Irel., Munster, co. Cork, forming a maritime suburb of Kinsale. Pop. 776.

SCINDE, or SINDE, a country of N.W. India, now annexed to the British presid. Bombay, drained by the lower Indus, & comprising its delta, extending from the Indian Ocean in lat. 23° 32′ N. northward to the junction of the Chenab with the Indus, in lat. 28° 50′ N., & between lon. 66° 37′ & 71° 16′ E., having S.E. Cutch, E. the Indian desert & Bhawlpoor, & W. Afghanistan & Beloochistan. Length N. to S. about 380 m., greatest breadth 300 m. Area, 60,000 sq. m. Pop. 1,000,000. It presents in some respects a remarkable similarity to Egypt, being a plain divided by a large river, & bounded on one side by mountains, & on the other by a desert; but though fertile on the river banks, it is far inferior in productiveness, population, & civilization to the valley of the Nile. The delta is encumbered with jungle & tall grass; & the lands bordering it are poor, destitute of fresh water, & after the inundation of a dry clay, incrusted with salt. Upper Scinde is the most fertile part of the country, being irrigated by canals, & yielding rice, wheat, barley, oil-seeds, millet, opium, indigo, maize, sugar-cane, cotton, pulse, & excellent vegetables, with dates, mangoes, plantains, & the fruits common to S. Europe. Much of the country has, however, been depopulated by the Ameers, & laid waste for hunting grounds. Mimosas, banyans, palms, & mangroves are amongst the principal trees. Camels, buffaloes, sheep, goats, horses, & asses are the domestic animals; wool is an important product, & is manufactured into bags, ropes, & strong cloths. Climate extremely sultry & dry; at Hyderabad the thermometer has been found to stand in the shade at 98°.5, during a part of the day for six months of the year, & epidemic diseases are frequent & destructive. Tigers, hyenas, wolves, & other formidable animals are numerous, & alligators swarm in the pools of the delta. Coarse cloths, felt, mats, arms, leather, & horse furniture, earthen-wares, cotton, silk, & embroidered fabrics, are made in the towns, but few manufactured goods are fitted for exportation; the exports consisting chiefly of the natural produce, rice & other grains, ghee, hides, fish, wool, salt, & nitre from the soil, oil & oil-seeds, bark, alkalies, firewood, opium, tobacco, camels, & horses. Imports are chiefly manuf. goods, madder & other dyes, groceries, metals, gems, timber, cordage, bamboos, & dried fruits. Kurrachee, at the mouth of the Indus, is the chief port & seat of foreign trade. The inhabitants are partly Hindoos, partly Beloochees, & Mohammedans, the lower classes of the latter being of the sunnee, & the upper or ameers of the shiah sect. Until lately the country was governed by the ameers, who exercised an aristocratic military despotism; but after open hostilities had been evinced by them against the British, their power was completely broken by the forces under Sir C. Napier in 1844, & Scinde became a Brit. dependency. Chief towns, Hyderabad the cap., Shikarpoor, Khyerpoor, Kurrachee, Tattah, Meerpoor, Hala, Larkhana, & Roree.

SCIO, CHIO, or KHIO, Chios, an isl. belonging to Turkey, off the West coast of Asia Minor, 4 m. W. Cape Blanco, from which it is separated by the Strait of Scio. Lat. of chief town on its E. coast, 38° 33′ 7″ N., lon. 26° 1′ E. Length N. to S. 32 m.; greatest breadth 18 m. Area, 505 sq. m. Surface very much diversified; it is naturally one of the richest & most beautiful isls. in the Levant; & it is recovering from the desolation to which it was reduced by the Turks during the Greek revolution. Principal products, wine of superior quality, mastic, silk, wool, cheese, figs, lemons, oranges, & other fruits; less corn has usually been raised than is required for home consumption. Previously to 1822, this isl. was the best governed, & most prosperous in the Grecian archipelago, & had thriving silk manufs. & a considerable trade with Constantinople, Syria, & Egypt; but in the above year, some of its inhabitants having joined the Samians in their revolt, nearly all the population, comprising from 120,000 to 130,000 persons, were massacred or sold into slavery, & the buildings & plantations were for the most part destroyed. Principal town Kastro, on its E. coast. The tragic poet Ion, the historian Theopompus, the sophist Theocritus, & the philosopher Metrodorus, were natives of this island, which also claims, in opposition to Smyrna, to have been the birthplace of Homer.

Scotland is separated from England by a waving line of the Cheviot hills in the centre, by the Tweed, which enters the sea at Berwick, on the East, & by the Solway Firth on the West. Its eastern shores are washed by the North Sea, & its western by the Atlantic. It is of an oblong irregular form, extending longitudinally due N. & S. 280 m., & varying in breadth from 170 to 100, 50, & 30 m. Area, 31,324 sq. miles, or 20,047,142 ac., 6·9 ac. to a person, 92 persons to a sq. mile. Pop. 1801, 1,599,068; 1841, 2,620,184; 1851, 2,888,742.

The greater part of the surface is irregularly distributed into mountain & valley, a very small proportion extending into level plains. The eastern side is bounded by a well-defined continuous waving line of coast, indented by the 4 estuaries of the Forth, Tay, Moray, & Dornoch Firths. The W. line again is exceedingly irregular, being broken up by innumerable headlands & bays, & thickly studded with islands of various magnitudes. The Solway Firth, the Firth of Clyde, Loch Fine, Loch Linnhe, Loch Carron, & Loch Broom, are here among the most conspicuous estuaries & bays. Scotland is divided into the Lowlands, comprehending that portion S. of the Tay, & the Low country all along the E. & N.E. coasts, & the Highlands comprehending the Central & Western & N. Western portions. The middle or Alpine region is the most elevated portion, & in general the greatest elevation of land exists towards the W. & N. coasts, while the country slopes gradually toward the E. The Grampian ranges of mountains, commencing with Ben-Nevis, S. W. corner of Inverness-shire, extend in a N. E. direction, intersecting the whole breadth of Scotland to near the E. shores in Aberdeenshire, & forming, with their offsets, an extensive mountain chain, with elevations varying from 4,375 to 3,000 & 2,000 feet. This Central Alpine region extends S. to the Tay, & N. & N. W. to the borders of the Moray Firth. The great valley of the Caledonian canal separates this middle region into two, but a continuation of the same Alpine mountains, extends also throughout Sutherlandshire, terminating at Cape Wrath. Granite, porphyry, primary schists, marble, & quartz rock, with occasionally metallic veins, form the strata of the district, while the old red sandstone formation fills up the valleys & the coast line on each side N. & S. of the Grampian mountains, extending, with the exception of the E. part of Aberdeenshire, along the whole coasts of Scotland, both E. & W. sides, from the Tay & Clyde N.wards. The middle portion of Scotland, from St. Andrews to St. Abb's head, & in corresponding lines westward to Dumbarton, comprehends the great coalfield of Scotland, intersected by the greenstone ranges of the Ochill mountains on the N., & the Lanarkshire hills, Pentlands, & Fife Lomonds, in the centre. Another coal district extends also into Berwickshire, & part of Roxburgh, while the whole region from the Lammermoor range S. & W. into Peebles, Dumfriesshire & Wigtonshire, is composed of the lower Silurian or graywacke formation. Limestone & ironstone are found in the coal districts, lead ore in the graywacke districts of Leadhills, silver in the Ochil mountains, & lead & antimony & manganese in the primary range of the Grampians. Traces of oolitic strata are found in the North & in the Western islands. The Cheviot mountains (which see) separate Scotland from England. The principal rivers in Scotland are the Tweed, Forth, Tay, N. & S. Esks, Dee, Don, Spey, Deveron, Lossie, Findhorn, Ness, Conon, Brora, Wick, & Helmsdale, on the eastern side; the Nith, Annan, Dee, Cree, Ayr, Doone, Clyde on the S. & W.; while no conspicuous rivers flow into the ocean on the Western or N. Western coasts. Lakes are numerous, and many of them famed for picturesque beauty. Loch Lomond, Loch Awe, Loch Tay, Loch Ness, Loch Maree, are the most extensive, and all these, & several others are noticed under separate heads. The isls. consist of the Orkney, Hebrides, and Shetland groups, also separately noticed. The climate of Scotland varies according to the locality. The W. & S. parts are mild, but humid: the central elevated regions chill & humid, the eastern plains and Lowlands more genial, though exposed in spring to chill E. winds. In the Lowlands the summer is not so hot, but the winter is, on the whole, milder than that of England, and the climate is reckoned salubrious, and favorable to longevity. The following table exhibits the mean annual temperature of several localities:

	Mean of winter	Mean of summer	Mean of year	Rainy days
	Deg.	Deg.	Deg.
Edinburgh	38·1	57·2	47·1	24.
St. Andrews	39·2	58·9	48·6
Aberdeen	39·0	59·5	49·2	27·5
Elgin	38·4	57·0	47·7	25·0
Inverness	35·0	57·0	46·0	27·0
Glasgow	39·6	60·1	49·8	29·5
Perth (Kinfauns)	37·6	57·2	46·9	30·7

Mean annual temp. of mainland 47° 9 Fahr. Prevailing winds W. and S. W.: in spring N. & N. E. Most rain falls on the W. coasts. The central W. & N. W. districts of Scotland are chiefly grazing & pastoral, the valleys and plains of the E. & S. districts agricultural. The alluvial, or carse lands of Stirling, Falkirk, & Gowrie, the plains of the Lothians, and Clydesdale, portions of Fife, Berwick, and Roxburghshires in the S., & Moray & Ross-shires in the N., are the most fertile & most highly-cultivated soils in Britain, where all the usual agricultural products are raised. Landed property is in fewer hands than in England. Farms almost universally on leases, varying in extent from 50 to 1,000 acres, & pasture farms extend to 3,000 & 5,000 acres. Farming since the middle of last century, has arrived at a high degree of perfection. Supposed annual rental of Scotland about 6,000,000*l.* Total annual value of agricultural & pastoral land produced 29,327,144*l.* The rent of arable land ranges from 7*s.* to 3*l.* & 5*l.* per acre. Except in the greater preponderance of Alpine plants, the flora of Scotland resembles very much that of England. There are about 3,230 indigenous plants. Extensive pine forests, both natural & artificially planted, abound, and the usual fruit trees thrive well. The wild animals are the same as those in England. Grouse & ptarmigan abound in the moors, but the capercailzie (Tetrao Urogallus), formerly abundant, was exterminated about 1760. The English nightingale is unknown in Scotland. Salmon & trout abound in the rivers, & herrings, cod, haddocks, & other fish in the surrounding seas. Manufactures of cotton, linen, and woollen goods are extensively carried on in Scotland. In 1839, there were 676 mills or factories in operation, employing 59,124 persons. Value of cotton goods annually produced estimated at 5,000,000*l.* Coal and iron working, ship-building, coach-building, glass and stone ware manufactures & whiskey distilling, are among the other branches extensively pursued. About 6 million galls. whiskey, duty upwards of 1,000,000*l.*, are annually produced. The gross catch of herrings in 1851 was 725,410; the quantity cured was 594,057 barrels, & 131,385 barrels consumed uncured; the total quantity exported was 264,264 barrels. In the cod & ling department the produce of the fishery was 151,786 cwts., of which there were 92,083 cwts. cured dry, and 7,019 barrels cured in pickle; the quantity exported was 17,141 cwts. The total number of persons engaged in these fisheries in 1851 was 70,206, and 10,314 boats were employed. The tonnage employed in carrying salt was 30,463, & the number of hands was 2,146. The tonnage employed in exporting was 35,483, & the number of hands was 3,210. The tonnage of the fishing boats amounted to 79,382; the number of the square yards of netting employed was 30,088,486; the number of yards of lines was 27,822,295, & the total value of boats, nets, & lines, was 735,216*l.* During the year 1,894*l.* had been expended in the repair & improvement of various harbors on the coast, & various others are in progress; the most important of which are those at the harbors of Buckhaven and Lybster. There are excellent roads through all parts of the country, & railroad communication to all the leading towns S. of Aberdeen. The principal canals are the Forth and Clyde and Union canal, the Crinan and Caledonian canals. Chief towns, Edinburgh the capital, Glasgow, Perth, Dundee, Aberdeen, Dumfries, and Inverness. In each of the counties are a lord-lieutenant, a sheriff-depute & substitute, & local justices. The courts of session & justiciary exercise the supreme jurisdiction. EDINBURGH. The Roman Catholic religion was abolished in Scotland in 1560, when the Calvinistic Presbyterian form of church government was established by John Knox, consisting of one general assembly, 16 synods & 83 presbyteries. Since 1712, the right of appointing to livings is vested in the crown or in private patrons. A secession, on account of patronage, took place in 1741. In 1834 the Veto Act passed the general Assembly, modifying the right of patronage; but this act having been overthrown by Parliament, a disruption took place in 1843 of 470 clergymen, & the Free Church was formed. The older seceders, now called United Presbyterians, form a numerous body; & there are Roman Catholics, & a small proportion of Episcopalians; dissenters forming altogether about 2-3ds of the whole population. There are 1,023 parishes in Scotland & its islands, & 1,050 clergymen of the establishment. There is an endowed school in each pa., besides numerous other schools & academies, 5 universities, and several theological colleges & schools of medicine. From 1-8th to 1-10th of the pop. are calculated to be receiving education. Caledonia was the ancient name of Scotland, & the earliest inhabitants were Celtic, but at various periods colonies of Teutonic origin made descents upon and settled in the lowlands & central highlands of Scotland. Such probably were the Picts about the third century, & the Attacotti or Scoti from Ireland several centuries late. These latter gave their name to the whole country. The N. W. parts of Scotland & the Hebrides are still peopled by the Celtic race. That part S. of the Tay & Clyde, & the whole eastern coasts, including Caithness, are Saxon & Scandinavian. The central parts are a mixture of Saxon & Celtic. Erse or Gaelic, the language of the aboriginal Celts, is still spoken in the highlands. The old Scottish language is a cognate Teutonic dialect; it is now generally superseded by the modern English; though it will live in the works of Ramsay, Burns, & Scott.

Scotland, previously an independent kingdom, was joined to England in 1603, on the accession of James VI., & a legislative union of the two kingdoms took place in 1707. By this treaty 16 peers, elected from the whole body of Scottish peers, represented the country in the House of Lords; & the cos. returned 30 & the bors. 15 members to the House of Commons. In 1832 the bor. members were increased to 23. The elective franchise nearly corresponds to that of England. [Britain.]

SEVEREK, a town of Asiatic Turkey, pash. & 42 m. N.E. Diarbekir, on an affl. of the Euphrates, at the foot of a castellated height.

SEVERIN (ST.), a comm. & vill. of France, dep. Charente, cant. Aubeterre. Pop. 1,302.—Santa Severina is a town of Naples, prov. Calab. Ult. I., 13 m., W.N.W. Cotrone, with a castle, a cathedral, & 1,200 inhabitants.

SEVERN, river, Md., or more properly, an inlet of Chesapeake bay, extending inland 9 miles. The light house is on Thomas' Point, S. side of entrance. Lat. 38° 54′ 25″ N., lon. 76° 27′ 34″ W., has a fixed light on a tower 30 feet above water level.

SEVERN, one of the principal rivers of England & Wales, rises in Montgomeryshire, in a small lake on the E. side of Plinlimmon, 1,500 feet above the sea, flows at first generally N.E. until it enters England, & then successively S.E. & S. through Shropshire, Worcestershire, & Gloucestershire, & between Somersetshire & S. Wales, to its expansion into the Bristol Channel, 12 m. S.W. Bristol. Total length estimated at 210 m. Principal affls., the Terne, Upper & Lower Avon, Leyden, Chilt, & Frome, from the E., & the Terne, Wye, Usk, & Taff, from the W., many of which pour themselves into its estuary. From Newtown it has a total descent of 465 feet to the sea. It traverses a very fertile country, & is navigable from the sea to Welshpool, a distance of nearly 180 m. Barges ascend it as high as Bewdley, but its navigation is both tedious & difficult, to obviate which a canal, 18¼ m. in length, has been cut from Gloucester to the sea, & is navigable for vessels of 350 tons. From Welshpool to Newtown its navigation is continued by the Montgomery canal, & other canals connect it with the Thames, Trent, Mersey, & most other rivers of Central England. Four weirs or locks, between Stourport & Diglis, near Worcester, have been constructed. The tide, here termed the eagre, or bore, rushes into the Severn with such violence, that the stream sometimes rises suddenly 9 feet in height at Gloucester, & extensive embankments have accordingly been formed below that city to obviate the effects of its irruption. The tide is perceptible in the Severn as far as Diglis, below Worcester, 120 m. from its mouth. At its junction with the British Channel, the Severn is 10 m. across, & drains about 6,000 sq. m. The vessels engaged in the Shropshire trade are from 30 to 40 tons burden, in the lower parts of the riv. they range from 100 to 140 tons, & by far the greater part of the commerce is carried on betw. Glo'ster & the sea. Tolls received in 1847 by the Severn commission on account of improvements, 12,537*l.*

SEVERN, several rivers of British America.—I. Can. W., discharges the surplus waters of Lake Simcoe N. W.ward into Georgian Bay & Lake Huron. Course about 20 m. It has several rapids & falls.—II. N.W. territory, flows through Severn Lake, & enters Hudson Bay on its S.W. side, after a N.E. course of about 350 m.—The Severn is a name of the Dumaresque riv., E. Australia, which joins the Darling in lat. 28° 40′ S., lon. 150° E.

SEVERNDROOG, a strong hill fort of S. India (SAVINDROOG.)—II. a small isl. fortress, British India, off the Malabar coast, 83 m. S. Bombay.

SEVERO-VOSTOTCHNOI, the most N. point of Asia, Siberia. Lat. 78° 25′ N., lon. 108° E.

SEVILLA, or SEVILLE, Hispalis, a famous city of Spain, & its cap. during a part of the Gothic dynasty, cap. prov., on lt. b. of the Guadalquiver, here crossed by a bridge of boats, communicating with its suburb Triana, 60 m. N.N.E. Cadiz. Lat. (La Giralda) 37° 22′ 44″ N., lon. 6° 0′ 59″ W. Pop. 84,927. It is surrounded by Moorish walls about 5 miles in circuit, having numerous gates & towers, & the ramparts forming public walks; its interior has almost wholly an oriental appearance; streets mostly narrow lanes, but the Alameda in its centre is a magnificent thoroughfare, planted with elms, & decorated with fountains and statues, & of late years many new streets have been laid out in straight lines, & with regular & handsome residences. The cathedral, a structure of the 14th & 15th centuries, occupies the site of a mosque, & is the largest & finest church in Spain. It is 400 feet in length by 263 feet in breadth, & has a famous square tower—the Giralda, 337 feet in height, & surmounted by a colossal bronze statue of Faith. The interior is still most richly adorned, though many of its treasures were removed by the French, and it has numerous chapels, pictures by Murillo & other great artists, magnificent organs, & the tomb in which the remains of Columbus (now in the cathedral of Havana, Cuba), were first deposited. Around this edifice are the archbishop's palace, the chapter counting house, the alcazar, & the exchange in which are the archives of Spanish America. The Alcazar, a royal palace & gardens constructed in imitation of the Alhambra at Granada, contains the "court of Lions," perhaps the best piece of Arabic architecture in Spain, the magnificent hall of ambassadors, royal apartments, with many fine paintings, &c., & dwellings which are let out to private individuals or for lodging houses. Before the French revolutionary invasion, Sevilla is reported to have contained 140 pa. churches, besides numerous convents, most of which are now converted to other purposes, since, in 1845, it had only 31 churches. The royal tobacco & cigar factory is a huge edifice which employs 3,000 hands, principally females. Other principal buildings, are 29 monasteries, 35 convents, 11 hospitals, the city hall, barracks, prisons, theatres, the cannon foundry, arsenal, & in the centre of the city the plaza de toros, or bull-ring, enclosed by edifices of Moorish architecture, & capable of containing 14,000 spectators. The Torre d' Oro is an octagon tower, probably of Rom. construction; a Roman aqueduct still conveys water to the city from Alcala; & here are other remains of classic antiquity. Around the city are many fine public walks, & on one side is the Quemadero, or "burning place of the Inquisition," near which are a large city cemetery, & an English burying-ground. The suburb Triana, beyond the river, is inhabited chiefly by gipsies & smugglers, & near it is a Moorish dam, erected to prevent the effects of inundations to which the lower parts of the city are liable. Sevilla is the residence of a captain-general, & the seat of a royal audiencia, & of a university establishment in what was formerly a Jesuit college, & in which & the city museum are many fine paintings. It has a lyceum, a gunnery, and other public schools, & scientific associations. Its manufactures of silks are important, and it has other manufs. of woollen & linen cloths, hats, combs, soap, & earthenwares, some large leather factories, government iron foundries, & nitre factories, an active fishery in the river, a large coasting trade, & considerable exports of oranges, olives, & oil, extensively raised in the vicinity, the oranges being chiefly sent to England. The Guadalquivir is navigable up to the city for vessels of 100 tons burden; ships drawing more than 10 feet water load & unload 8 m. below the city. Chief imports are manufactured goods from England, hides, hemp, & flax from the Baltic, iron from Bilboa, and colonial produce from Cuba, &c. The Goths removed their capital from Sevilla to Toledo in the 6th century. The city was taken by the Moors in 711, & by Frederick II. in 1247, after which, until the time of Philip V., it was the chief residence of the Spanish monarchs. The French took it in 1810 & 1823. A few miles distant, on the W., is the vill. Santa Ponce, the anc. Italica, the birthplace of the emperors Trajan, Hadrian, & Theodosius the Great, & where are the remains of a Roman amphitheatre, & other vestiges of antiquity. Santa Ponce & Triana are the seats of large annual fairs. Pop. of the prov. 1842, 420,000.

SHETLAND, or ZETLAND ISLANDS, an archipelago of about 30 islands, in the N. Atlantic Ocean, belonging to Scotland, of which country, with the Orkneys, 50 miles S.S.W., it forms a county; mostly between lat. 59° 51′ & 60° 50′ N., & lon. 0° 44′ & 1° 44′ W., 180 miles S.E. the Faroe group, & 210 miles W. Bergen in Norway. Area, 5,388 square miles. Pop. 30,558. Mainland, in the S.W., comprises about half the area, & more than half the entire population, together with Lerwick & Scalloway, the only towns in the group. Other islands are Yell, Unst, Fetlar, Whalsey, Bressay, E. & W. Barra, Papa-Stour, Foula, the most N. (& conjectured to be the Ultima Thule of the ancients), & Fair Isle, intermediate between Shetland & Orkney. Shores rocky, & greatly indented with inlets, especially in Mainland. Climate very damp & variable, but snow or frost seldom lasts long in winter, at which season the aurora borealis is highly brilliant; night is scarcely known during May, June, & July. Gneiss, mica-schist, hornblende, & other slate, serpentine, primitive limestone, are the principal rocks. Surface generally mountainous, covered with heath, destitute of trees; & the valleys in Mainland, which all extend N. & S., are interspersed with many small lakes. Soil mostly light gravelly, & less productive than that of Orkney. Unst is the most fertile island. Lands are in numerous small, & about twenty large estates, the largest belonging to the E. of Zetland. Leases are uncommon, & agriculture is accordingly in the most backward condition; the surface is chiefly appropriated to rearing live stock, though some potatoes, turnips, & oats are raised. The cattle & horses are of small breeds, almost peculiar to Shetland; and many of the latter especially, being hardy & well-shaped little animals, have been of late years imported into England, especially to the coal pits in the N. cos., since the labor of women there has been prohibited. The sheep & logs are also good. The cod, ling, and tusk fisheries are highly important, employing a great proportion of the inhabs. Some copper, iron, & clay are met with; but few mines or quarries are wrought. Chromate of iron, or chrome yellow, is, however, an important article of export from Unst. Manufactures are almost wholly domestic, chiefly Shetland hosiery & shawles, woven by hand from fine wool; other exports cattle, fish, &c., sent S. in return for colonial & manufactured goods; besides which, there is some contraband import of tobacco, spirits, &c., from the Dutch vessels that frequent Shetland. Bearmeal, oatmeal, fish, & potatoes, constitute most part of the food of the people, who appear to be, as to their condition & education, better off than the population of the N. portion of the mainland of Scotland. They are chiefly of Norwegian descent, & their ancestors are said not to have embraced Christianity until the 13th cent. The isls. form a synod of the Scottish church, &, together with Orkney, they send 1 member to House of Commons. Scandinavian antiquities are numerous in the isls., & on Fetlar are the vestiges of a Roman camp. [New South Shetland.]

The Siamese are a peculiar race of the Mongolian family; average height, 5 feet 2 inches. In bodily and mental energy they are inferior to the Chinese or neighboring nations. They have made small progress in useful or ornamental arts, & most of the manufs. & handicrafts in the towns are carried on by Chinese or Anamese settlers. Only two roads of any consequence exist in the country; one from Bang-kok to Yuthia, & the other in the E. from Chantibon to Fung-gai; but a navigable canal connects the Menam & Menam-kong rivers. Trade with China, Anam, Camboja, Tonquin, Java, Singapore, & the E. Archipelago, is considerable; & there is occasionally a direct intercourse with Bombay & Surat, England & America. Silver and cowries are the only medium of traffic. Government, an absolute monarchy, & the people are in a most servile condition. There is is no standing army, but every male subject is liable to serve for a portion of the year. A numerous force of war-junks & galleys is kept up, & manned by Chinese & other foreigners. Buddhism, of a degraded kind, is the religion of the state. Slavery is common. Public revenue has been estimated at upwards of 3,100,000*l.* a-year, which the expenditure nearly balances. The first intercourse with Europeans took place in 1511 & the first British ship reached Bang-kok in 1612. In 1683, a Greek named Phalcon was raised to the dignity of foreign mininster of Siam, & opened a communication with France; but the French were expelled from the country in 1690; since that time the conquest of a part of Camboja has formed the chief event of Siamese history.—The Gulf of Siam, between lat. 7° & 14° N., & lon. 99° & 105° E., is wholly surrounded by Siam, except on the S., where it opens into the China Sea. Length 500 miles; breadth at entrance 300 miles. It receives the Menam and several other rivers.

SIBERIA, SIBIRI, or ASIATIC RUSSIA, comprises all the N. part of Asia, extending from the Ural mntns. to the Pacific Ocean & Behring Strait, & having S. the Chinese empire, and independent Turkestan, & N. the Arctic Ocean, in which it comprises the isls. of New Siberia. Area estimated at 5,393,250 square miles, & pop. at 2,937,066, of whom about half are Mohammedans & pagans. The cold of winter is extreme, from 20° to 72° below zero of Fahr., while the summer heat is excessive. Surface in the S. elevated by the Altai chain covered with forests, & interspersed with many fertile valleys; but by far the greater portion of Siberia is flat and sterile. In the W. are extensive steppes, inhabited by Cossack tribes, or roving Kirghiz, & all the N. half is a vast desert peopled by Ostiaks, Yakuts, Tchuktchi, & other tribes in the lowest state of barbarism. The Obi, Yenisei & Lena rivers, with their large & numerous tributaries, & the Olenek, Indighirka, & Kolyma traverse the country in a N. direction, & enter the Arctic Ocean. Principal lakes are those of Baikal, Tchany, & Sumy, with the Balkash-Nor, or Lake Tenghiz, which forms a part of its S. boundary. In the more populated districts, corn sufficient for the pop. is raised; it is chiefly barley, oats, & buck-wheat. Cattle are numerous in some parts, & in the N. reindeer, foxes, martens, beavers, & bears, the skins of which compose important articles of trade. Siberia is, however, chiefly valuable to Russia, on account of its minerals. The produce of the mines in 1850 was 81,919 lbs. troy of pure gold, & 52,053 lbs. of silver. The government has recently resumed the monopoly of the gold-washings. Antimony, cobalt, mercury, & zinc are also met with; iron & copper are plentiful on the S. frontier in the gov. Tobolsk. Manufs. are nearly insignificant, except in some of the provincial caps. Irkutsk has an imperial factory of woollens for the clothing of the troops, & some manufs. of linen, glass, hats, soap, &c., and it is the great entrepôt of the commerce of N.E. Asia, receiving from Kiachta on the Chinese frontier, tea, rhubarb, fruit, paper, silks, porcelain

Tobolsk has tanneries, & manufactures of soap & felt. W. Siberia consists of the gov. Tobolsk & Tomsk, E. Siberia of Yeniseisk & Irkutsk, the prov. Yakutsk, Istricts Okhotsk & Kamtchatka, and the Tchuktchi country. The govs. are organized & governed like those in European Russia; the army of Siberia consists of 16 battalions of infantry, & a brigade of artillery. Chief cities Tobolsk & Irkutsk, respectively the W. & E. caps., with Omsk, Tomsk, Krasnoyarsk, Yakutsk, Kiachta, Semipalatinsk, & Petropaulovsk. A line of fortified posts protects the country on the side of Independ. Turkistan. [New Siberia—Russia.]

SICILIES (KINGDOM OF THE TWO). [Naples—Sicily.]

SICILY, p-o., Highland co., O.

SICILY, Trinacria & Sicilia, the largest & finest isl. in the Mediterranean, between lat. 36° 39′ & 38° 18′ N., & lon. 12° 25′ & 15° 40′ E., separated on the N.E. from S. Italy by the strait of Messina, 2 m. broad, & forming the Dominii al-di-la di Faro, or the territory "beyond the strait" of the kingdom of the "Two Sicilies." Shape triangular; length E. to W. 185 m.; greatest breadth N. to S. along its E. coast 120 miles. Its old divisions into Val Demone, V. di Noto, & V. di Mazzara, are now obsolete, & it is subdivided into the follow provs. or intendencies:

Provinces.	Area in sq. m.	Pop. in 1851.	Chief Cities.
Palermo	1,988	514,517	Palermo.
Girgenti	1,377	245,974	Girgenti.
Trapani	1,360	182,809	Trapani.
Caltanisetta	1,192	180,791	Caltanisetta.
Messina	1,390	349,484	Messina.
Noto (Syracuse)	1,484	237,814	Syracuse.
Catania	1,765	379,991	Catania.
Total	10,556	2,091,580

The Neptunian or Madonian mountains stretching from E. to W. through the N. part of the isl., consist of granite, quartz, & mica, flanked, as in the Apennines, by limestone & other calcareous formations; they rise to several thousand feet in height, & cover a great part of the surface with their ramifications. In some parts are mountains isolated from the rest, the chief of which is Mount Etna, near the E., 10,872 feet above the sea. The principal plains border the sea, & are those of Catania & Syracuse in the E., that adjoining Trapani in the W., & those of Milazzo & Terranova. Rivers all small and unnavigable; the chief are the Giarretta, watering the plain of Catania, the Salso, Platani, Belici, flowing to the S. coast. The chief lakes are Biviere, or Lentini, near the E. coast, & the pool of Etna, in the centre of the island. Soil everywhere of high fertility; in some places it consists of a rich loam from 20 to 30 feet deep. Climate generally salubrious, except in some of the low lands. Mean temper. of the year at Catania, 67° .4, winter 52° .8, summer 84° .5; at Palermo, year 61° .1, winter 52° .5, summer 74° .4′ Fahr. Summer heats are oppressive; snow is never seen, except on Etna, & the highest points of the Madonian mountains; & the cold of winter is never so severe as to effect the verdure of the country. The papyrus, sugar-cane, date, palm, & other tropical products ripen at a height of 600 feet; evergreens flourish at 2,000 feet; oak & chestnut woods cover the mountain sides to the height of 4,000 wheat; wheat thrives at 4,500 ft., & beach woods prevail to 6,000 feet in elevation. Under the Romans, Sicily was considered the granary of Italy, but owing to oppressive exactions & restrictions, there are few countries in which agriculture is so ill conducted; and it is stated that instead of corn, nearly one-third of the population derive their subsistence mainly from the fruit of the Indian fig, a species of cactus which grows wild in profusion. Lands chiefly belong to the nobility, the clergy, or the crown. Wheat & barley are exported in small quantities. Other chief crops are beans, pulse, maize, rice, olive oil, oranges, lemons, almonds, & other fruits, potatoes, tobacco, flax, hemp, sumach, liquorice, & manna. Silk is produced chiefly in the N.E. part of the island, & woven at Catania; in the W. 30,000 pipes of wine are annually made, of which from 18,000 the 20,000 are exported from Marsala. Pastoral industry receives little attention; & except a few merino sheep, & good mules, all kinds of live stock are very inferior. The sulphur beds of Sicily are of the highest importance; they extend over the centre & the S., in an area of 2,700 sq. miles, in which about 150 mines are wrought. The sulphur is found in tertiary formations, & the increase in its production within a few years had been so rapid, that in 7 months of 1838 nearly 77,800 tons were yielded, & this branch of industry employed 12,200 men & boys. In 1838, a monopoly in the export of sulphur was granted by the Neapolitan government to a French mercantile firm, which resulted in such a diminution in the general trade of Sicily, that after a vigorous remonstrance from the British government, it was quashed in 1842, & trade is again on the increase. Alum, nitre, salt, bitumen, gypsum, and marble, are valuable mineral products; ores of copper, lead, iron, & mercury are found in the mountains, but few mines are wrought there, & nearly all metallic goods are imported. The tunny, sword-fish, & anchovy fisheries are important, & those of Palermo lately employed from 900 to 1,000 boats & 3,500 fishermen. The coral fishery on the African coast is frequented by many fishermen from Trapani, where the coral procured is polished. Silk manufs. at Catania, Palermo, Messina, employ several hundred looms; & in the same cities hides & skins are dressed. At Trapani are some cotton factories wrought by steam; other manufs. are unimportant. Chief exports, sulphur, olive oil, oranges & lemons, wine & spirits, sumach, silks, & corn, barilla, essences, salted fish, linseed, manna, rags, & skins. Imports sugar & other colonial produce, cotton & other manuf. goods, hides, iron, deals, & wax. Messina, Palermo, Trapani, & Catania, are the chief seats of commerce. Each intendency is governed by a prefect with a council & secretary. Each town has its judicial court; superior courts are in Palermo, Messina, & Catania; & a supreme court sits in Palermo, the cap. Except about 58,000 inhabitants, of Greek descent, mostly near Palermo, & several thousand Jews, the inhabs. are all Roman Catholics. In 1832, there were 658 monasteries in the island. Education is chiefly in the hands of the clergy, & is said to be better conducted than in S. Italy. Palermo & Catania have universities; there are colleges & academies in 21 towns, & a primary and secondary school in each commune. In Catania there are schools of mutual instruction. This island was, in ancient times, the seat of many flourishing Greek colonies, of which Syracuse & Agrigentum were the most famous. It fell successively under the Carthaginians,

Romans, Goths, Greek emperors, Saracens, Normans, French, Spaniards, &c.; it was annexed to Naples in 1736. In 1847, 1848, & 1849, attempts were made by the Sicilians to shake off the Neapolitan gov. Messina was bombarded & taken by the Neapolitan troops 7th September, 1848, and Catania 6th April, 1849. [NAPLES.]

SMYRNA, a famous city & seaport of Asia Minor, & the chief commercial emporium of W. Asia, Anatolia, on a plain at the head of the Gulf of Smyrna, & partly upon the declivity of the ancient Mons Pagus, which is crowned by a citadel, a structure of the 13th century. Lat. of Daraghaz point 38°·26′ 5″ N., lon. 27° 9′ 7″ E. Estimated pop. 150,000, of whom 80,000 are Turks, 40,000 Greeks, 15,000 Jews, 10,000 Armenians, & 5,000 Franks. It has a fine appearance from the sea, but is in general wretchedly built; houses mostly of wood, & only one story in height, streets narrow & filthy. The Frank & Greek quarters extend from about 2¼ m. along the shore; above these is the Armenian quarter; & the Turks occupy all the upper parts of the city, having between them & the Armenians two close quarters inhabited by the Jews. Principal edifices, the bazaar & market place; the vizier-khan, constructed of the marble ruins of the ancient theatre, the palace of the governor, new barracks for 3,000 men, several synagogues, 5 Greek, 2 Roman Catholic, 2 Armenian, & 2 Protestant churches, and about 20 mosques, which are always open for the inspection of Christians & others. Numerous coffee-houses & gardens are scattered along the banks of the river Meles, which enters the gulf E. the city; and extensive cemeteries occupy portions of the declivity of Mount Pagus, on which are various remains of the ancient city, the seat of one of the "seven churches" of the early Christian period mentioned in Scripture. Smyrna has a large Armenian academy, & it is the residence of consuls of most of the principal European states. Trade chiefly with Great Britain, Austria, France, & the U. States. Exports consist of silk, raw cotton, carpets, raw copper, opium, hides, madder, & wool, besides goats'-hair & skins, valonea, olive oil, drugs, gums, sponge, figs, raisins, & nut-galls. Imports comprise coffee to about 6 million lbs. annually, woollen, cotton, & silk fabrics, metals raw & manufactured, sugar, indigo, spirits, cochineal, & spices. Smyrna has claimed to be the birth-place of Homer. In 1402, it was ruined by Timour, & it has since suffered repeated vicissitudes, especially from destructive earthquakes & visitations of the plague, but its admirable situation for commerce has caused it, after each new calamity, rapidly to regain its wonted importance. It suffered severely from fire in July 1845.—The Gulf of Smyrna, an inlet of the Ægean Sea, extends inland for 45 m., the breadth of its entrance 22 m. It has in most parts good anchorage, & ships of large burden can anchor close to the quays of Smyrna near its E. extremity. It contains several isls., the principal of which, Long Island, is 5 m. in length.

SOUTHAMPTON (COUNTY OF), SOUTHAMPTONSHIRE, HAMPSHIRE, or HANTS, a maritime co. of Engl., having S. the English Channel, with its inlets Spithead, the Solent, &c., E. Sussex and Surrey, N. Berkshire, & W. Wilts & Dorset. Area, including the Isle of Wight, 1,672 sq. m., or 1,070,216 ac., of which 909,000 are estimated to be under culture. Inhab. houses 75,238. Pop. 1851, 405,370. The ranges of the N. & S. downs traverse the co., being on the W. offsets from the table-land of Salisbury plain, and on the E. continuous with the downs of Sussex and Surrey. In the S. are the extensive bays Southampton-water & the harbors of Portsmouth & Langston, with the islets of Portsea & Hayling. The S.W. division of the co. is mostly occupied by the New Forest. In other parts are the forests of Bére, Alice Holt, Woolmer, &c., & most parts of the co. are well wooded. A long & narrow strip is enclosed by the county Sussex. In the N., N.E., & S.W., are exten. heaths. Soil generally well cultivated. S. Hants is particularly noted for rural and maritime beauty. Principal rivers, the Anton, Itchin, Avon, & Stour. All the usual crops are raised; hops are cultivated on the E. border, near Farnham; large quantities of cider are made, & the bacon of the co. is in repute. Manufs., except those connected with the dockyard & shipping estabs. at Portsmouth, are of little importance. Some silks are made at Overton; paper, sacking, shalloons, bombazines, druggets, linseys, & other woollen stuffs, chiefly in the N., & salt from pans at Lymington. Emsworth, on the border of Sussex, has some famous oyster beds. The Basingstoke canal is in the N.E., and the co. is intersected by the London & S. Western r. r., with several branches, & the S. coast r. r. terminating at Portsmouth. Trade centres chiefly at Southampton & Portsmouth. The co. is subdivided into 39 hunds., & is included in the W. circuit, & diocese of Winchester, the cap.; besides which it contains the parl. bors. Southampton, Portsmouth, Christchurch, Lymington, Petersfield, & the market towns Gosport, Alresford, Alton, Basingstoke, Fordingbridge, Lymington, Christchurch, Romsey, & Ringwood. The co. with bors. sends 19 mems. to H. of C. The ruined city of Silchester in the N., Portchester with its anc. castle in the S., & Carisbrooke castle, in the Isle of Wight, are amongst its principal antiquities, besides those in Winchester, the ancient cap. of the kingdom Wessex, & of England during the Saxon, Norman, & early Plantagenet dynasties.

SOUTHAMPTON, a parl. & munic. bor., seaport town, & co. of England, in the S. part of the county Hants, occupying a peninsula between the mouths of the Test & Itchin rivers, at the head of Southampton-water, 12 m. S.S.W. Winchester, on the South-Western r. r., 72 m. S.W. London. Lat. of St. Michael's spire, 50° 54′ N., lon. 1° 24′ 2″ W. Pop. 1851, 35,305. Its external appearance, especially from a distance at sea, is highly prepossessing. On the N. road it is entered by a noble avenue of trees; and its main street, upwards of 1 m. in length, equals in beauty almost any in London, & is separated into two parts by the Bar-gate, a portion of the ancient walls, which still partially enclose the old town. Over the Bar-gate is the town-hall; other principal structures are 29 churches, viz.: 5 Baptists, 2 Bible Christians, 10 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 1 French Protestant, 1 Jews' Synagogue, 2 Methodist, 1 Mormon, 1 Catholic Apostolical, 1 Roman Catholic, 2 Unitarian, & 2 isolated congregations,—the audit & custom-houses, theatre, public baths, two sets of assembly rooms, dock company's office, railroad station, three piers, & the cavalry barracks. The suburbs are extensive & increasing. Around are many elegant villas, & the town is well supplied with water from a large Artesian well on Southampton common. Public institutions comprise the free grammar school, founded by Edward VI., an hospital, dating from the time of Henry III.; numerous alms-houses & other charities, a royal humane society, mechanics' literary & polytechnic institutions, an infirmary, botanic garden; & the surveying department of the ordnance board is now established at Southampton. The new docks, on the E. of the town, opened in 1842, have an area of 208 acres, & have admitted steamers of more than 700 tons burden. The W. India, Mediterranean, & other mails, have their station here, & the town communicates by steamers with all the ports of S. England, the Channel islands, Ireland, & by railroad with London, and all the centre of England. The port extends from near Portsmouth to Christchurch. Here are some manufs. of silks and carpets, but ship-building & general commerce are the chief sources of wealth. Southampton is a place of fashionable resort in summer. The bor. is divided into 5 wards, & governed by a mayor, 10 aldermen, & 30 councillors. Markets, Tuesday, Thursday, & Saturday. It has annual races & regatta. The borough sends 2 mems. to H. of C. Southampton appears to have risen on the decline of the anc. Clausentum, at Bittern, on the estuary of the Itchin; & in Saxon times it had a castle, of which, however, little, if any portion, now remains.—Southampton Water is a fine inlet, stretching from the Solent & Spithead, N.W. into the interior of Hampshire for about 11 miles; greatest breadth about 2 m. It bounds the New Forest hunds. on the E., receives the Anton, Itchin, and Hamble rivers. Its shores are picturesque, & it is usually covered with shipping. Calshot castle is on the W. side of its entrance, & the ruined Netley abbey on its E. shore.

SOUTHAMPTON ISLAND, Brit. N. A., on the N. side of Hudson Bay, is between lat. 62° & 66° N., lon. 80° & 87° W. Coasts rugged & mountainous. Cape Southampton forms its S. extremity. It is conjectured to be a collection of islands, but its interior is unexplored.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA, a British colony, the territory of which comprises all that part of Australia extend. from lat. 26° S. to the S. coast of the continent, betw. lon. 132° & 141° E., having S.E. the colony of Victoria (Australia Felix), & E. the region watered by the Murray & its tributaries. Area roughly estimated at 300,000 sq. m. Pop. 1850, 64,000, of European descent, & rapidly increasing; aboriginal pop. 3,680. Coast line more indented than in any other part of Australia; Spencer's & St. Vincent's gulfs, with Yorke peninsula, & Kangaroo island, being within the limits of this territory. Surface mostly undulating or level; the hill ranges stretch generally from N. to S. Mount Bryant, the most elevated summit E. of St. Vincent's gulf, rises to 3,012 feet in height; the table land in Eyre peninsula, W. of Spencer's gulf, averages 1,300 feet in elevation. The Murray, which has the lower part of its course in this colony, is the only navigable river. Small streams are, however, numerous, and the country is, on the whole, pretty well watered. Princip. lakes, Torrens, Alexandrina, & Albert. Ponds and creeks are numerous, & a chain of lagoons borders the coast along Encounter bay in the S.E. Climate healthy, & much warmer than that of England; frosts are rare in the plains in winter; showers are frequent with S.W. winds in that season between May & Oct. Most part of the settled land is on the E. side of St. Vincent gulf, where about one-third of the surface is estimated to be adapted for agriculture or grazing, one-third covered with scrub or forest, & the remaining one-third barren. The best tracts are in the level plain extending N. from Adelaide; along the banks of the Murray; & bordering the S.E. coast as far as the river Glenelg. The hills are interspersed with many fertile valleys, & some good land exists in Eyre peninsula. Tracts of 80 or 164 acres are sold by the govt. at 1*l.* per acre & upwards; & in 1850, 50,000 acres were reported to be under cultivation, chiefly for wheat, oats, & barley; besides which grains, maize, potatoes, and some rye, are raised, the latter chiefly by German colonists, who inhabit many villages in & adjacent to the plain of Adelaide. The vine, olive, & mulberry, oranges, lemons, peaches, pomegranates, and many other fine fruits, come to perfection, as also tobacco, hops, & indigo. Sarsaparilla, sassafras, & other drugs, are indigenous. Timber is plentiful. Sheep & cattle rearing are less extensively conducted than in New S. Wales, & elsewhere in E. Australia; yet in 1850, the stock of sheep was estimated at a million & a half, & that of horned cattle at 75,000. The increase is already so disproportionate to the number of shepherds, that the system of boiling down sheep for their tallow has commenced in this colony. Mining is highly important. Since 1843, some of the richest known veins of copper & lead have been discovered in S. Australia; the latter chiefly contiguous to Adelaide, the former in the hill chains, & in other localities. The Burra-burra copper mine yields an ore containing 75 per cent. of metal, & in 1850, there were mined 18,962 tons of ore. The Kapunda (copper), and Glen Osmond (lead) mines, are also very productive. Gold has been discovered & mined in prodigious quantities during the last 3 years. A small quantity of cobalt, manganese, zinc, quicksilver, & antimony, have been discovered, & emery was exported in 1847; but no mines of these metals had been opened then. Iron of excellent quality is plentiful, but the absence of coal obliges most part of the ores to be sent elsewhere for reduction. Some foundries, & manufs. of barilla, soap, tobacco, leather, and earthenware, are established in Adelaide, which is the cap. & centre of the foreign trade. Value of imports in 1852, chiefly from Great Britain, $5,000,000; of exports same year, $6,120,000, products of the colony standing for over $2,000,000. Much of the trade of W. Australia is conducted in shipping belonging to S. Australian colonists. The colony is subdivided into the cos. Hindmarsh, Adelaide, Gawler, Light, Stanley, Eyre, Sturt, Russell, & Grey, on the E. side of St. Vincent gulf, & Flinders, including Port Lincoln, on the W. side of Spencer gulf. Legislature composed of the Lt.-Governor, & a legislative council of 24 members, viz., 4 official, 4 non-official, nominees of the crown & 16 representatives, elected by the people, the council being renewed every 5 years. (Salary of Lt.-Gov. £1,500.) S. Australia, erected into a colony in 1834, is now the see of a bishop of the church of England. Public rev. 1852, $420,000; expenses same year, $365,000. Besides Adelaide, the cap., its chief settlements are Port Adelaide, Albert town, Gawler town, & Port Gawler.

Federal representative population, 514,513.

Physical Features, &c.—The sea coast is bordered with a series of islands, between which & the shore there is a very convenient navigation. The main land is naturally divided into the Lower & Upper country. The low country extends from 80 to 100 m. from the sea coast, & is covered with extensive forests of pine, called pine barrens, interspersed with marshes and swamps of a rich soil. The banks of the large rivers & the creeks of this region are bordered with a belt of excellent land, producing cotton & Indian corn in abundance. The marshes & swamps in this district make fine rice plantations. After leaving the low country in proceeding into the interior, a region of little sand hills first occurs, which have been compared to the arrested waves of the sea in a storm. This curious country, sometimes denominated the Middle country, continues for 50 or 60 miles to the Ridge, or Upper country, the ascent to which, proceeding from the Atlantic, is sudden & somewhat precipitous. The lower falls of the rivers are found along this ridge. The low grounds between the sand hills are suitable for agriculture & pasturage, but with these exceptions the country below the ridge is barren, & scarcely worth cultivation. Beyond the ridge commences a beautiful & healthy country of hills & dales, with fine flowing streams of pure water. This whole region may be regarded as an elevated table land, & is generally fertile. In the distance of 220 miles N.W. from Charleston the land is 800 feet above the level of the sea. From this the country rises gradually to a mountainous region to the west, where the great Alleghany range passes through the state in several ridges, some of which have high peaks. Table Mountain, one of the most conspicuous of these, is 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. The staple productions of the state are cotton & rice, great quantities of which are exported. Rice is extensively cultivated where the land can be irrigated by the tide or the overflowing of the rivs. The sea-island cotton produced on the islands along the shores is of a superior quality, & is in great demand. Gold, iron, granite, & marble, are the principal minerals.

There were in this state in 1850, 4,072,651 acres of land improved, & 12,145,049 of unimproved land in farms. Cash value of farms, $82,431,684; & the value of implements & machinery was $4,136,354. Live stock,—horses, 97,171; asses & mules, 37,483; milch cows, 193,244; working oxen, 20,507; other cattle, 563,935; sheep, 285,551; swine, 1,065,503; value of live stock, $15,060,015.

The constitution was formed in 1775, & reconstructed in 1790. The governor is elected for two years by a joint vote of both houses of the Assembly. After having served one term, he is ineligible for the next four years. A lieutenant-governor is chosen in the same manner, & for the same period. The Senate consists of 45 members, elected by districts for four years, one-half biennially. The House of Representatives consists of 124 members, apportioned among the several districts according to the number of white inhabitants and taxation, & are elected for two years. The representatives & one half the senators are chosen every second year in October. The legislature meets annually in Columbia on the fourth Monday in November. The chancellor & judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by the joint ballot of both houses of the Assembly, & hold their offices during good behavior. Every free white male citizen 21 years of age, who has resided in the state two years immediately preceding the election, & who is possessed of a freehold of 50 acres of land, or a town lot, six months before the election, or, not possessing this freehold, who shall have resided in the election district in which he offers his vote six months before the election, & have paid a tax of three shillings sterling to the support of the government, has the right of suffrage.

The first settlement of this state was made at Port Royal in 1670. The first constitution of the state was adopted in 1775; the second and present 1790; but many amendments to it have since been made. The constitution of the United States was adopted in convention May 23d, 1788—yeas 149, nays 73.

The surface of the peninsula is more diversified than that of any other country of equal extent in Europe; its interior forms a vast elev. table-land, which in the plateau of Castile has a mean elev. of 2,500 feet. This plateau occupies almost one-half the superficies, & is nearly surrounded by mountains. Spain is traversed in a direction from E. to W. by five principal chains of mountains, call in Spanish Sierras. These are (from N. to S.)—I. the Pyrenees extending from Cape Creux, on the E. to the Bay of Biscay on the W., culminating point Pic Nethou, 11,168 feet; and their W. continuation the Asturian & Cantabrian mountains, some of which rise to 10,000 feet.—II. the chain which separates the basins of the Douro & Tagus, the Sierras Guadarama, Gredos, and Gata. Highest point in the Sa. Gredos 10,500 feet.—III. the mountains of Toledo, Sa. Guadalupe, & Sa. San Mamies, between the Tagus & Guadiana.—IV. the Sa. Morena, separating the basins of the Guadiana and Guadalquivir, and connected W.ward with the Serra Monchique in Portugal.—V. Sierra Nevada, extending from Cartegna to Caliz, and containing the Cerro Mulhacen, the highest point of the peninsula, 11,678 feet, & the Pic de Veleta 11,387 feet. Spain is rich in minerals, especially mercury, iron, copper, and lead. The celebrated gold & silver mines of the time of the Romans have long been abandoned, but mercury is extracted in great abundance from the mines of Almaden. Lead forms an important branch of mining industry. Coal is found chiefly in the Asturias, copper, tin, zinc, antimony, arsenic, & cobalt, are common, & rock salt is abundant in the hills of Cardona. The principal rivers of Spain are, from N. to S., the Ter, Llobregat Ebro, Guadalaviar, Jucar, & Segura, flowing E. to the Mediterranean. The Minho, Douro, Tagus, Guadiana, and Guadalquivir, flowing mostly through Portugal W. & S. to the Atlantic. The N. slope has only the Nalon, the Bidassao, & some mntn. streams. The chief tributaries are the Esla & the Pisuerga, which join the Douro; the Manzanres which passes Madrid, & joins the Jaramas, an affl. of the Tagus. The Aragon, Gallego, & Segre, affls. of the Ebro. & the Genil, affl. of the Guadalquivir. Few of these are navigable, & those only for small boats near their mouths. The only lakes, or lagoons, of Spain are the Albufera in Valencia, & the Mar Menor, in Murcia. The coasts of Spain, which have an extent of 1,800 m., are in general little indented, except in the N.W. The chief capes are Finistère on the N.W., & Trafalgar on the S.W., in the Atlantic; Gibraltar, Gata, Palos, and Creux, in the Mediterranean; Peñas & Ortegal, in the Bay of Biscay. The climate of Spain varies exceedingly with elevation and position; it is warm on the coasts; the table-lands are exposed to great heat in summer, & extreme cold in winter. Many of the mntns. rise above the snow line, the limit of which, in the Pyrenees, is 8,952 feet; in the Sierra Nevada, 11,190 feet. Mean annual temperature at Madrid 58° .2 Fahr. The annual fall of rain on the Sierra Nevada, & on the N. & W. coasts, is 25 to 35 inches, while on the table-land of Castile it is only 10 inches, & the capital is often exposed to severe drought. Winter is the rainy season. The most noxious winds are the solano (the sirocco of Italy), a hot wind from the S., & the gallego, a cold wind from the mntns. of Galicia. Frost is often severe during the night in winter. Earthquakes are sometimes felt in the S. The soil is generally fertile, except in the elevated & arid districts of the central provs.; the chief crops are wheat, maize, barley, rice, hemp, & flax. The amount of corn is often insufficient for home consumption. The wines of Spain are much esteemed; the principal growths are those of Xeres (sherry), Rota, Malaga, Alicante, Malvasia, & Val de Penas; the other products are soda (from marine plants), honey, wax, & silk, the latter very abundant in the S.E. provs. In the S. provs. the sugar cane & cotton have been acclimatized, & there the orange & citron grow in great abundance. The best building timber grows in the N. coast; the cork tree, the kermes oak, and the sumach tree, yield valuable products. The horses of Andalusia are celebrated; the mules & asses are remarkable for beauty & size. Cattle are of good breeds. The race of sheep, called the merino, yields a great quantity of excellent wool; their exportation has always been prohibited, their pasturage is regulated by ancient laws, & their number is reckoned at 5 or 6 millions. Goats are very abundant in the table-lands; the chamois is found in the Pyrenees; and the bear, wolf, wild cat, marten, & lynx, in the different mountains. Fish are not in the rs., but plentiful on the Atlantic ocean. The mineral industry of Spain, formerly flourishing, has greatly declined; the gov. has still manufs. of saltpetre, gunpowder, cannon, & fire arms, tobacco, porcelain, glass, but they are mostly in decay; and the celebrated manuf. of swords at Toledo is nearly extinguished. The other manufs. are of silks, cottons, woollens, & leather. Cutlery, iron, & copper goods, are made chiefly in Biscay. The public roads in Spain, except those around the capital, are amongst the worst in Europe; wheel carriages are little used, & much of the transport is effected by means of mules. There are several canals, many of them on a magnificent scale, but mostly unfinished & unfit for navigation; the chief of these are the Imperial canal, commenced by Charles V., extending along the rt. b. of the Ebro; the canals of Castile, Manzanares, Murcia, Albacete, & Guadarama. From the extent of its coast line, its numerous ports, its geographical position, & natural products, Spain possesses greater commercial advantages than any other country of Europe, but smuggling is so extensively carried on as to render it impossible to estimate the amount of its foreign commerce; the principal exports are wool, wine, brandy, oil, fruits, iron, lead, mercury, and salt, with a small amount of silk & manufactured goods. Imports colonial goods, dried fish, & salted provisions, butter, cheese, rice, cotton & woollen goods, cutlery, glass, & building timber.

The present inhabitants of Spain are descendants of the ancient Iberians, or of other races who colonized it at different periods. Four primitive families are discernible—I. the Spaniards, descendants of the original races, & of Greeks, Romans, Vandals, Goths, & Alans, comprising 19-20ths of the pop.—II. the Basques 1-24th. —III. the Moors, descendants of the conquerors who ruled for 7 centuries in the S. of the peninsula, 1-200th. —IV. the Gitanos, or gypsies, 1-250th. The Jewish race has disappeared from Spain since the expulsion of the Jews in 1492.

The government, since 1833, is a constitutional representative monarchy; the religion exclusively Roman Catholic. Education is very little diffused; the lower orders are nearly destitute of any means of instruction, except in the principal cities, where infant schools have recently been established; before the suppression of the monastic orders, education was entirely in the hands of the Jesuits & other clergy. The children of the upper classes are educated in France & other countries. The universities, formerly 24 in number, are now reduced to 14, & these attended only by a few students of law & medicine. Army 132,998 men; marine 1853, 4 ships of the line, 5 frigates, 6 corvettes, 11 brigs, 14 goelettes, 29 steam vessels, & 102 gun boats. Public revenue 1853, 1,233,497,550 reals. Debt 1851, 13,904,358,565 reals. The peninsula, now forming the kingdoms of Spain & Portugal, was first visited by the Phœnicians, & afterwards by the Carthaginians, who formed several establishments. It was conquered by the Romans after a resistance of two centuries; they divided it into three great provinces, viz. Tarraconensis in the E. centre & N., Bætica in the S., & Lusitania in the W. The Visigoths overran the country in the fifth century, & were driven from most of it by the Arabs in 711. The kingdom of Portugal was founded in 1095. During 8 centuries the Christian princes were engaged in continual warfare with the Mohammedans. From this state the country was delivered, under Ferdinand & Isabella, by the conquest of Granada in 1492. This was followed by the pillage & expulsion of the Jews, who had possessed themselves of most of the commercial riches of the country. In the same year Columbus discovered the new world, & Spain became mistress of the greater part of America as then known. Of these vast colonial possessions, Spain has now only the isls. of Cuba, Puerto Rico, & some smaller isls. in America, the Philippine & Marianne islands in the Pacific, the Canary islands in the Atlantic, Fernando Po, & the island of Annabon in the Gulf of Guinea, & Ceuta, Gomer & Melilla, places used for the transportation of convicts, in Barbary. From the 16th century, Spain was divided into large provs. having mostly the title of kingdom, but by a royal decree of April, 1833, it was partitioned into 48 smaller provs., each bearing the name of its cap., except Navarra & the 3 Basque provs. which remain unchanged, & possess peculiar privileges.

The colonial possessions of Spain in America were formerly of great magnitude, extending from the S. frontier of the U. S. to Cape Horn, every vestige of which on the continent has been wrested from her; but she still holds Cuba, Porto Rico, & one of the Virgin isles. In the E. Indies the Phillipine Islands form a dependency of Spain, & were they in the possession of an enterprising people, would, no doubt, speedily become of very great commercial importance; these, with a part of Manilla, & a few other small islands, & some colonies in Africa, are all that is left of the once vast colonial possessions of Spain.

STIRLING (formerly Stryvelyne or Estrivelin), a royal parl. & munic. bor., river-port, town, & pa. of Scotland, cap. co., on the W. or right b. of the Forth, where it first becomes fordable, here crossed by two bridges, 31 m. W.N.W. Edinburgh, & 26 miles S.W. Perth. Area of pa., partly, in co. Clackmannan, 200 ac. Pop. 1851, 10,180; do. of parl. bor. 12,837; do. of town 9,361. In the beauty of its site it rivals the Scottish metropolis. It stands on the S.E. declivity of an abrupt basaltic hill, up which a spacious main street leads to the ancient castle, whence a view is obtained of the windings of the Forth, unequalled for beauty in Britain. Its streets generally present the appearance of modernized antiquity, being insterspersed with many residences of the old Scottish nobles, & the society of the town is highly respectable. The castle, of the origin of which nothing is known, was a favorite residence of James V., & contains the palace & the parliament house built by him, but now used as barracks. The old Gothic church in which James VI. was crowned, the West church, & numerous other places of worship; the remains of several ancient ecclesiastical edifices, & of an unfinished palace, begun in 1570, by the Regent Earl of Mar; Cowan's & other hospitals, the town-hall, athenæum, with a spire 120 ft. in height, corn-exchange, jail, office of the Bank of Scotland; the old walls & bridges are amongst the most conspicuous structures. Stirling has a grammar and other endowed schools, several large endowments for the poor, public libraries & reading-rooms, a mechanics' institute, & several branch banks. Vessels of 70 tons only can reach its quays; but it has an extensive coasting & export trade in wool sent to England, & in the products of its manufs., which comprise tartans, shawls, some cotton stuffs, ropes, malt, leather, & soap. The dyeing of yarns, woollen cloths, silks, & other fabrics, is extensive. Imports consist chiefly of timber, coals, bricks, tiles, lime, & large quantities of corn. It communicates by railroad with Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Perth. Steamers ply daily to and from Granton-pier, near Edinburgh, & passage boats to Glasgow. Mkt.,

Friday. The borough unites with Dunfermline, Culross, Inverkeithing, and S. Queensferry, in sending 1 member to H. of C. Near Stirling are the remains of Cambuskenneth Abbey; & close to the town, in 1297, was fought the famous battle of Bannockburn.

STIRLINGSHIRE, an inland co. of Scotland, extending almost across the isthmus between the firths of Clyde & Forth, having N. the co. Perth, W. Loch Lomond, S. the cos. Dumbarton & Lanark, and E. Pop. 1851, 86,287. Surface partly mountainous, especially towards the W. & N.W., including Benlomond; elsewhere are some rich alluvial vales, especially the carse lands, extending 48 m. along the river Forth. Moors & bogs prevail in some parts. Chief rivers, the Forth, Carron, Endrick, Bannockburn, & Avon. Mountain sheep farms large; elsewhere they vary from 20 to 300 ac. Principal crops, wheat, beans, barley, potatoes, & clover, in the lowlands; oats & turnips in the highlands. Many highland cattle are purchased here & fed for the Falkirk cattle fairs, the largest in Scotland. Coal, ironstone, & freestone, are raised; & in this co. are the Carron iron-works. Manufs. of carpets, tartans, and shalloons, at Stirling, Bannockburn, & St. Ninian's; blankets & serges at Alva, chemical products, & paper; & here are some large cotton mills, foundries, dyeworks, & distilleries. Railroads to Perth, Glasgow, & Edinburgh, intersect the E. part of the co. Chief towns, Stirling, Falkirk, & Kilsyth. The co. is divided into 25 pas., & sends, including bors., 2 members to H. of C.

STOCKTON, city, capital San Joaquin county, Cal., situated at the head of a slough, which extends some 3 miles from the San Joaquin into the plain. The average width of this slough is about 80 feet, & the depth never less than 10 feet. As a harbor, it has many advantages, as into the slough, near its head, empty three other sloughs—the Mormon, Fremont, & Lindsey's Channels—in all of which, during all seasons of the year, there is a great depth & breadth of water. One hundred steamers can lie within the heart of the city in perfect safety. Stockton is distant from San Francisco 133 miles, & during all seasons of the year the San Joaquin never has less than 7 feet of water in any part of its course. Steamers, 150 feet in length, can ply without meeting with an obstacle to impede their progress, and sailing vessels of from 10 to 500 tons burthen. Tide water extends to Stockton. The geographical position of the city is central; & it must, at all times, be the port or depôt for the entire San Joaquin district. Above Stockton the river San Joaquin takes a southerly direction, with a slight inclination to the west. The consequence of this is, that Stockton being the most easterly port, there is no other geographical point which can be set up as a successful rival; & owing to the marshy nature of the banks of the San Joaquin, along its entire length, there is no site as favorable higher up the river. The population of Stockton is about 6,000. It contains a court-house, a state hospital & 2 private ones, an academy, 5 churches, —1 Episcopal, 2 Methodist, 1 Presbyterian, & 1 Roman Catholic,—& numerous stores & commission houses. In the co. of San Joaquin there are some 300 farms, or ranches, as they are called, in active cultivation, and there is no reason to doubt that in a few years all the ground from the Slough to the spurs of the Sierra Nevada will be occupied. The soil is extraordinarily productive, being composed of the vegetable deposits of centuries. On the edge of the tule land, where there is at all times an abundance of moisture, four crops of vegetables have been raised in one season, all of which have obtained enormous proportions. The Stockton Slough & the San Joaquin river contain an abundance of every description of fish. There are salmon, trout, sturgeon, & an infinite variety of other kinds. The salmon & the trout are delicious. Of game, hares, rabbits, wild fowl of every description, quail, antelope, deer, elk, &c., abound. The elk & antelope may be seen in droves of hundreds. There are herds of wild cattle & horses within a half day's ride of the city, where the best of sport may be enjoyed. The country around is well wooded with the evergreen oak. The climate of Stockton is of remarkable purity. During the summer months the breezes from the Pacific blow, & preserve a medium temperature. The summer nights are beautiful beyond description; the bright stars & queen of night shine on the quiet earth with rays that fall through an atmosphere clear as the ether. The winter period averages about eight weeks of heavy rain; but in the spring time comes the tall grass & the myriads of flowers. Before the year 1833, there is every reason to believe none but Mexicans and Indians had penetrated for the purpose of making a settlement, so far up the river San Joaquin as the mouth of the Stockton Slough. But comparatively little was known of the interior of Upper California up to the time of its occupation by the Americans. The valleys of the San Joaquin & Sacramento were evidently considered as savage & inhospitable wilds. The wild cattle, horses, elk, & antelope, ranged in herds of thousands in undisturbed tranquillity, over the vast prairie between the San Joaquin river & the Sierra Nevada, & the flocks of wild fowl in the winter time were strangers to the crack of the rifle. The original inhabitants of this particular locality were an Indian tribe, known by the name of the Yachicumnes. In the neighborhood of the city numerous traces are still to be seen of their camps, which are objects of much interest. Soon after the white faces appeared on the river, their numbers were thinned, & the remnant of the tribe removed to the wild country on the coast range. Ten families only are left of the Yachicumnes. The men are of medium stature. They are now settled on Amador's Ranche, in the neighborhood of the coast range. Their canoes are constructed entirely of the tule reed, strongly lashed with willow strips, & are very buoyant. It may not be generally known that the California Indians never constructed canoes out of the trunks of trees. Their implements for spearing fish are made of bone, & have a very primitive appearance.

The main rancheria of the Moquelumne Indians was at Simpson's Ranch, on the Calaveras. This tribe ranged from the mountains to within two miles distant from this city. The Savammana Indians had, & still have, their rancheria at Davis & Atherton's Crossing. All these, & the Palo & other mountain Indians, visited this place for the purpose of fishing & bartering away the spoils of the chase. These tribes were both numerous & formidable; but the padres of San Jose and Mission Dolores, were every now & then accustomed to throw a military body among them, & carry as many as they could take prisoners to the coast for the good of their souls. The inter-communication thus established soon led to an acquaintance on the part of those resident on the sea coast with the resources of the interior; & as early as 1834, a party of Canadian Frenchmen, in the employ of the Hudson Bay Company, in the hunting season explored the country as far as Stockton. They found an abundance of beavers on the Stockton & French Camp Sloughs, & returned laden with the results of a very successful trip. But owing to the refusal of the then existing government to recognize their business, those hunters made no permanent settlement until the year 1844, when a permanent settlement was first formed by the Hudson Bay Company, at the head of French Camp Slough (El Rancho del Campo de los Franceses). They located their camp at this place in consequence of the superior elevation of the ground, although their principal hunting ground was in the neighborhood of this city, & this was the entrepôt of their canoes. At that time there were from three to four hundred hunters in this neighborhood. On January 13, 1844, C. M. Weber, Esq., & Mr. Gulnac obtained their grant from Manuel Mitcheltoreno; & in August of the same year it was made a pueblo, & in the early part of 1845, there were some seven residences here. Unfortunately at this time the small-pox broke out with great violence among the Indians & settlers, & most of the latter went to San Jose to escape its ravages, or to obtain medical assistance. In their absence the Indians rose upon the remaining settlers, murdered Mr. Lindsey, on the ground now called Lindsey's point, & every building was burned to the ground. The cattle & horses were carried off. In the year 1846, Mr. Weber started a fresh settlement, with increased force & means, & brought a company of emigrants hither; but as soon as they commenced building, the war broke out, & they were compelled to retire to San Jose for protection, abandoning for the present their improvements & prospects. In 1848, after the conclusion of the war, another and successful attempt was made to build up the pueblo. The place was fast being again settled, when, in the month of March, 1848, the news of the discovery of gold at Coloma reached it. Captain Weber immediately proceeded with an exploring party to the Stanislaus, & northward, finding gold on every river & creek, until he reached Sutter's Mill. Two fires have devastated the city, one in the winter of 1849, which swept away all the principal buildings, & one in the month of May, 1851, when property to the amount of $2,000,000 was destroyed. The winter floods, however, which have had so ruinous effect on other towns, do no injury here; in this respect Stockton is the Ararat of the plains.

SUMATRA, the most W. of the Sunda isls., Asiatic Archipelago, and next to Borneo, the largest in the E. seas, between lat. 5° 40′ N. & 6° S., and lon. 95° 20′ & 106° E., separated N.E. from the Malay peninsula by the Strait of Malacca, having E. the Java sea, and the strait of Sunda separating it from the island Java, on other sides the Indian Ocean. Length N.W. to S. E. 1,100 m.; breadth 60 to 240 m. Area has been estimated at from 128,000 to 130,000 sq. m.; pop. 1,437,-360, mostly Malays, but partly of the Papuan negro race, with Moors in the N.W., and Dutch and other foreigners. Several mountain chains run through its interior, nearer its S.W. than N.E. coast, & rise near the equator to 14,000 or 15,000 feet in height. The E. half of the isl. is mostly level or undulating, and along the coasts there are many sandy and marshy plains traversed by the Siak, Judragèri, Jambi, Palembang, and other rivers of large size, but which have been little explored by Europeans. Climate in the plains is less oppressive than might have been expected; at midday the thermometer usually ranges between 82° and 85°, sometimes rising to 88°; but at sunrise not more than 70° Fahr. Dense fogs, thunder storms, & water spouts off the coast are frequent. Much of the isl. is occupied by dense forests. Products consist of rice, sago, millet, cocoa nuts, betel, sugar-cane, an abundance of tropical fruits, turmeric, ginger, coffee, rattans, scented wood, teak and other timber, & the European colonists successfully cultivate the vine; but the principal articles of export are pepper to about 3 million lbs. yearly, gold dust, copper ore, sulphur, camphor, in the N.; nutmegs, cloves, and mace, in the Dutch territory of Bencoolen; and coral, benzoin, gutta percha, tin in Palembang and Menankabow; many of which articles are brought by natives from the interior, & bartered at the ports for Indian & European manufactured goods; tools, iron, coal of inferior quality, & naphtha, are amongst the mineral products. Buffaloes are the most important live stock; the breed of horses is small but hardy, hogs and goats are both domestic & wild; the elephant, rhinoceros, tiger, bear, deer, &c., roam in the forests, & the hippopotamus & crocodile are met with in the rivers. The inhabitants build their houses on posts, & adopt other usages of ultra-Gangetic nations; they manuf. gold and silver filagree work with great skill, also silk & cotton fabrics, earthenwares, arms, and domestic goods generally; from Palembang lacquered basins, cane boxes, and rattan mats of the best quality are exported to Singapore, and it is said that cannon were formerly cast at Acheen in the N.W., which territory is, however, peopled by a race of Moorish descent. Imports, besides manuf. goods already mentioned, are opium and salt from India, coarse porcelain, iron wares, gold thread from China, striped cottons, spices, krises & other weapons from Java, Celebes, and other isls. of the archipelago. The isl. is divided amongst a number of native states, the chief being Acheen, Menankabow in the central mountain region, Batak, Siak, Jambi, Palembang, Lampong, along the E. from N. to S., mostly under the supremacy of the Dutch, who possess the settlements Bencoolen & Padang, on the W. coast.

SUNDERLAND, p-t., Franklin co., Mass., 9 S. by E. Greenfield, 80 W. Boston, 392 W. Connecticut r. bounds it on the W., on which are fine alluvial meadows, but in other parts the surface is mountainous. The central v. is built chiefly on 1 street, three-fourths of a mile long, parallel with the r., & contains a Congregational church & 250 inhabitants. A bridge here crosses Connecticut r., 858 feet long, built in 1832, at an expense of $20,000. There are in the t. a saw m., a broom fac., 8 schools. Pop. 1840, 719; 1850, 792.

SUNDERLAND, a parl. and munic. bor., seaport town, & pa. of England, at the mouth of the Wear, in the N. sea, co. & 13 m. N.E. Durham, with which city and with Shields, Gateshead, Hartlepool, and other places in the county, it is connected by a network of railroads. Lat. of light on N. of two piers which enclose its harbor, 54° 54′ 5″ N., lon. 1° 22′ W. Area of pa. 178 ac. Pop. 1851, 19,058. Area of bor., which comprises also Bishop-Wearmouth on the S., Monk-Wearmouth & Southwick on the N. bank of the river, 5,095 ac. Pop. 67,394. The town proper of Sunderland occupies a peninsula between the expansion of the Wear & the sea. It has one good & broad street, & a fine new market-place; but elsewhere consists mostly of narrow lanes. Bishop-Wearmouth, on its W. side, is a handsome & increasing quarter; it communicates with Monk-Wearmouth shore by a noble cast-iron bridge of one arch 236 feet in span, and 100 feet above the Wear at low water. Principal edifices, two fine pa. churches, the exchange, athenæum, founded in 1840, theatre, assembly rooms, barracks, custom-house, excise office, infirmary, and various almshouses. It has 63 churches,—6 Baptist, 9 Episcopal, 1 Friends, 4 Independent, 2 Jews' synagogues, 30 Methodist, 5 Presbyterian, 1 Roman Catholic, 1 Unitarian, & 3 isolated congregations,—a mechanics' institution, horticultural & polytechnic societies, & several masonic lodges. The bor. is well paved, lighted, and supplied with water. The harbor is defended by batteries, and connected with it is a large wet dock. This is one of the principal ports of England for the shipment of coal; it has besides a large export of lime to Yorkshire and Scotland, & of glass, earthenwares, rope, chemical products made in the town & vicinity, in & around which are also flax & saw mills, & grindstone quarries. At the adjacent vill. of Deptford is a steam-rope factory. Mercantile ship-building is more extensive than at any other English port. Principal imports, flour, wine, tobacco, spirits, timber, tallow, iron, and flax. The town is frequented as a bathing place. Sunderland sends 2 members to H. of C. It gives the title of Earl to the Duke of Marlborough.

SUPERIOR (LAKE), the largest sheet of fresh water on the face of the globe, & the most remarkable of the great American lakes, not only from its magnitude, but also from the picturesque scenery of its borders, & the interest & value attaching to its geological features. As a mining region it is one of the most important in this country, & is rich in veins of metallic copper & silver, as well as in the ores of those metals. At the present moment it may be regarded as the most valuable mining district in North America, with the exception only of the gold deposits of California.

This great lake is comprised between the 46th & 49th degrees of north latitude, & the 84th & 92d degrees of longitude, west of Greenwich. Its greatest length is 400 miles: its width in the middle is 160 miles, & its mean depth has been estimated at 900 feet. Its surface is about 600 feet above the level of the Atlantic Ocean, & its bottom is 300 feet below the level of the sea. The ancient French Jesuit fathers, who first explored and described this great lake, & published an account of it in Paris in 1636, describe the form of its shores as similar to that of a bended bow, the northern shore being the arc, & the southern the cord, while Keweenaw Point, projecting from the southern shore to the middle of the lake, is the arrow. This graphic description is illustrated by a map, prepared by them, which displays the geographical position of its shores with as much fidelity as most of the maps of our day, & proves that those early explorers were perfectly familiar with its shores. The coast of Lake Superior is formed of rocks of various kinds & of different geological groups. The whole coast of the lake is rock-bound; & in some places mountain masses of considerable elevation rear themselves from the immediate shore, while mural precipices & beetling crags oppose themselves to the surges of this mighty lake, & threaten the unfortunate mariner, who may be caught in a storm upon a lee-shore, with almost inevitable destruction. Small coves, or boat-harbors, are abundantly afforded by the myriads of indentations upon the rocky coast; & there are a few good snug harbors for vessels of moderate capacity, such as steamboats, schooners, & the like. Isle Royale, though rarely visited by the passing vessels, affords the best harbors. Keweenaw Point has two bays in which vessels find shelter, viz.: Copper harbor and Eagle harbor. Adequate protection may be found from the surf under the lee of the Apostle islands, at La Pointe; & there is tolerable anchorage at the Sault de Ste. Marie, the port of embarkation upon St. Marys river, at the outlet of the lake. There are but few isls. in Lake Superior; & in this respect it differs most remarkably from Lake Huron, which is thickly dotted with isles & islets, especially on its northern shore. Owing to the lofty crags which surround Lake Superior, the winds sweeping over the lake impinge upon its surface so abruptly as to raise a peculiarly deep and combing sea, which is extremely dangerous to boats & small craft. It is not safe, on this account, to venture far out into the lake in batteaux; & hence voyageurs generally hug the shore, in order to be able to take land in case of sudden storms. During the months of June, July, & August, the navigation of the lake is ordinarily safe; but after the middle of September great caution is required in navigating its waters, and boatmen of experience never venture far from land, or attempt long traverses across bays. Their boats are always drawn far up on the land at every camping-place for the night, lest they should be staved to pieces by the surf, which is liable at any moment to rise & beat with great fury upon the beaches. The northern or Canadian shore of the lake is most precipitous, & consequently most dangerous to the navigator. On the south shore, again, the sandstone cliffs which rise in mural or overhanging precipices, directly from the water's edge for many miles, afford no landing-places. This is the case especially along the cliffs at the Pictured Rocks, & on the coast of Keweenaw bay, called L'Anse by the French voyageurs. On the coast of Isle Royale there are beautiful boat harbors scattered along its whole extent on both sides of the island; & at its easterly extremity the long spits of rocks, which project like fingers far into the lake, afford abundant shelter for boats or small vessels, while, at the western end of the island, there is a large & well-sheltered bay called Washington harbor. Near Siskawit bay the navigator must beware of the gently-shelving red sandstone strata which run for many miles out into the lake, with a few feet only of water covering them. Rock harbor, on the south side of the island, is a large and perfectly safe harbor for any vessels, & has good holding-ground for anchorage, with a very bold shore, while the numerous islands, which stand like so many castles at its entrance, protect it from the heavy surges of the lake. The whole aspect of this bay is not unlike that of the bay of Naples, though there is no modern volcano in the back-ground to complete the scene. None of the American lakes can compare with Lake Superior in healthiness of climate during the summer months, & there is no place so well calculated to restore the health of an invalid who has suffered from the depressing miasms of the fever-breeding soil of the south-western states. In winter the climate is severe, & at the Sault Ste. Marie, mercury not unfrequently freezes; but on Keweenaw Point, where the waters of the lake temper the chillness of the air, the cold is not excessive, & those who have resided there during the winter, say that the cold is not more difficult of endurance than in the New England States. Heavy snows fall in mid-winter on this promontory, owing to its almost insular situation; but the inhabitants are well skilled in the use of snow-shoes, so that snow is not regarded as an obstacle to the pedestrian, while, on the newly-made roads, the sleds & sleighs soon beat a track, on which gay winter parties ride & frolic during the long winter evenings of this high northern latitude. The mean annual temperature at Copper Harbor, on Keweenaw Point, is 42°; & the waters of this great lake preserve a constant temperature of about 39½° or 40° F., which is that of water at its maximum density. It is known that Lake Superior never freezes in the middle, nor anywhere except near its shores, from which the ice very rarely extends to more than ten or fifteen miles distance. Occasionally, in severe winters, the ice does extend from the Canada shore to Isle Royale, which is from fifteen to twenty miles distant; so that the caribou & moose cross over on it to the island, whither the Indian hunters sometimes follow them over the same treacherous bridge, liable, although it is, to be suddenly broken into fragments by the surges of the lake.

By the action of drifting ice, not only have boulders of rocks & of native copper been transported far from their native beds, & deposited upon the shore at distant places; but even animals, such as squirrels, rabbits, deer, moose, caribou, & bears, have thus navigated the waters of Lake Superior, & been landed on islands to which they could not otherwise have gained access. The mouth of every river on the lake shore reveals, by the debris brought down by ice in the spring freshets, the nature of the rocks & minerals which occur in its immediate banks or bed; & thus indicates to the explorer the proper places where to search for ores or metals. The early French explorers noticed the fact of the transportation of masses of native copper & rock by drift-ice, but they made no use of these facts to discover the native deposits of metals in the rocks which border on the rivers. The opening of a ship-canal between Lake Superior & the lower lakes is one of the most important enterprises of the day, & the summer tour of travellers will be extended to a cruise around Lake Superior, & from La Pointe many will cross over to the falls of St. Anthony, on the Mississippi river; & thus explorers will find it easy to gain access to remote regions, now seldom visited by white men. The importance of this enterprise can hardly be overestimated, & its consequence will be the vast facilitation & increase of the commerce of Lake Superior, & the incalculable enhancement of the value of the public lands, while a tide of immigration will people the north-western wilderness, subduing the forests, & extending far and wide the area of freedom and civilization.

The time will doubtless come when a canal or railroad will be made to the Falls of St. Anthony; & possibly we may see the trade of Hudson bay flowing into the United States, through Lake Superior & our other great lakes & rivers. For that great bay is but fifteen days' canoe voyage from Lake Superior, & the portages are few & not long, so that the Hudson Bay Fur Company carry on constant communication with their factories upon the bay from their posts upon Lake Superior; & their agents at the British posts on the N.W. coast travel from their stations on the borders of the Pacific Ocean, by way of Hudson bay & Lake Superior, on their route to Great Britain. This northern region has unfortunately been always, hitherto, undervalued. It is now known to be one of the most important mineral regions in America; & it should be borne in mind that there are deposits of native copper on Copper Mine & McKenzie's rivers, in the same kinds of rock that contain the stupendous lodes of this metal on Keweenaw Point & the Ontonagon rivers. Every means that tend to carry our population farther northward, will tend to bring to light & to practical utility the mineral treasures of those regions; while trade in furs & seal-skins will be brought nearer to us by enterprizing men, it matters not whether of the British provinces or of the United States of America.

The fisheries of Lake Superior are of great value to the people living upon the shores of the lake, & of some importance to the states bordering on the other & lower lakes, & the inland towns near their borders. To the poor Indian the bounties of the great lakes are of vital importance, for, without the fish, the native tribes would soon perish. Game has become exceedingly scarce in these thickly-wooded regions, only a few bears, rabbits, & porcupines, & some partridges, being found in the woods, & ducks in moderate numbers upon the waters. Agriculture has scarcely begun to tame the wilderness in the vicinity of the copper mines, & the only crops raised are potatoes & a few hardy northern esculents. Small cereal grains—such as oats, barley, & rye—will do well here as in Canada; & Indian corn of the northern varieties, in places not to much exposed to the chill breezes of the lake, thrives & ripens. English grasses have not yet been cultivated, but they will undoubtedly thrive as well on the south shore of Lake Superior, as in New Brunswick & Nova Scotia. The native grasses are abundant & good, but are limited to small natural prairies or to dried-up ponds. The forests also are filled with excellent timber for building purposes; and, where the growth is of mixed trees, such as sugar-maple, yellow birch, & pines, the white & yellow pines are of large dimensions, & furnish good lumber. SURREY, or SURRY (Saxon Suth-rice, "the south kingdom"), an inland co. of England, having N. the Thames, separating it from Middlesex & Bucks, S. Sussex, E. Kent, & W. Hants & Berks. Area, 748 sq. m., or 478,792 ac., of which more than four-fifths are under culture. Inhab. houses 1851, 108,882. Pop. 683,082. The N. Downs, of which the Hog's Back & Boxhill form portions, intersect the co. from W. to E., dividing it into two parts; the N. of these has a fertile & diversified slope to the Thames; the S. is again partially divided by a steep range of sandy hills (Hindhead, Hascomb, Leith Hill), having the vales of Godalming Albury, & Dorking on the N., & on the S. the Weald, a rich tract continuous with the Weald of Sussex and Kent. An expanse of wild heath-land covers all the W. of the co., & the S.W. hill-chain, where Leith Hill rises to nearly 1,000 feet above the sea, and commands a view over parts of 14 cos. In the vales & the North there is a good deal of fertile soil; the N.E. quarter is wholly occupied by suburbs of the metropolis. A large portion of the soil is under tillage, but agriculture, as in Sussex, is backward. Hops of the first quality are raised at Farnham, medicinal plants about Mitcham, and in the N. a great deal of land is in gardens for the supply of vegetables to the London markets. Woods are numerous & extensive; hogs & poultry are plentifully reared. Farms generally small, but let on lease. Except in Southwark, Lambeth, & elsewhere near London, manufactures are of little importance. The only river of consequence is the Wey, forming a part of the Wey & Arundel canal to Guildford. The Basingstoke canal is in the N.W., & the SE., S.W., Brighton, Croydon, and Richmond railroads from London; and the Reading & Reigate railroads traverse the co. Surrey is in the home circuit, & forms an archdeaconry of the diocese of Winchester. Lent assizes are held at Kingston, & summer assizes at Croydon & Guildford alternately. It returns 11 members to the H. of C., of whom 4 are for the co. Besides Guildford, the cap., it contains the parl. bor. Southwark, Lambeth, and Reigate, and the towns Kingston on Thames, Wandsworth, Croydon, Epsom, Ewell, Dorking, Godalming, & Chertsey. Under the heptarchy, it chiefly formed a part of the kingdom of Sussex.

SUSPENSION BRIDGE, p. o., Niagara co., N. Y.

SUSQUEHANNA, r., the largest river in Pa., & one of the largest in the U. S., is formed by 2 main branches, the Eastern & the Western. The Eastern branch rises in Otsego co., N. Y., & one of its sources in Otsego lake. It receives the Chenango, a considerable river from the N., at Binghamton, & proceeding W. & turning S., it crosses into Pa., soon after which it is joined by the Western branch, called the Tioga or Chemung river, 3 m. below the Pennsylvania line. It then flows S.E., & then S.W., until it receives the Western branch, its largest tributary, at Northumberland, after which its course is first S., 40 m., until it receives the Juniata from the W., & then S.E., until it enters into the Chesapeake bay, near, the N.E. corner of Maryland. It is navigable for sloops 5 miles from its mouth to Port Deposit, at the head of the tide. Above that, for nearly 50 miles, the river is obstructed by a continued succession of rapids, which render navigation in boats up the stream impossible; but in high water, a vast amount of lumber & produce comes down the river in rafts, arks, &c. In the upper parts of the river the obstructions to boat navigation are not great, & might be easily overcome. The importance of a river depends much upon its capacity for navigation. In this view, the Susquehanna has less importance than many others in the U. S., which drain a less extent of surface, & carry a less volume of water. It is a mile & a quarter wide at its entrance into Chesapeake bay. Canals are extensively constructed along its banks, for which it affords great facilities. Its whole length is about 450 miles.

SUSQUEHANNA, county, Pa. Situated in the N. E. part of the state. Area, 875 sq. miles. Surface is hilly and broken; soil fertile. SUSSEX (Suth-seaxe, "the South Saxons"), a marit. co. of S. Engl., bordering the English Channel from Selsey to Rye, having W. Hampshire, & N. Surrey & Kent. Area, 1,461 sq. m., or 934,551 ac. Inhabited houses 1851, 58,663. Pop. 336,844. The South Downs, a range of chalk-hills covered by fine turf, continuous with the Downs of Hants near Petersfield, traverse the co. E.ward to Beachy Head, where they terminate on the Channel in a lofty cliff. N. this chain, extending to the hills of Surrey, is a fertile & richly-timbered tract, termed the Weald, & which was anciently the forest of Anderida, it having been famous for its woods from time immemorial. Between the Downs & the sea is a good deal of fertile soil, as also in the marsh lands E. of Beachy Head. Principal rivers, the Arun, Rother, Ouse, & Adur, all small & flowing S. to the Channel. Climate mild, & harvests early; but agriculture is rather backward. Farms in the Weald are mostly small; on the Downs they often vary from 1,200 to 2,000 acres; wheat, oats, barley, & turnips are principal crops. In the E. many hops are raised. The black-faced South-down sheep, & the Sussex cattle, are breeds in high repute. Hogs, fowls, & rabbits, are sent in large numbers to market. Limestone, charcoal, salt, gunpowder manufactured at Battle, potash, bricks, & earthenwares, are other principal products; & in the small towns along the coast some ship-building is carried on; but the trade is chiefly in rural produce. The Guildford, Arundel, & Chichester canal, intersects the W. & S. of the co., which is also traversed in length & breadth by the London, Brighton, & S. coast railroad. Sussex is divided into 6 rapes, is in the home-circuit, & composes the diocese of Chichester; besides which city, its cap., it contains the parl. bors. Brighton, Lewes, New Shoreham, Hastings, Horsham, Arundel, & Rye, with the towns E. Grinstead, Winchelsea, Petworth, Cuckfield, Battle, Worthing, &c. Most of the towns on its coast are resorted to, as favorite watering-places in summer. Assizes are held in Lent at Horsham; in summer & winter at Lewes. With its bors. it sends 18 mems. to H. of C., 4 of whom are returned for the co. It composed, with a great part of Surrey, the second kingdom erected by the Saxons in England; its antiquities are not, however, numerous, & are mostly of the Roman period.

Caithness & Moray Firth, & S. the Firth of Dornoch, & cos. Ross & Cromarty. Area, 1,886 sq. m., or 1,207,188 ac. Inhabited houses, 4,943. Pop. 1851 25,-793. Surface, excepting along the E. shore, rugged & mountainous, & interspersed with morasses, & large deer forests. Principal rivers, the Oikel, Fleet, Broa, & Helmsdale, valuable for their salmon fishings. Principal lakes, lochs Shin, Hope, Laoghal, Assynt, More, & Naver. The arable soil along the E. coast has been well enclosed & drained, & nowhere in Scotland have more extensive agricultural improvements been carried on than in this county. Chief employments, sheep & cattle breeding, especially the former. The breeds of sheep are excellent, & about 220,000 are annually sent hence to the S. Ptarmigan, grouse, blackcock, Alpine-hares, &c., are abundant. Farms large, especially sheep farms, in the mountainous districts; of medium size in the E. Lime & freestone are obtained. Manufactures, except in a very restricted sense, are unknown. The trade of the county consists chiefly in the exchange of sheep, wool, cattle, & fish, for woven fabrics & other manufactured goods, & colonial produce. The herring fishery is successfully carried on, both on the E. and W. coasts, chiefly at Helmsdale. The co. is sub-divided into 14 pas. Principal town, Dornoch. It sends, including bors., 2 mems. to H. of C. It gives the title of Duke to the Gower family, who own 4-5ths of the county.

* Pop. of Stockholm 1851, 93,070.

The Scandinavian Alps traverse the country in the W., & separate it from Norway; many of their summits are constantly snow-clad. [Norway.] From this mountain region the country slopes E. to the Gulf of Bothnia, forming in its descent two elevated table lands, the 1st or W.most is 2,000 feet, & the E.most 360 to 800 feet above the sea. The tract of country bordering the Baltic is under 300 feet in elev. The greater part of the surface is flat, the S. portion constitutes the plain of Scania. A line is supposed to traverse the country in lat. 56° 3′ N., north of which to Cape North the land is gradually rising at the estimated rate of 4 feet in a century, while S. of it there is a slow & gradual subsidence. The country is watered by numerous streams, none of which are large; the principal are, from N. to S., the Tornea, Lulea, Pitea, Umea, Angermann, & the Dal-elf, which flow S.E. to the Gulf of Bothnia, & the Motala, which traverses Lake Wetter to the Baltic. Nearly one-eighth of the superfices is covered by lakes, some of which are very extensive. The largest are Wener, Wetter, & Maeler, all in the S. provs.; they afford great advantages for navigation; these lakes are connected by canals, the chief of which are those of Södertelge, Trolhätta, Hielmar, Strömsholm, and Gotha. There are extensive marshy tracts along the shores. The coast, which has a development of 1,400 miles, is deeply indented, forming vast bays & fiords, & studded with a multitude of low sandy islands, the chief of which are Gothland & Oeland in the Baltic. The climate of Sweden is mild for its northern position, the mean temperature of the year at Stockholm 52°.2 Fahrenheit. The W. coasts are more mild and moist than the E. coasts. The summers are very hot & the winters extremely cold. Spring is almost unknown. N. of lat. 61° mercury often freezes. In the N. the rivers are frozen, & snow covers the ground for 5 or 6 months in the year; in the central regions winter lasts for 3 or 4 months. The amount of rain is much less than in Norway. The prevailing winds are S.W. & W. The soil is not generally fertile, & the corn produced was formerly only about 2-3ds of that required; but from the great improvements in agriculture introduced by the government within the present century, & the general introduction of the potato, the produce is now adequate to the consumption. Barley is cultivated as far N. as lat. 69°, but the crops frequently fail. Rye, hemp, & potatoes are grown to lat. 66° N. Oats ripen to 63° 30′, wheat & hops cease to be cultivated with advantage beyond lat. 62° N. Fruit trees, except the cherry, are limited to the S. of lat. 60°. One-fourth of the surface is covered with forests, but the produce of timber is small, much is used for fuel, & made into charcoal for use in the mines. There are few woods to the N. of lat. 64° N. The principal trees are the pine, fir, & birch, which extend to the extreme N. of the country, the lime, elm, ash, willow, & alder between lat. 61° & 63° N., the oak to lat. 61°, & the beech to lat. 57°. Tar and pitch are extracted from the roots of the pine. Rearing of live stock is an important branch of industry, but the pastures are poor, horses & cattle small, & the sheep yield an inferior wool. N. of lat. 64°, the reindeer is the only domestic animal. Among wild animals are the bear, which however is scarce, the wolf, lynx, fox, marten, lemming, hare, & squirrel. Fish are abundant on the coast & in the lakes & rivers: the herring fishery has greatly declined, but lobsters are exported, and salmon is caught in all the principal rivers. The mining dists. of Sweden, mostly in the central provinces, extend over 16,000 sq. m.; the chief products are iron, which is distributed over nearly all the country, but the best is found in the læn Upsala; the annual produce of all the mines is about 70,000 tons of bar iron. The richest copper mines are at Fahlun; the annual produce in all is about 1,000 tons. Gold is not now sought for, and silver is procured only to a small extent. The other mineral products are cobalt, lime, coal of inferior quality, & porphyry. Manufs. are chiefly confined to articles of domestic use; the principal are woollens, sugar, tobacco, paper, linens, cotton (in small quantity); tanning is an important branch of industry. Ship-building is carried on to some extent in the ports of the Baltic. Distilling & brewing are extensively prosecuted. The internal commerce of Sweden is considerable, & Swedish vessels visit most of the Atlantic ports of America. & the Mediterranean. Government is a constitutional monarchy. The established religion is Lutheran, but all sects are tolerated. Education is generally diffused, and well conducted in gymnasia, high, and burgher schools. There are universities at Upsala & Lund. Army 1853, 144,013 men. Navy, 10 ships of the line, 8 frigates, 8 brigs, 136 small vessels, & 5 steamers; sailors, 30,000. [See Europe.] In 1397, by the treaty of Calmar, the crown of Sweden was united to those of Denmark and Norway by Margaret of Denmark. The Swedes recovered their independence under Gustavus Vasa in 1521. The House of Vasa ascended the throne in 1523, & gave to Sweden the celebrated Gustavus Adolphus. It was succeeded by the House of Deux-Pontes, which furnished the famous Charles XII., to this succeeded the Houses of Hesse-Cassel, & Holstein-Gottorp. In 1810, Marshal Bernadotte was chosen crown prince, & ascended the throne as Charles-John XIV. in 1818. Norway was annexed to Sweden in 1814, retaining its own laws. [Norway.]

Switzerland belongs to the region of the Central Alps, extending between Mont Blanc in Savoy & the Gross Glockner in the Tyrol. The immense mass of Mount St. Gothard forms the centre or nucleus of a system of mountains covered with perpetual snow & glaciers, the peaks of which are from 9,000 to 14,000 feet above the level of the sea. The Alps cover all the central, S., & S.E. portion of the country, & occupy more than one-half of its superfices. [Alps.] The Jura mountains extend along the N.W. borders, culminating points, the Dôle and Mont Tendre [Jura], & between these is an undulating plain, or table land, 135 m. in length, from the Lake of Geneva in the S.W., to the Lâke of Constance in the N.E. Its extreme breadth is 50 m. Next the Alps it is 2,000 feet above the sea, sloping toward the Jura, where it is 1,350 feet. It has numerous valleys, some of which are of considerable extent. Among its mountains & hills are the Jorat in the Valais, the Albis between Zug & Zurich, the Allman in the E. of Zurich, & the Hauenstein between Basle & Soleure.

The high Alps form vast reservoirs, whence issue thousands of fertilizing torrents. The chief rivs. flow by the Rhine to the N. Sea, by the Rhone to the Mediterranean, by the Ticino to the Po & the Adriatic, & by the Inn to the Danube & Black Sea. The other principal rivers are the Thur & the Aar, affls. of the Rhine, the Emmen & the Limmat, affls. of the Aar. No country in Europe, except Scandinavia, has, in proportion to its size, so many lakes as Switzerland. Those of the Alpine regions occupy the lower parts of the valleys. They vary in depth from 500 to 1,900 ft., and are situated at an elevation of from 1,200 to 1,800 feet above the sea; the chief of these are Lake Leman, or the Lake of Geneva; Brienz, Thun, Waldstätten, or Lucerne; Zug, Wallenstatt, Zurich, Constance, or the Boden See; & on the S. of the Alps, Lugano, & Maggiore. Most of these are traversed by steamboats. The table land contains Lakes Morat, Sempach, Baldeck, Halwyl, Greiffensee, & Pfeffikon. In the Jura are the lakes of Neuchâtel, & Bienne, the former traversed by steam-boats. The climate of Switzerland, owing to its elevation, & other causes, is much more severe than might be expected from its position, nearly in mid-distance between the equator & the N. pole. It presents the greatest extremes, and the most violent contrasts. In Geneva, at an elevation of 1,230 feet, the mean pressure of the barometer is 27 inches; the thermometer ranges from 34° to 66° Fahr., & the average ann. amount of rain is 29 inches. On Mount St. Bernard, barom. 21 in., therm. 18° to 43° Fahr., and amount of rain 65 in. The elev. of the lower limit of snow in the mountains is 8,900 feet. On the table land, & in the lower mountains, snow falls in greater abundance than in other countries of the same lat. in Europe. On St. Gothard snow falls at least once a month in summer. The large lakes are seldom frozen. In the upper valleys of the Jura, winter lasts six months: it is longer in those of the Alps. S.W. winds, which are frequent, usually bring rain; the N. E. wind, which blows on the table land in spring, is cold & dry. The warm S. wind greatly favors the climate of the canton Ticino; under the name of Föhn, the sirocco of the Alps, it blows with extreme violence, & causes great damage on the lakes. At an elevation of from 1,000 to 1,600 feet, the climate is pure & salubrious; but it is unhealthy in many of the deep & narrow valleys. Vegetation corresponds with the extremes of climate. In the Valais, the fig and grape ripen at the foot of ice-clad mountains, while near their summits the rhododendron & the lichen grow at the limit of the snow line. The corn raised in Switzerland is not nearly sufficient for the supply of its pop.; the most productive cantons are those of the N. & W. Here the vine ripens at an elevation of 1,900, & in some places at 2,100 feet above the sea. It is cultivated on the slopes of the Jura, & in the valleys of the Rhine, Rhone, Reuss, Limmat, & Thur. Buckwheat ripens at an elevation of 2,200, & with a S. exposure at 3,000 feet; barley, rye, potatoes, and pot herbs at 4,000 feet. Flax & hemp are extensively grown; irrigation is judiciously managed; & in general, agriculture is making considerable progress. The slopes of the Jura, & of the Alps, & the high regions of the table land, are covered with valuable timber trees, the oak, beech, larch, & birch. The pine grows to an elevation of 6,700 feet, shrubs to 7,400. The great wealth of Switzerland consists in its rich & excellent pastures, which in summer support vast numbers of cattle; the finest breeds are those of the Simmenthal, Gessenay, Gruyere, Zug, & Schwytz. There were in 1844, 853,000 horned cattle, about one-fourth of which were milch cows; 105,000 horses, 469,000 sheep, 347,000 goats, & 318,000 swine. The silk worm is reared in the valleys S. of the Alps, & of late also in the N. The forests abound in game. the lammergeyer inhabits the highest mountains, and the chamois is hunted in the Valais and in the Oberland. Fish of excellent quality is abundant in the lakes & the rivers. Iron is found in the mountains generally, but chiefly in the Jura; there are mines of lead, & zinc in the Grisons. Turf is abundant in the marshy dists., and coal is found on the table land. The principal salt springs are at Bex, in the valley of the Rhone. Switzerland contains upwards of 500 mineral springs, 18 bath establishments of the first, & 186 of the second class. The cultivation of the vine is an important branch of industry in the S.W. cantons, & wine is exported. Kirschwasser, cider, and perry are made. Cheese is a valuable product; it is made chiefly in Gessenay, the Simmenthal, & the Emmenthal; that called Gruyere is much esteemed and extensively exported.

Switzerland has made rapid progress in manuf. industry. The E. & N.E. cantons manufacture cotton goods, the chief seats of which are Appenzell and St. Gall. Silks are woven in Zurich & Basle, & linens at Bern. Neuchâtel has superior printing establishments. Watches, jewellery, & musical boxes, are the principal manufs. of the W. cantons; here 250,000 watches are made every year. The number of individuals employed in the different branches of industry in 1846, were—Silks, 40,000; cottons, 30,000; watches & jewellery, 30,000; woollens, paper, leather, ironwares, &c., 40,000; in all, 200,000. In winter the pop. of the Alps inhabit villages scattered over the lower valleys. In May, the cattle are led to the lower pastures; in July, they ascend to regions 6,000 feet above the sea; and about the 10th August, they pasture on the highest mountains, whence they descend to the valleys about the 10th October.

The principal races inhabiting Switzerland, are the Teutonic & the Celtic. The German language is spoken in a variety of patois, by 1,670,000 of the pop. in the N. & E. French is spoken in the Jura, & on the tableland W. of the lakes of Bienne & Morat, and of the river Sarine, in part of the Valais, & the Alps in its vicinity, by about 474,000 Swiss. South of the Alps, Italian is the language of 133,500 Swiss; the Romanche is spoken in the Engadine, & in the valleys of the Rhine, by about 42,500 of the pop. The inhabitants of the Alps are mostly Roman Catholics. In the Jura, & on the table land, Protestants are most numerous. In 1850, there were 1,417,754 Protestants, & 977,849 Roman Catholics. Switzerland has three universities, at Basel, Bern, & Zurich. Public instruction is widely disseminated, & in the Protestant cantons Sunday and infant schools are on the increase. In 1844 there were in all 5,500 primary schools, attended by 35,000 pupils, or the 7th part of the pop. The Swiss Confed. is composed of 22 cantons, forming 25 independent states, united in a perpetual league. The central & W. part was called Helvetia, by the Romans, & the E. part, or the Grisons, Rhætia. The Confed. was founded 1st Jan. 1308, by the 3 cantons, Uri, Schwytz, & Unterwalden. In 1353, it numbered 8 cantons; and in 1353, it was composed of 13 cantons. This old Confederation of 13 cantons, was increased by the adherence of several subject territories, & existed till 1798, when it was replaced by the Helvetic Republic, which lasted 4 years. In 1803, Napoleon organized a new Confed., composed of 19 cantons, by the addition of St. Gall, the Grisons, Argovia, Thurgovia, Tessin, & Vaud. This Confed. was modified in 1815; the number of cantons was increased to 22 by the admission of Valais, Neuchâtel, & Geneva. The federal government was composed of a diet, & of a Vorort, or federal directory. The general diet met every second year, alternately in Zurich, Bern, & Lucerne. By the new constitution of 1848, the federal assembly is composed of two divisions, a national council & a senate, & Bern was chosen as the federal city. Every pa. supports its own poor. Every Swiss is a soldier, and each canton contributes a fixed contingent when called on. In 1851 the armed force consisted of 108,000 men. Public rev. 1853, 12,450,000 fr.; expenses, 11,850,855 fr. Switzerland has no public debt.

SWOJANOW, a town of Bohemia, circ. & 37 m. S.E. Chrudim. Pop. 600.

SWORDS, a market town & parish of Ireland, co. & 8 m. N.N.E. Dublin, on the Swords river, 5 m. from the Irish sea. Area, 9,675 ac. Pop. 3,638; do. of town 1,788. Its principal buildings, a mod. Gothic church, a ruined abbey, & pillar tower, 73 feet in height, are clustered together on rising ground in the midst of a low plain. It has barracks & an endowed school. The town is in decay, but was formerly of importance. Here the first Irish army of "the Pale" assembled in 1641, preparatory to the commencement of the civil war in Ireland.

SYDNEY, the cap. city of the British colony New South Wales, E. Australia, co. Cumberland, on the S. shore of Port-Jackson. Lat. of Fort Macquarie 33° 51′ 7″ S., lon. 151° 14′ E. Mean temp. of year 66° .8; winter 55° .5; summer 74° Fahr. Pop. 1846, 38,358; 1854, 50,000. It occupies two hilly necks of land bounding its harbor, & the intervening level land, extending for 2 miles inland; and it covers an area of about 2,000 acres. Its older parts is irregularly laid out; but many handsome new streets have been built, & George Street, the princip., is a fine thoroughfare. Houses mostly of one story in height, roofed with bark; many are built of stone and surrounded with gardens; and the town is well paved, lighted with gas, supplied with water by a tunnelled aqueduct nearly 2¼ m. in length, & defended by several forts, one of which covers ¼ an acre of ground. The government house, a Gothic edifice, is on the E. peninsula; other princip. edifices are two Protestant churches, a handsome Roman Catholic cathedral, Sydney college, the Australian subscription library, barracks, post-office, convict & military hospitals, the court-house, custom-house, theatre, observatory, & the colonial offices situated in Hyde Park, a public promenade, of about 56 acres, on the E. side of the town, in which is also a monument to Allan Cuningham. The shores of the harbor are finely indented, & covered with villas & gardens; on its E. side are some elegant terraces; and W. of the town are extensive public grounds, & many new edifices. Sydney has some superior schools, the chief being the Australian & Sydney colleges, several good private academies, a museum, a botanic garden, Australian club, steam-works, mills, numerous joint-stock associations, newspaper offices, 4 banks, and a bank for savings. In 1851, the value of imports (mostly from England) amounted to 1,563,931*l.*; and that of exports to 1,796,912*l.* The quantity of wool exported was 15,268,493 pounds, valued at 828,562*l.*; gold bullion 144,120 oz., valued at 468,336*l.*; tallow, 84,464 cwt., valued at 114,168*l.*; whale oil, 601 tons, valued at 25,877*l.* The principal other articles, were neat cattle, hides, bones, soap, cedar & other woods. In 1852, the exports of gold amounted to 856,188 oz., valued at 2,966,658*l.*; equal to $14,833,290. Sydney city is divided into 6 wards, & governed by a mayor, 6 aldermen, & 24 councillors. It has risen into importance wholly within the present century.

SYDNEY, county, Nova Scotia, N.E. part of the province. Area, 590 sq. m. Surface undulating; soil extremely fertile. Drained by Tracadie and Pomket rivers, & South & rivers, entering Antigonish harbor. It has valuable cod, mackerel, & herring fisheries. Capital, Antigonish. There were in the county in 1851, neat cattle 9,388; sheep, 20,827; swine, 2,771; horses, 1,628; wheat, 34,304 bush. produced; Indian corn, 1,837; buckwheat, 5,897; barley, 9,578; oats. 142,949; potatoes, 52,958; peas, 763;—26 grist m., 45 saw m., 10 tanneries, 5 woollen fac.,—27 churches; 46 schools, 1,348 scholars. Pop. 13,467.

SYMI, Syme, an island off the W. coast of Asia Minor, at the entrance of the Gulf of Symi, 15 m. N. W. Rhodes. Lat. 36° 30′ N., lon. 27° 54′ E. Length & breadth about 6 m. each. Estimated pop. 7,000. Outline very irregular, & the island is a rocky mass of limestone rising to 1,000 feet above the sea. Soil mostly barren, but every available patch of ground is assiduously cultivated, & the inhabitants are distinguished for industry & commercial enterprise. Symi exports large quantities of sponge & wood from the shores of its gulf. It has 3 harbors, and a small but thriving town of same name on its N. side, with about 1,000 inhabitants, & some remains of antiquity. Symi is subordinate to the pasha of Rhodes, who derives from it an annual revenue of 270*l*.—The Gulf of Symi (anc. Sinus Doridis), is an inlet of the Mediterranean, on the S.W. coast of Asia Minor, bounded by two long promontories, the N.W. of which (Triopium Promont.), separates it from the Gulf of Kos. Depth inland, & breadth at entrance about 27 m. each. On its E. side are three subordinate bays (the anc. Thymnias, Schœnus & Bubassius). Shores very picturesque, & on them are various Cyclopean & other remains. At its entrance is the island of Symi.

SYMINGTON, two pas. of Scotland.—I. co. Ayr, 6 m. S.E. Irvine. Area, about 4,000 ac, Pop. 902.—II. co. Lanark, 33 m. S.E. Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railroad, 7 m. S.S.E. Carstairs junction. Pop. 536; of whom 213 are in the village.

SYRA (Syros), an island, Grecian archipelago, among the Cyclades, 20 m. N. W. Paros. Area about 55 sq. m. Estimated pop. 29,972. Surface mountainous, & near its N. extremity is a peak rising to 4,000 ft. above the sea. Many parts of the island are fertile, producing corn, wine, silk, figs, & cotton. It forms, with the islands Zea, Mycone, Thurmia, Serpho, Siphanto, Kimolos, Milo, & Sikinos, a gov. of Greece.—Syra, or Hermopolis, the cap., is a marit. town on the E. shore. Pop. 14,000. It is built around its harbor, at the foot of a conical-shaped hill, which formed the site of the older town. Since the Greek revolution many new streets & houses have been laid out; and Syra has attained a rank for commercial importance in Greece next to Athens. It is the residence of consuls of most European states, & is a principal station of the Mediterranean steamers going to and from Constantinople. In 1841, 1,050 vessels, mostly Greek, Turkish, British, Austrian, & Ionian, aggregate burden 104,880 tons, entered its port.

SYRACUSE, city & capital of Onondaga co., N. Y., 131 W. by N. Albany, 338 W. Situated on the E. side of Onondaga lake, on the Great Central railroad, at the divergence of the Syracuse & Oswego r. r., and on the Erie canal at the junction of the Oswego canal. Incorporated a village in 1825 & a city in 1848. Contains a court house, city hall, an academy, 8 banks, aggregate cap., $1,145,000, 25 churches,—Baptist, Episcopal, Methodist, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, and Unitarian,—several extensive flouring mills & machine shops, 3 iron foundries, the most extensive salt manufactories in the United States, 10 printing offices issuing 4 daily, 9 weekly, 1 semi-weekly, 1 monthly, and 2 monthly publications. Capital employed in manufactures, 1850, $1,677,580; value of manufactured articles, $3,531,636. Pop. 1840, 6,500; in 1850, within the enlarged limits which comprehend the former village of Salina, 22,271; and in 1854, 25,000. The entire number of salt works in Syracuse and vicinity, in 1850, was 192, employing a capital of $819,950, and manufactured 1,031,900 bbls. of salt. The annual products of salt is about 4,000,000 bushels, & the amount inspected for the month of August, 1853, at all the Onondaga springs, was 842,706 bushels, viz., at Salina, 438,954; Syracuse, 190,814; Liverpool, 119,262; Geddes, 84,646. The salt springs were known to the aboriginal inhabitants, who communicated their knowledge to the white settlers. One of the latter about 50 years since, with an Indian guide in a canoe, descended the Onondaga creek, & by the lake approached the spring on Mud creek. Salt water was at that time obtained by lowering to the bottom, four or five ft. below the surface of the fresh water of the lake, an iron vessel; which filling instantly with the heavier fluid, was then drawn up. In this way, by boiling the brine, a small quantity of brownish-colored & very impure salt was obtained. With the settlement of the country the vicinity was explored & many other sources of brine discovered. Wells were then sunk, generally to the depth of 18 feet. There was a great difference in the strength of water which they afforded, varying with seasons, and diminishing in draught nearly one-third. With the introduction of hydraulic machinery for pumping in 1822, a more rapid influx of brine was produced, & a new era in the manufacture. A difference of opinion prevails as to the source of the brine. The general opinion is, that beds of rock salt exist here as at other salt springs. Borings have been made at several points; in one instance to the depth of 250 feet, without finding fossil salt. But the very important fact was elicited, that the strength of the brine increased with the depth of the well. The salt beds in Cheshire, England, were discovered about 160 years since, in boring for coal at about 125 feet below the surface; & since have been penetrated to twice that depth. But the salt mines of Wilielska, near Cravocia, in Poland, are worked at the depth of 750 feet; & those at Eperies at 950 feet. The failure therefore to discover salt beds here should not discourage further efforts. Should beds of rock salt be discovered & rendered accessible, this source of wealth must be greatly enlarged. The salt beds near Norwich, England, produce more than 150,000 tons annually—nearly three times as much as the annual products of the Onondaga springs. The salt at Salina is manufactured by evaporation by the sun, or artificially. By the slower process of the former, the coarse salt is made, & the fine by the rapid evaporation produced by fire. The modus operandi of the manufacture of coarse salt, is in the following manner. The brine is conducted to each of the vats by a succession of bored logs. The vats are about 16 feet in length, by 7 in width, & are arranged in continuous rows. Between the rows, alleys run sufficiently wide to admit the passage of a horse & cart. On each side & parallel with the vats, there is a line of light roofs which can be shoved off & on at pleasure, to permit the rays of the sun to act upon the waters or to avert the rain. As the salt precipitates, it assumes the form of beautiful crystals; the action of shovelling the salt into carts destroys the crystals, when of course the elegance of form vanishes. These vats with their sheds cover enough ground in the vicinity to make several moderate sized farms. The fine salt requires more skill in the manufac. For this purpose rough wooden structures are erected about 70 feet in length, & 25 feet in breadth. The oven extends nearly the entire length of the building, & on top of it are the boilers, arranged in two parallel rows, generally numbering from 15 to 25 boilers in each row, which are supplied with the brine by a cylindrical hollow log with faucets. This log leads from a reservoir in the rear of the building, which in its turn is filled by tubular logs, connecting with the pump-house, which in some cases is a mile or more distant. There are in the whole many miles of aqueduct logs, which are generally constructed of pine. On entering one of these works at night the view is interesting. Clouds of vapor are continually ascending from the numerous boilers, & partially obscuring the forms of the attendants. Huge piles of salt of snowy whiteness in the bins each side of the building are beheld lying in contact with the rough, dingy walls, while the fire from the furnace, shedding a partial light over the whole, renders it a striking scene. There are, however, various modes of applying artificial heat in the manufacture of salt, other than that employed in the ordinary process of boiling in kettles. In one arrangement, tubes heated by steam pass through a vat or vats of considerable extent, the brine having been previously freed from its insoluble impurities, by being allowed to remain for some time in the cistern, or by the addition of lime. This furnishes salt in fine cubic crystals of great purity, especially in those parts of the vats which are at some distance from the immediate source of heat. The springs from which the works are supplied are pierced through the alluvial & terminate on gravel. The strength of the brine is graduated on the following standard: fresh water being placed at 0°, & water perfectly saturated with salt at 100°. According to this, the "old springs" stands at 50°, and the "new" at 70°. In each cubic foot of water there is about 2¼ ounces of "bitterns," or impure deposit composed of lime, iron, &c. Fourteen pounds of salt are manufactured from a cubic foot of the water from the strongest spring. The salt-works are quite a source of revenue to the state, as it receives 2 mills a bushel for pumping the water, & 6 cents duty on the salt made. The amount annually manufac. is about 4,000,000 of bushels; & the number of men employed in Geddes, Liverpool, Salina, & Syracuse, about 3,000.

SYRACUSE, p-v., Kosciusco co., Ia., 141 N. by E. Indianapolis, 596 W.

SYRACUSE (Ital. Siragosa, anc. Syracusa), a fortified city of Sicily, on its E. coast, cap. prov., in modern times occupying only the site of the original & smallest quarter of the famous city of antiquity,—viz., the island of Ortygia, between the sea & the great harbor, 30 m. S.S.E. Catania. Lat. of light-house 37° 3′ N., lon. 15° 17′ 5′ E. Pop., which in antiquity was said to have amounted to 200,000, is now only 14,000. The cathedral, formerly the temple of Minerva, is of Doric architecture, & has been a place of worship continuously for 2,500 years. The church of St. Marcian claims to have been the earliest in Europe for Christian worship. The catacombs and the latomiæ, or ancient prisons, in the quarries from which the materials of Syracuse were taken; the "ear of Dionysius;" the famous fountain of Arethusa, now used for a washing-trough; the remains of the strong fortress Hexapylon, of a temple of Diana, & Roman amphitheatre, some baths, walls, gates, & the palace of sixty beds, constructed by Agathocles,are the chief vestiges of antiquity. The middle age citadel of Maniaces, barracks, a college, royal academy, museum of antiquities, & public library, with numerous churches, may be chiefly noticed as belonging to the modern city. The noble harbor is admirably adapted for a commercial emporium; but its trade is now nearly confined to a few exports of salt, wine, oil, & fish. Syracuse was founded B.C. 736 by a colony from Corinth, governed alternately as a republic or under kings; unsuccessfully besieged by the Athenians B.C. 414, and by the Carthaginians,—taken by the Romans B.C. 200; and after a lengthened siege in 878, by the Saracens, who partially destroyed it, but it was chiefly ruined by the earthquake of 1693. It was the residence at different periods of Plato, Simonides, Zeno, & Cicero, the place where Hicetas first propounded the true revolution of the earth, and the birthplace of the poets Theocritus and Moschus, and the philosopher Archimedes, who lost his life at the capture of the city by the Romans.

SYRESHAM, a pa. of Engl., co. Northampton, 5 m. N.E. Brackley. Area 4,060 ac. Pop. 1,027.

SYRIA (with PALESTINE), a large division of Asiatic Turkey, mostly between lat. 31° & 37° N. & lon. 34° 30′ & 40 E.; bounded N. by the Amanian mountains, E. by the Euphrates & the Arabian desert, S. by Arabia Petræa, & W. by the Mediterranean Sea. Estimated area 50,000 sq. m. Pop. about 1,865,000, mostly Mohammedans, but comprising about 345,000 Greek Christians, 260,000 Maronites & Roman Catholics, 175,000 Jews, 48,000 Druses, & 17,000 Metualis and Yezidis. The W., or coast portion, is mountainous; the E. chiefly an elevated plain. The mountain ranges proceed mostly N. to S.; the Alma-Dagh (anc. Mons Amanus), & Mount Lebanon (anc. Libanus), terminate on the coast in bold headlands, as do several spurs of Anti-Libanus, which range in Palestine, enclosing the fertile valley Cœle-Syria. The mountains are rugged, consisting of limestone overlying grauwacke slate, and other silurian rocks, which appear in the summits of Libanus; but at their feet are many fertile tracts, the basins of small rivers; and here are several plains of high fertility, as those of Haouran in the E., Antioch & Aleppo in the N., Esdraleon & Sharon in the S. In the S. & E. granite, gneiss, & dolomite mntns. skirt the volcanic region of the Dead Sea, which is entered by the river Jordan; besides which, the chief rivers are the Aasy, or Orontes, and the Bekaa, both entering the Mediterranean. After the Dead Sea, the principal lakes are those of Tiberias, or Gennasereth, & Hulaah in the valley of the Jordan; some smaller ones exist near Damascus & Antioch. The surface being very uneven, the climate & products vary greatly within short distances. Along the coasts the heat is great, & the orange, banana, and date flourish, while the summits of the mountains are seen covered with snow. In the N., and on the elevated plain E. of the mountains, the climate is colder but at Aleppo frosts are seldom severe, and snow rarely lies on the ground for more than a day at a time. The corn is nearly ripe early in May; and from June to September summer heats prevail, unbroken by any rain, though tempered in the W. by sea breezes. The samiel, a wind like the simoom of the desert, sometimes occurs at this season, and shocks of earthquakes are frequent. Heavy rains occur in spring & autumn, & the trees frequently retain their foliage till the beginning of December. Syria comprises a large extent of very productive soil. What is called the "desert" is not a sandy waste, but a region destitute of settled inhabs. and villages, yet with a surface of fine black mould, covered with rank grass and herbs, affording cover for numerous wild animals, and pasturage for many flocks and herds, fed there by wandering Bedouins. It is stated that the country is capable of producing sufficient to maintain ten times its present pop.; yet such is the rude method of agriculture, the depressed condition and insecurity of the rural pop., and the uncertainty of taxation & government regulations, that in bad years corn must frequently be imported from Egypt and elsewhere. Wheat, barley, maize, millet, lentils, and sesamum, are raised in the plains, principally in the Haouran, which has always been considered the granary of Syria. Cotton and the mulberry flourish on the coast, and silk is produced on the slopes of Lebanon. The cotton annually raised in the S. is estimated to amount in value to 350,000*l.*; and about 1,700 cantars of silk, 10,700 do. of tobacco, from 8,000 to 10,000 do. of gall nuts, & 300 do. of madder roots are annually produced. Other chief products are sheeps' wool, olive oil, sugar, indigo, scammony, & other gums, safflower, dates, timber, hides, and skins. Sheep and other live stock form, as in antiquity, a chief part of the wealth of the inhabs.; and all merchandize being conveyed on the backs of animals, it is estimated that the transit trade employs 80,000 beasts, and about 30,000 drivers. About 3,500 okes of sponge fished on the coast are sent to the ports of the Mediterranean annually; other fisheries are comparatively unimportant, as is mining industry. Damascus has about 4,000 looms engaged in the manuf. of silks, and the same manuf. is carried on to a considerable extent in Aleppo. Cotton, and some woollen fabrics, shawls, gold and silver thread stuffs, are also woven there and elsewhere, & the total produce of the looms of Aleppo is estimated at 250,000*l.* in annual value. Glass, earthenwares, leather, & soap, are made in the above and other towns, and in Palestine great numbers of religious ornaments are manufactured for sale. Commerce is greatly impeded by the want of roads, those that exist being mere mule or camel tracts; also by the deficiency of good harbors. But as Syria is on the high route from Bagdad, Mosul, and Erzeroum, to Mecca, caravans annually traverse it, bringing galls, indigo, Mocha coffee, skins, Cashmere shawls, & other Indian manufs., also the products of Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, and Persia, which are exchanged here for European manufs., & cochineal. In 1835, the total value of the exports by sea was estimated at 307,337*l.* The value of the imports in the same year was estimated at 506,210*l.* In 1847, the imports from Great Britain comprised 14,735,054 yds. of cotton fabrics, worth 317,915*l.*; cotton twist to the value of 72,881*l.*; the total value of British and Irish produce imported being 415,292*l.* Latakia, Tripoli, Beyrout, Kisarieh, & Jaffa, are the principal seaport towns. The trade of Syria is chiefly conducted by Christians, Jews, or Armenians. The Mohammedans are most numerous in the secondary towns, and in the rural districts. The Druses are an interesting and peculiar tribe amongst them, chiefly agricultural, but partly occupied in domestic weaving and other manufs., and inhabiting a part of Mount Lebanon, where they live under an emir, or prince, of their own race. The Maronites are also a peculiar people, dwelling in their vicinity, and having a patriarch, twelve bishops, and numerous convents. The Metualis are Mohammedans of the Persian or Shiah sect; and the Yezidis, and some other tribes, are adherents of idolatrous, or heretical creeds. Syria is divided into the pashalics of Aleppo, Damascus, Tripoli, and Acre; chief cities and towns are of same names, with Antioch, Hamah, Homs, Jerusalem, Nablous, Sichem, Saida, and Gaza. The government is conducted in the same corrupt and extortionate manner as in the other provs. of Turkey. Public rev., derived from taxation of every kind, is estimated at 440,000*l.* [PALESTINE.]

TABARIA, TIBERIAS, or TUBARIYEH, a town of Palestine, pash. & 27 m. E.S.E. Acre, on the W. shore of the lake of Tiberias. It is seated on a narrow strip of undulating land, between the lake & a mntn. knot connected with Mount Tabor (or Tubar); and it is enclosed landward by a strong wall flanked with towers. Previously to a disastrous earthquake in 1837, it had about 2,000 inhabitants; when visited soon afterwards by Messrs. Robinson and Smith, it was found partially ruined, filthy, & miserable. Principal edifice, a castle at its N.W. extremity. Near it are some hot baths; adjacent to which is a palace, erected in 1833 by Ibrahim Pasha, during the Egyptian occupation of Syria.

TABARI, TIBERIAS, or GENNESARETH (LAKE or SEA OF), (Scripture Chinnereth), a famous lake of Palestine, forming a part of its E. boundary, between lat. 32° 45′ & 32° 56′ N. & in lon. 35° 35′ E. Shape somewhat oval. Length 14 m.; greatest breadth 8 m.; depression below the Mediterranean 755 feet. It is traversed throughout from N. to S. by the river Jordan. Shores steep, but not precipitous; and this lake has neither the imposing scenery which characterizes the Dead Sea, nor any remarkable picturesque beauty. But its surface & environs derive imperishable interest from being the scenes of numerous miracles recorded in the life of the founder of Christianity; and around it were anciently the cities of Tiberias, Magdala, Capernaum, Chorazin, and Bethsaida, all of which, except Tiberias, have wholly disappeared. Its vicinity presents numerous traces of volcanic action; and it waters are liable to be affected by sudden tempests, one of which is recorded in Holy Writ.
